The thoughtful bill that you and Chairman Oxley have offered is the clearest example of the common ground I see. You have called for a public regulatory organization to police the audit profession that closely resembles the President's proposal, as does your call for real-time disclosure of critical events and insider sales. You also would press for fuller disclosure beyond GAAP's limits, such as off-balance sheet items and related-party transactions.

I think we will find common ground on where we will need legislation and where new SEC regulations will suffice. The 1933 and 1934 Acts provide the SEC with tremendous power and flexibility to implement the President's reforms, especially given the substantial consensus between his proposals and the major bills in Congress. And we may find there are specific areas – the need for a self-regulating organization to police the auditing profession – where legislation may be a useful complement to regulatory action.

One area where the SEC will definitely need you to pass legislation is in barring wrongdoers from positions of corporate trust. Under current law, the SEC must first go to court to bar a director or officer guilty of misconduct from serving in such a position again in a public company. The President would urge you to empower the SEC to do so through administrative proceedings (preserving a right of appeal to the courts) – a power much like bank regulators have for bank executives.

I believe that we will resolve even on one of the seemingly most contentious issues – outside auditor's cross-selling other services. Your bill, which most closely parallels the President's plan, would go a little farther than the President would wish. Further inquiry may narrow the distance between us.

Thank you.

Statement of
Debra D. Stouffer Program Manager, Federal Enterprise Architecture Program and
Deputy Chief Information Officer for IT Reform,
U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development

before the

Subcommittee on Government Management, Information, and Technology Committee on Government Reform
House of Representatives

March 21, 2002

REV_00142098

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Subcommittee. On behalf of Secretary Mel Martinez, I thank you for the opportunity to discuss the Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) ongoing initiative to improve the effectiveness and cost efficiency of Departmental programs through the development and deployment of an enterprise-wide architecture. I will limit my remarks to enterprise architecture at HUD, and the need for continued Congressional and OMB support for enterprise architecture development. I will leave it to Mark Forman, Associate Director for Information Technology and E-Government with the Office of Management and Budget, to discuss efforts to develop a Federal Enterprise Architecture.

I serve as HUD's Deputy Chief Information Officer (CIO) for Information Technology (IT) Reform, and I Co-chair the Federal CIO Council's Committee on Best Practices. In early February 2002, I accepted a temporary detail as Program Manager for the Federal Enterprise Architecture Program.

ENTERPRISE ARCHITECTURE AT HUD. Let me first discuss HUD's approach to enterprise architecture. At one time, HUD's IT environment consisted of more than 200 stovepipe systems and databases conceived and developed independent of each other. Many systems carried out redundant processes, relied on obsolete technology, contained incompatible data and were incapable of supporting enterprise-wide decision making. HUD completed initial development of an Enterprise Architecture Management Process, a baseline Architecture, and a strategic Target Architecture for Grants and Financial business functions in January 2001. Through the current leadership at HUD, the department continues the process set forth by previous administrations toward achieving a federal enterprise architecture.

The enterprise architecture development process began with a series of in-depth workshops with key program and IT officials. These sessions clarified HUD business functions and processes, and the applications and technologies in use across the enterprise. HUD also developed a dynamic, web-based tool to track and analyze the layers of its enterprise architecture, and the relationships between those layers. This Enterprise Architecture Management System (EAMS) now serves as the repository for the information that defines HUD's baseline architecture and is facilitating the development of a target architecture. The data in EAMS is helping to identify promising opportunities where collaboration, data sharing, and process simplification can lead to improved productivity, efficiency and effectiveness in service delivery. Because of HUD's success, EAMS is currently being used or evaluated by approximately ten other Federal organizations.

HUD's Enterprise Architecture is beginning to drive its IT Capital Planning and Investment Management Process. The selection of initiatives to be included in the Department's IT portfolio is based upon thorough business cases that include several architecture-related considerations, including:

- Is the proposed initiative an Enterprise Solution that moves us closer to our near-and long-term target environments?

- Is the proposed initiative designed to allow data to be shared across the organization?
- Will the initiative consolidate or eliminate redundant systems and infrastructure?
- Does the proposed initiative reuse existing components and infrastructure?
- Does the hardware and software to be used comply with existing and target agency standards?

As a result of HUD's enterprise-wide approach to IT investment management, the Department is now pursuing several cross-program, enterprise-wide, or cross-government initiatives. For example, Native EDGE is cross-government office and internet portal led by HUD, with 17 partnering agencies. It includes a call center and resource library for Native American small businesses and community development practitioners. The site also contains a publications clearinghouse, business partner links, and a technical assistance information center.

A second example is HUD's Empowerment Zone / Enterprise Community Software. This suite of software provides a full range of services to HUD business partners, communities, and the public from the program selection phase to post-award performance reporting. It permits application, selection and performance evaluation for the Empowerment Zone program on-line.

HUD AND E-GOVERNMENT. Let me now discuss HUD's leadership in the area of E-Government. HUD is a leader in the development of E-Government initiatives and continues to be recognized through government and industry's most prestigious awards.

Two examples of HUD E-Government success stories include FHA Connection and the capability to conduct on-line loan auctions. FHA Connection is the application developed by HUD to support electronic commerce between FHA and the community of approved FHA lenders and service providers. Using a single FHA assigned user-id, a business partner can submit official FHA business transactions to a variety of FHA automated systems. In the area of FHA single-family loan origination alone, more than 90 percent of the business transactions processed by HUD's underwriting system come from business partners using the FHA Connection. There are currently 9,000 lenders and 100,000 users of the system.

For HUD's third successful E-Government example, last April 2001, HUD conducted its first web-based loan sale. The $111 million auction was the largest Internet loan sale to date by the U.S. Government. The auctioned loans were originated under the Department's Section 312 Loan Program, which provided funds for the rehabilitation of homes in distressed neighborhoods at below-market rates. The marketing, investor due diligence, and bidding were all conducted on-line. By empowering bidders through an advanced loan trading system, HUD increased bidder interest in the sale, and maximized its sale proceeds.

Because of its leadership in the areas of enterprise architecture and E-Government, HUD is a partnering agency on 15 of the President's E-Government initiatives. In fact, HUD staff worked with OMB and representatives from across the Government to finalize the business cases for several of the 24 E-Government initiatives.

SECURITY. With regards to the security of its IT investments, HUD is also implementing a methodology to comprehensively assess the current HUD and security landscape through its enterprise architecture. With respect to security and privacy, HUD's methodology will make no distinction between those systems that will be used for E-Government initiatives and those that will not. The methodology will guide the Department in identifying sensitive information being collected, and in identifying current agency processes and policies for handling sensitive data throughout the lifecycle. HUD will also begin assessing security measures for applications and technology associated with most-sensitive personal information. In addition, HUD will provide a long-term strategic approach to ensure that the target architecture appropriately addresses security and privacy.

BUDGETARY ISSUES. Finally, let me comment on how the Federal budget process can support the continued development of enterprise architectures. It is true that agencies are making mixed progress in terms of enterprise architecture. Based on my experience at HUD and as Co-Chair of the Best Practices Committee, I believe that it is critical that OMB and Congress continue to place pressure on agencies to make progress in this area. It is also helpful that OMB includes, in agency passback language, specific allocations of funding for enterprise architecture development. Establishing an enterprise architecture requires participation from all agency organizations. Providing, verifying, updating and analyzing the enormous amount of information takes a significant amount of time and requires a widespread, multi-disciplined effort. Continued improvement requires perseverance and the continued support of critical oversight organizations such as Congress and OMB.

Mr. Chairman, thank you for the opportunity to share my thoughts with you today. I would be happy to answer any questions you may have.

Subject: Resend: Immigration Enforcement Measures

Dear All,

Commenting on the INS snafu last week, the President said, "So we've got to reform the INS and we've got to push hard to do so. This is an interesting wake-up call for those who run the INS. We are modernizing our system, John, and it needs to be modernized, so we know who's coming in and who's going out and why they're here."

Responding to the President's charge, the Department today is submitting for OMB clearance a number regulatory actions to enhance immigration enforcement. We ask for expedited reviews of these actions, prioritized and described as follows:

1. Interim Rule on Alien Flight Training. This interim rule, developed in consultation with FAA/DOT, implements section 113 of the Aviation Security Act, which requires a security check of aliens and other designated individuals who seek flight training in the U.S.

2. Proposed Rule on Tourist Visas. Currently, B visas are granted for a period of 3-12 months, with a default of 6 months. The proposed rule would change the period to 0-6 months, with 6-month extensions.

3. Interim Rule on Adjustment of Status. This is the Mohamed Atta Rule. Atta was permitted to remain in country and enroll in school while he adjusted his status from a visitor visa to a student visa. This rule would require that such adjustment of status be approved before the putative student may remain and enroll in school.

4. Final Rule on "Surrender of Aliens Ordered Removed from the United States" (INS 1847; RIN 1115-AE82). This rule would impose a legal obligation for aliens in removal proceedings to surrender to the INS when they are finally adjudicated and ordered to be removed. The rule, originally proposed in 1998, would cut down on the numder of abscondees from removal.

For your convenience, attached hereto are one-page summary sheets of each of the above actions. In our judgment, none of the above actions are controversial.

At the start of next week, we will be submitting two additional actions for OMB clearance, as follows:

1. Proposed Rule on SEVIS. This rule would establish the SEVIS system to track student visas, mandated by Congress in 1996. This is the centerpiece of the regulatory reform effort, and may be controversial among colleges and universities, which have previously opposed efforts to control or monitor student visas. However, their public sentiments have changed post-9/11, and the INS has consulted with their representatives in developing the rule.

2. Proposed Rule on In Absentia Removal. This rule would implement a statutory requirement that aliens have an obligation to provide a current address to the INS. The INS will use that address to effect legal notice of removal proceedingsand, if the information is not current or the alien does not appear, removal proceedings can be effected in absentia.

Thank you very much for your attention to this important matter.

NATIONAL SECURITY MODIFICATIONS TO THE B VISA

Description of proposed regulations to be delivered to OMB

This regulation is a proposed rule promulgated under Sections 214(a) and 248 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). This proposed rule shortens the admission period of B-1 temporary visitors for business and B-2 temporary visitors for pleasure. The proposed rule includes the following changes:

- Currently, the maximum admission period for all B visitors is one year. The proposed rule will reduce the maximum admission period to 6 months.

- Currently, there is a minimum admission period of 6 months for B-2 visitors. The proposed rule will eliminate the minimum admission period.

- Currently, the default period of admission for B visitors is 6 months. The proposed rule will establish a default admission period of 30 days. However, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) will seek to set an admission period for each B visa that is fair and reasonable for the completion of the purpose of the visit.

- Currently, extensions of the period of stay for B visas are routinely granted for six months in most cases, and for one year in a limited set of cases. The proposed rule will set a six month maximum for all extensions and a will establish a presumption against granting extensions. However extensions necessitated by unforeseen circumstances, humanitarian considerations (e.g., medical care), and other situations defined in the proposed rule will escape this presumption.

This proposed rule will not prevent legitimate visitors to the United States from accomplishing the purposes of their visits. Approximately 95% of all B visitors currently depart the country in under 6 months. The intention of the proposed rule is to prevent aliens with ill intent from abusing the leniency of the current B visa rules. 18 of the 19 hijackers of September 11, 2001, entered the United States on B visas, and 9 spent more than 6 months in the country prior to the attack.

After OMB approval, the proposed rule will be published in the Federal Register and will be subject to a 30-day comment period. After public comments are evaluated and any changes are made, the final rule will be published and will become effective after 30 days.

PREVENTION OF ENROLLMENT WITHOUT APPROPRIATE STUDENT STATUS

Description of proposed regulations to be delivered to OMB

This regulation is an interim rule promulgated under Section 248 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). This interim rule amends the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) regulations by eliminating the current provision allowing a B-1 (temporary visitor for business) or B-2 (temporary visitor for tourism) nonimmigrant alien for to begin attending school without first obtaining approval of a change of nonimmigrant status.

The terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, highlighted the need of the INS to maintain greater control over the ability of an alien to change nonimmigrant status once the alien has been admitted to the United States. This interim rule will allow the INS to fully review any request from a B nonimmigrant to change nonimmigrant status to that of full-time student before allowing the alien to enroll in an approved school.

This interim rule will accommodate B-1 or B-2 visitors who have already begun taking classes but have not received approval to change to F or M nonimmigrant student status. The interim rule does not require these aliens to stop taking classes while the INS processes the change of nonimmigrant status request. However, a nonimmigrant admitted in B-1 or B-2 status after the effective date of this interim rule may not enroll in school unless and until the INS has notified the alien that the change of nonimmigrant status application has been approved.

SCREENING OF ALIENS AND OTHER DESIGNATED INDIVIDUALS SEEKING FLIGHT TRAINING

Description of proposed regulation to be delivered to OMB

This regulation is an interim rule to implement Section 113 of the Aviation and Transportation Security Act (ATSA), which was enacted by Congress on November 19, 2001.

This interim rule is intended to make it more difficult for terrorists to be trained as pilots. The rule covers all providers of aviation training who are subject to regulation by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), including flight schools, independent flight instructors, training centers, and certified carriers. They are prohibited from providing training to aliens and other designated individuals in the operation of aircraft with a maximum certificated takeoff weight of 12,500 pounds or more, unless they provide prior notification to the Attorney General.

The rule also establishes a process by which aviation training providers may furnish the required notification. The notification process will involve the completion of a very detailed application and the submission of fingerprints to the Attorney General. The Department of Justice will then conduct a security risk assessment of the flight training candidate. The Attorney General will have 45 days to determine whether the candidate presents a risk to aviation or national security; if the Attorney General does not indicate that the candidate will present such a risk, then the training provider may proceed to train the candidate. However, the Attorney General reserves the right to interrupt training if he later determines that the candidate poses a risk to aviation or national security.

In addition, the rule codifies procedures implemented in a previously published Federal Register Notice that allow aliens who already know how to fly to receive advance consent for their training. The Foreign Terrorist Tracking Task Force has determined that providing further aviation training to this particular group of aliens is not likely to pose an additional risk to aviation or national security.

This rule will be effective immediately upon publication.

Subject: Resend: Immigration Enforcement Measures

Dear All,

Commenting on the INS snafu last week, the President said, "So we've got to reform the INS and we've got to push hard to do so. This is an interesting wake-up call for those who run the INS. We are modernizing our system, John, and it needs to be modernized, so we know who's coming in and who's going out and why they're here."

Responding to the President's charge, the Department today is submitting for OMB clearance a number regulatory actions to enhance immigration enforcement. We ask for expedited reviews of these actions, prioritized and described as follows:

1. Interim Rule on Alien Flight Training. This interim rule, developed in consultation with FAA/DOT, implements section 113 of the Aviation Security Act, which requires a security check of aliens and other designated individuals who seek flight training in the U.S.

2. Proposed Rule on Tourist Visas. Currently, B visas are granted for a period of 3-12 months, with a default of 6 months. The proposed rule would change the period to 0-6 months, with 6-month extensions.

3. Interim Rule on Adjustment of Status. This is the Mohamed Atta Rule. Atta was permitted to remain in country and enroll in school while he adjusted his status from a visitor visa to a student visa. This rule would require that such adjustment of status be approved before the putative student may remain and enroll in school.

4. Final Rule on "Surrender of Aliens Ordered Removed from the United States" (INS 1847; RIN 1115-AE82). This rule would impose a legal obligation for aliens in removal proceedings to surrender to the INS when they are finally adjudicated and ordered to be removed. The rule, originally proposed in 1998, would cut down on the numder of abscondees from removal.

For your convenience, attached hereto are one-page summary sheets of each of the above actions. In our judgment, none of the above actions are controversial.

At the start of next week, we will be submitting two additional actions for OMB clearance, as follows:

1. Proposed Rule on SEVIS. This rule would establish the SEVIS system to track student visas, mandated by Congress in 1996. This is the centerpiece of the regulatory reform effort, and may be controversial among colleges and universities, which have previously opposed efforts to control or monitor student visas. However, their public sentiments have changed post-9/11, and the INS has consulted with their representatives in developing the rule.

2. Proposed Rule on In Absentia Removal. This rule would implement a statutory requirement that aliens have an obligation to provide a current address to the INS. The INS will use that address to effect legal notice of removal proceedingsand, if the information is not current or the alien does not appear, removal proceedings can be effected in absentia.

Thank you very much for your attention to this important matter.

PREVENTION OF ENROLLMENT WITHOUT APPROPRIATE STUDENT STATUS

Description of proposed regulations to be delivered to OMB

This regulation is an interim rule promulgated under Section 248 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). This interim rule amends the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) regulations by eliminating the current provision allowing a B-1 (temporary visitor for business) or B-2 (temporary visitor for tourism) nonimmigrant alien for to begin attending school without first obtaining approval of a change of nonimmigrant status.

The terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, highlighted the need of the INS to maintain greater control over the ability of an alien to change nonimmigrant status once the alien has been admitted to the United States. This interim rule will allow the INS to fully review any request from a B nonimmigrant to change nonimmigrant status to that of full-time student before allowing the alien to enroll in an approved school.

This interim rule will accommodate B-1 or B-2 visitors who have already begun taking classes but have not received approval to change to F or M nonimmigrant student status. The interim rule does not require these aliens to stop taking classes while the INS processes the change of nonimmigrant status request. However, a nonimmigrant admitted in B-1 or B-2 status after the effective date of this interim rule may not enroll in school unless and until the INS has notified the alien that the change of nonimmigrant status application has been approved.

SCREENING OF ALIENS AND OTHER DESIGNATED INDIVIDUALS SEEKING FLIGHT TRAINING

Description of proposed regulation to be delivered to OMB

This regulation is an interim rule to implement Section 113 of the Aviation and Transportation Security Act (ATSA), which was enacted by Congress on November 19, 2001.

This interim rule is intended to make it more difficult for terrorists to be trained as pilots. The rule covers all providers of aviation training who are subject to regulation by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), including flight schools, independent flight instructors, training centers, and certified carriers. They are prohibited from providing training to aliens and other designated individuals in the operation of aircraft with a maximum certificated takeoff weight of 12,500 pounds or more, unless they provide prior notification to the Attorney General.

The rule also establishes a process by which aviation training providers may furnish the required notification. The notification process will involve the completion of a very detailed application and the submission of fingerprints to the Attorney General. The Department of Justice will then conduct a security risk assessment of the flight training candidate. The Attorney General will have 45 days to determine whether the candidate presents a risk to aviation or national security; if the Attorney General does not indicate that the candidate will present such a risk, then the training provider may proceed to train the candidate. However, the Attorney General reserves the right to interrupt training if he later determines that the candidate poses a risk to aviation or national security.

In addition, the rule codifies procedures implemented in a previously published Federal Register Notice that allow aliens who already know how to fly to receive advance consent for their training. The Foreign Terrorist Tracking Task Force has determined that providing further aviation training to this particular group of aliens is not likely to pose an additional risk to aviation or national security.

This rule will be effective immediately upon publication.

The Honorable John J. LaFalce
Ranking Member
Committee on Financial Services
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Mr. LaFalce:

Thank you for your letter of March 6 to Secretary O'Neill concerning whether a higher designated reserve ratio for the insurance fund should accompany an increase in the deposit insurance coverage limit.

It is important to underscore that increasing the coverage limit would raise the volume of reserves that is necessary just to meet the existing designated reserve ratio (i.e., the minimum required ratio of reserves to insured deposits, currently 1.25 percent). Recent FDIC estimates indicate that the provisions of H.R. 3717 raising the general coverage limit to $130,000 and retirement account coverage to $260,000 would immediately lower the combined fund reserve ratio by 4-5 basis points as currently uninsured deposits convert to insured status. Over time, as higher limits attract new deposits into the banking system, the reserve ratio could decline in total by 9-10 basis points. The proposed increase in the municipal deposit coverage limit would result in a further decline in the reserve ratio.

An increase in deposit insurance coverage may impose additional costs beyond the reserve dilution cost just described because of its potential to weaken market discipline and increase the level of risk to the FDIC. One way to help offset these costs would be an upward adjustment in the designated reserve ratio (or in the range for this ratio). This would provide greater protection for the insurance fund and taxpayers.

More importantly, though, we see no benefits from an increase in coverage that would justify risking the possibility of greater cost burdens on our banking system. Thus, as Secretary O'Neill confirmed in his recent letter to you on this subject, the Administration believes that the deposit insurance coverage limit should not be changed.

Thank you again for writing. Please let us know if we may be of additional assistance.

Sincerely,

Sheila C. Bair
Assistant Secretary for Financial Institutions

The Honorable John J. LaFalce
Ranking Member
Committee on Financial Services
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. LaFalce:

Thank you for your recent letter regarding the Administration's views on deposit insurance reform.

The Administration applauds the House Financial Services Committee's efforts to move forward with this important issue. We support several provisions of H.R. 3717 that would accomplish objectives consistent with the recommendations that Assistant Secretary Bair outlined in testimony last year and as re-affirmed in the President's 2003 Budget. Merging the bank and thrift insurance funds would improve the system's capacity to diversify its risks. Allowing the insurance fund reserve ratio to fluctuate within a range and eliminating triggers that could cause sharp changes in premiums would reduce the pricing structure's pro-cyclical bias. Improving the FDIC's premium-setting authority should ensure that institutions with rapid insured deposit growth appropriately compensate the fund while taking into account the past contributions of many institutions to build insurance fund reserves.

However, the Administration continues to believe that the deposit insurance coverage level should remain unchanged. There is no evidence that an increase in the coverage level would promote competition or materially improve the ability of community banks to obtain funds. An increase in coverage would primarily benefit high net worth individuals and do little for the great majority of savers, who have deposit balances far below the current coverage limit. For those with substantial deposits, ample opportunities already exist to obtain FDIC coverage equal to several multiples of $100,000. Moreover, raising coverage could weaken market discipline and increase risk to the FDIC and, ultimately, taxpayers.

Thank you again for writing. We look forward to working with the Congress, the FDIC, and others in the coming year to resolve these and other concerns about proposed legislation and achieve a stronger and fairer deposit insurance system.

Sincerely,

Paul H. O'Neill

The Administration applauds the House Financial Services Committee's efforts to move forward with this important issue. We support several provisions of H.R. 3717 that would accomplish objectives consistent with the recommendations that Assistant Secretary Bair outlined in testimony last year and as re-affirmed in the President's 2003 Budget. Merging the bank and thrift insurance funds would improve the system's capacity to diversify its risks. Allowing the insurance fund reserve ratio to fluctuate within a range and eliminating triggers that could cause sharp changes in premiums would reduce the pricing structure's pro-cyclical bias. Improving the FDIC's premium-setting authority should ensure that institutions with rapid insured deposit growth appropriately compensate the fund while taking into account the past contributions of many institutions to build insurance fund reserves.

However, the Administration continues to believe that the deposit insurance coverage level should remain unchanged. There is no evidence that an increase in the coverage level would promote competition or materially improve the ability of community banks to obtain funds. An increase in coverage would primarily benefit high net worth individuals and do little for the great majority of savers, who have deposit balances far below the current coverage limit. For those with substantial deposits, ample opportunities already exist to obtain FDIC coverage equal to several multiples of $100,000. Moreover, raising coverage could weaken market discipline and increase risk to the FDIC and, ultimately, taxpayers.

Thank you again for writing. We look forward to working with the Congress, the FDIC, and others in the coming year to resolve these and other concerns about proposed legislation and achieve a stronger and fairer deposit insurance system.

Sincerely,

Paul H. O'Neill

The Honorable J. Dennis Hastert
Speaker of the House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Speaker:

There is transmitted herewith a draft bill to authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to lease undeveloped acreage and unused and underutilized buildings of the National Cemetery Administration and to retain the proceeds from leases or agricultural licenses with the request that it be introduced and considered for enactment.

Land is the primary asset entrusted to the National Cemetery Administration (NCA), which currently comprises approximately 14,650 acres. Land for burial purposes is developed in ten-year increments using a "just-in-time" approach that carefully monitors depletion of gravesites, projected burial requirements and estimated timing for new construction activities. Additionally, certain sections of many national cemeteries are unsuitable for development into burial sections due to wetlands, rock outcroppings or sloped terrain. Acreage that is unsuitable for burial purposes and land not yet needed for development represents a sizeable asset.

Amending existing law to authorize NCA to enter into lease agreements would provide NCA with more flexibility in finding current uses for land that otherwise would remain idle until it was needed for development. It also would allow buildings that are currently not in use to be leased and by so doing, to be maintained by the lessee. This authority is similar to that of the Veterans Health Administration (VHA).

NCA has authority to execute limited-term agricultural licenses and has done so at certain national cemeteries. The license permits grazing, sod farming or planting rotational crops on unused acreage. These activities directly benefit the cemetery by keeping the land cleared, attractive and well maintained. However, receipts for the use of this land also must be deposited to the U.S. Treasury. Additionally, NCA has historic lodges and other buildings that could generate revenue for the cemetery if NCA were able to retain the proceeds from the lease.

The receipts retained by NCA would assist in maintaining national cemeteries. The money would be deposited in the National Cemetery Administration's Operations and Maintenance Account to be used for grounds maintenance, e.g., mowing, trimming, and fertilizing, as well as building maintenance.

We estimate that annual proceeds would approximate $100,000. These additional funds will help to maintain national cemeteries, as shrines dedicated to our Nation's history, nurturing patriotism and honoring the service and sacrifice veterans have made on behalf of the United States.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that there is no objection to the submission of this proposal from the standpoint of the Administration's program.

Sincerely,

Anthony J. Principi

107TH Congress
2nd Session

A BILL

To authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to lease undeveloped acreage and unused and underutilized buildings of the National Cemetery Administration and to retain proceeds from leases or agricultural licenses.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America assembled, that title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new section 2412, Lease of land and buildings and to retain proceeds.

SEC. 2412 – LEASE OF LAND AND BUILDINGS AND TO RETAIN PROCEEDS –

Section 2412 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding a new section as follows:

The Secretary may lease for a term not exceeding 3 years undeveloped land and unused or underutilized buildings, or parts or parcels thereof, belonging to the United States and part of the National Cemetery Administration established by section 2400 of this title 38. Any lease made to any public or nonprofit organization may be made without regard to the provisions of section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5). Notwithstanding section 321 of the Act of June 30, 1932 (40 U.S.C. 303b), or any other provision of law, a lease made pursuant to this subsection to any public or nonprofit organization may provide for the maintenance, protection or restoration by the lessee as a part or all of the consideration for the lease. Prior to execution of any such lease, the Secretary shall give appropriate public notice of the Secretary's intention to do so in the newspaper of the community in which the lands or buildings are located.

Sec. 2 Notwithstanding any other provision of law, proceeds from the lease of National Cemetery land or buildings and from agricultural licenses shall be deposited to the National Cemetery Administration's Operations and Maintenance Account to assist cemetery operations and maintenance of cemetery property.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF DRAFT BILL

Section 1 of the draft bill would add a new section 2412 to title 38, United States Code, to authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to lease for a term not to exceed 3 years undeveloped land and unused or underutilized buildings, or parts or parcels thereof, of the National Cemetery System. This authority would mirror the Secretary's authority in section 8122 of title 38, to lease land or buildings at a VA medical facility. A lease made to a public or nonprofit organization can be made without regard to the advertising requirements of section 5 of title 41, United States Code, and it can provide for the public or nonprofit to maintain, protect or restore the property in lieu of monetary consideration.

Section 2 would authorize the proceeds generated by the lease or the proceeds received from an agricultural license to be deposited to the National Cemetery Administration's Operations and Maintenance Account. The funds would be used for cemetery operations or maintenance.

Admiral, Mark and Susan -- As you will note below, regarding the question Sam Donaldson asked yesterday about the congressional testimony of specific Clinton White House aides, Robert's initial research appears to indicate that yes these witnesses ARE entirely distinguishable from the present case because -- as with virtually ALL such WH precedent -- the subject matter did indeed include allegations of improper conduct (in this case, attempting to influence the Whitewater investigation). We will provide you with add'l infomration as it is obtained.

Ed: I left off for you a 1994 news report describing the Jily 28, 1994 hearing before the House Banking Committee that involved 10 presidential aides, including those Sam Donaldson identified. I also gave copies to Wendy and Gordon. The testimony apparently related to allegations of improper attempts to influence the Whitewater investigation. I've asked Paul Colborn to have an OLC paralegal obtain transcripts of any part of the hearing that may be relevant and/or confirm the news report, and fax them over to OHS. Once we've definitively confirmed that the hearing was aimed at misconduct, we can safely say that it is distinguishable from what Congress wants here. Robert

Just like all White House aides that have testified, it was for alleged

Robert:

As we discussed, it would be helpful if we could confirm what the Clinton aides cited by Sam Donaldson were testifying about.

DONALDSON: ... you were sitting on the Banking Committee in 1994, you had no problem in having Mr. Clinton's personal aides come up and testify before you.
What's changed?
RIDGE: Well, we had--first of all, I'm not sure that's exactly correct. We had cabinet members from the banking, cabinet members dealing with housing issues.
I think one of the critical distinctions here, Sam, is that the executive order that creates the position of the Office of Homeland Security basically says my job is to coordinate, coordinate, coordinate. And the fact that there are $38 billion in the budget, and that I have been called to testify about those $38 billion, is really inappropriate.

I do not have control of those dollars. I will not oversee the expenditure of those dollars. Secretary Tommy Thompson will, the attorney general will, Joe Allbaugh of the Federal Emergency Management Agency will. They have operational control, operational responsibility. We had a discussion with them, made the recommendation to the president. But they're going to oversee those dollars...
DONALDSON: But governor...
RIDGE: ... and they're going to spend those dollars.
DONALDSON: ... let's just see if we can agree on the record. I think it is correct that Mr. Ickes was called, Mark Guring (ph) was called, Thomas McLarty was called before the committee, and they were personal aides to President Clinton. I think that's correct, governor.
RIDGE: Well, it depends on whether or not the--and I don't doubt your word about that, Sam, thanks for refreshing my recollection. But I think it also goes to President Bush's point. I think it is the prerogative of a president, and this president, and I feel strongly that he's absolutely correct, seeks to maintain that very important principle of separation of powers.
I have been on the Hill. I will continue to be available to members of both the House and the Senate...
DONALDSON: Well, let's talk about...
RIDGE: ... to talk about...
DONALDSON: ... how you might be available, let's talk about how you might be available. You said you've talked to...
RIDGE: OK.
DONALDSON: ... Senator Byrd. Would you agree to COMMENTS: Under current law, VA cannot obligate funds in excess of $500,000 from its Advanced Planning Fund until 30 days after Congress has received a VA report on the proposed obligation. The draft bill would eliminate that requirement for those construction projects that have already been authorized by Congress.

The Honorable J. Dennis Hastert
Speaker of the House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Mr. Speaker:

There is transmitted herewith a draft bill, to eliminate the limitation on certain obligations for advanced planning for Fiscal Year 2002. It is requested that the bill be referred to the appropriate committee and that it is favorably considered for prompt enactment.

Title 38, U.S.C. § 8104(f) provides that the Secretary may not obligate funds on an amount in excess of $500,000 from the Advanced Planning Fund (APF) of the Department until the Secretary submits to the committees a report on the proposed obligation; and a period of 30 days has passed after the date the committees have received the report.

The reporting requirement was established to ensure that the VA Committees were knowledgeable of VA project development activities. At present, these Committees participate in authorization process and as a result are knowledgeable of the projects that have already been authorized by Congress. However, because the reporting requirement still applies to projects that have already been authorized by Congress, the Secretary is precluded from funding these projects until after a report is submitted to the Committees and the 30-day period has passed. The current limitation places a two to three month delay on those projects that have already been authorized by Congress.

The elimination of this limitation would remove the duplication of effort on the part of VA and Congress for those projects that have been authorized in accordance with Title 38 U.S.C. § 8104. This proposed legislation would eliminate the limitation only for those projects that have already been authorized by Congress in accordance with Title 38 U.S.C. § 8104(2).

The Office of Management and Budget advises that there is no objection to the submission of this proposal from the standpoint of the Administration's program.

Sincerely,

Anthony J. Principi

107th

2nd Session

(2) a period of 30 days has passed after the date on which the report is received by the committees.

107th CONGRESS

2d Session

S. 1499

AN ACT

To provide assistance to small business concerns adversely impacted by the terrorist attacks perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the `American Small Business Emergency Relief and Recovery Act'.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS- Congress finds that--

(1) the Nation's 25,000,000 small businesses employ more than 58 percent of the private workforce, and create 75 percent of all net new jobs;

(2) as a result of the terrorist attacks perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001, many small businesses nationwide suffered--

(A) directly because--

(i) they are, or were as of September 11, 2001, located in or near the World Trade Center or the Pentagon, or in a disaster area declared by the President or the Administrator of the Small Business Administration;

(ii) they were closed or their business was suspended for National security purposes at the mandate of the Federal Government; or

(iii) they are, or were as of September 11, 2001, located in an airport that has been closed; and

(B) indirectly because--

(i) they supplied or provided services to businesses that were located in or near the World Trade Center or the Pentagon;

(ii) they are, or were as of September 11, 2001, a supplier, service provider, or complementary industry to any business or industry adversely affected by the terrorist attacks perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001, in particular, the financial, hospitality, and travel industries; or

(iii) they are, or were as of September 11, 2001, integral to or dependent upon a business or business sector closed or suspended for national security purposes by mandate of the Federal Government; and

(3) small business owners adversely affected by the terrorist attacks are finding it difficult or impossible--

(A) to make loan payments on existing debts;

(B) to pay their employees;

(C) to pay their vendors;

(D) to purchase materials, supplies, or inventory;

(E) to pay their rent, mortgage, or other operating expenses; or

(F) to secure financing for their businesses.

(b) PURPOSE- The purpose of this Act is to strengthen the loan, investment, procurement assistance, and management education programs of the Small Business Administration, in order to help small businesses meet their existing obligations, finance their businesses, and maintain and create jobs, thereby providing stability to the national economy.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS RELATING TO TERRORIST ATTACKS.

Section 3 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 632) is amended by adding at the end the following:

`(r) DEFINITIONS RELATING TO TERRORISM RELIEF- In this Act, the following definitions shall apply with respect to the provision of assistance under this Act in response to the terrorist attacks perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001, pursuant to the American Small Business Emergency Relief and Recovery Act:

`(1) DIRECTLY AFFECTED- A small business concern is directly affected by the terrorist attacks perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001, if it--

`(A) supplied or provided services to any business that was located in or near the World Trade Center or the Pentagon, or in a disaster area declared by the President or the Administrator related to those terrorist attacks;

`(B) is, or was as of September 11, 2001, a supplier, service provider, or complementary industry to any business or industry adversely affected by the terrorist acts perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001, in particular, the financial, hospitality, and travel industries; or

`(C) it is, or was as of September 11, 2001, integral to or dependent upon a business or business sector closed or suspended for national security purposes by mandate of the Federal Government.

`(3) ADVERSELY AFFECTED- The term `adversely affected' means having suffered economic harm to or disruption of the business operations of a small business concern as a direct or indirect result of the terrorist attacks perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001.

`(4) SUBSTANTIAL ECONOMIC INJURY- As used in section 7(b)(4), the term `substantial economic injury' means an economic harm to a small business concern that results in the inability of the small business concern--

`(A) to meet its obligations on an ongoing basis;

`(B) to pay its ordinary and necessary operating expenses; or

`(C) to market, produce, or provide a product or service ordinarily marketed, produced, or provided by the small business concern.'.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 186, S. 1499.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1499) to provide assistance to small business concerns adversely impacted by the terrorist attacks perpetrated against the United States on September 11, 2001, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 3076

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I understand Senators KERRY and BOND have a substitute amendment at the desk. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration, that the amendment be agreed to, and that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 3076) was agreed to.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ``Text of Amendments.'')

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I would urge that there be no further delay, no further obstruction, and that the Senate act--a long last--to pass a bill that is very important to so many small businesses in this country crippled by the economic fall-out c September 11, including businesses that were already struggling before September 11 during the recession and are now fa with even more difficult prospects.

For months, tens of thousands of small businesses have been asking for help--an immediate helping hand--just to keep t businesses going--particularly working capital to meet payroll and pay the bills--but they have been forced to make ends m by using credit cards and depleting personal savings because small businesses doesn't have the same access as big business--to credit or otherwise. Left in the lurch by congressional inaction and delay, these businesses and their employee paid the price.

Now it is time that the Senate delivers the relief the vast majority of us were prepared to deliver in the first weeks after September 11, urgent relief delayed by partisan gamesmanship.

My American Small Business Emergency Relief and Recovery Act has gotten a lot of attention over the past 5 months. It been blocked from even a meaningful debate on the Senate floor. What makes this week different?

What makes it different is that we have reached final agreement with the White House on a compromise, thanks to our la resort--hardball tactics of our own--and the bill has at long last been cleared to pass the Senate by unanimous consent.

I thank the 63 cosponsors of this bill. I thank the numerous small businesses and small business advocates who have wc so hard and used so much of their limited resources to free this bill for passage. This diverse coalition of business leaders . Democratic and Republican policy makers have stood by us from day one--their support should have been enough to guarantee passage way back then, but it wasn't enough to stop some from playing partisan games with even bipartisan legislation. Now, at long last, the good faith efforts of our supporters are being rewarded.

It is my hope that having worked out our differences with the White House, we have cleared the way for passage not just through the Senate but also through the House. Once this help is enacted, small businesses will finally be able to receive desperately needed economic relief.

I am pleased with the compromise. It preserves provisions that are really important for those small businesses that have needed help over the past few months but fell through the cracks in SBA's disaster loan program, or fell through the cracks the private sector where lenders have cut back on loans to small businesses over the past year.

It simply was not enough, not efficient, and not cost-effective to use only one of SBA's many lending programs to serve a small businesses throughout this country that were hurt by the terrorist attacks or that have been struggling with the credit crunch. All of the SBA's tools should be used to help the affected small businesses, and this bill does just that. Because thi was blocked from consideration, Senator Bond and I were forced to enact some of these provisions through a defense bill. very much thank Senators BYRD and HOLLINGS for including them. Specifically, we made it possible for small businesses to get working capital loans through the SBA's 7(a) loan program. SBA is calling these ``STAR loans,'' and compared to the economic injury disaster loans, borrowers are accessing capital faster. In just seven weeks, since the loans were made available, nearly $38 million has been loaned to 129 small businesses. It reminds us that being able to go sit in the office of a lender in the same town is far more efficient and effec than requiring a small business in West Virginia or Puerto Rico to call a 1-800 number in Niagara Falls for emergency assistance.

One needs only to look at the record by comparison for economic injury disaster loans outside New York and Virginia to see the need for these STAR loans. After 22 weeks (nearly 6 months), only 2,600 loans have been approved, adding up to denial rate of almost 50 percent . That doesn't even include the small businesses that were turned away before they even f out an application because of outdated size standards. That has left a lot of small businesses across this country without assistance. A lot of small business owners turning are in their keys to the bank. As one small business advocate said today reference to the thousands of tour bus companies that went out of business, ``I understand the banks now own a wonderfu fleet of tour buses.''

Well, for those small tour bus owners who have been waiting for this bill to pass and still need a working capital loan to re back up in the upcoming tour season, the compromise preserves the refinancing of business debt under a disaster loan. Th need this so that they can restructure debt to survive this business slump. We fought very hard to keep this assistance in th

For the owners of travel agencies--the majority of which are small businesses--we have increased the size standards for industry so that more of your companies qualify for disaster loans and 7(a) emergency loans. Please spread the word to tra agencies that were turned away earlier in the year because they were considered too large. They might need working capit more than ever now that the airlines have completely eliminated commissions.

For small businesses that need access to credit and can't get it because of the credit crunch, Senator Bond and I were al make SBA's programs more affordable by reducing the fees borrowers pay through September 2004. In both the Senate ar the House, we have had hearing after hearing trying to get fairer fees for the borrowers who need capital and the lenders w make loans, but until now we haven't gotten any cooperation. This bill will make a difference. Whether you need working capital through SBA's 7(a) loan program or credit to buy a building or equipment through SBA's 504 loan program, it will no be less expensive. Stimulating lending and borrowing is good for the economy because it creates jobs and saves jobs. By l small businesses that borrower money through the SBA 504 loan program have to hire or retain on employee for each $35, borrowed. This is a win-win situation for our economy.

The overall purpose of this emergency legislation is to provide access to the full complement of SBA loans and business counseling in order to help small businesses hurt by the terrorist attacks of September 11th and their aftermath.

This legislation will help mitigate bankruptcies, business closures, and lay-offs and address the shrinking availability of cr However, small businesses doing business with the Federal Government have also felt the impact of the terrorist attacks.

Small business contractors, because of very real and legitimate security concerns, have experienced a dramatic increase costs for work in and around Federal Government facilities. We have heard reports of small businesses being denied acce their equipment on military bases, waiting for hours each day to enter government facilities and being limited in the hours th can work on their projects.

Let me cite the situation faced by Dave Krueger, President of AS Horner Construction, Inc. out of Albuquerque, NM. Dav was currently doing work on a Federal contract at an Air Force facility pouring concrete parking aprons. Immediately after tl attack, his company was locked out of the facility for nearly 2 weeks and currently has limited hours to access the construc site. Dave estimates that this will result in cost increases of at least 10 percent, meaning he will take a loss on this contract

Such situations cannot go unresolved. Small businesses are far too important, not just to our national economy, but to ou national defense as well. Small business is a vital component of our national supply chain and essential to our national sec interests. To address this, S. 1499 establishes an expedited procedure whereby Federal small business contractors can ap for an equitable adjustment to their contract if costs have been incurred due to security or other measures resulting from th terrorist attacks. In the interest of compromise, Senator Bond and I agreed to reduce the funding available for these provisi from $100 million to $50 million.

The Kerry-Bond approach has always been cost-effective--about five times cheaper than the administration's approach. CBO estimated that providing this assistance to small businesses would cost $860 million. The final compromise, based or CBO's estimates, is down from $860 million to $300 million.

This is a good compromise. It will help small businesses in every State. It is a reasonable approach that maximizes existi resources and private sector help. I strongly and respectfully urge my colleagues to let this legislation pass. Small business your State will thank you.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues in the Senate to vote in favor of S. 1499, the American Small Business Emergency Relief and Recovery Act. I thank my colleague from Massachusetts, Senator KERRY, for introducing the bill, ar I am pleased to be its principal cosponsor. Since S. 1499 was introduced on October 4, 2001, 62 of our Senate colleagues have joined us as cosponsors.

The measure before the Senate today is a comprehensive managers' substitute amendment to S. 1499, which incorporat significant changes that have been agreed to following lengthy negotiations with the staffs from the White House and the C of Management and Budget, OMB. In particular, I thank Andy Card, the President's Chief of Staff, Dr. Lawrence Lindsey, Director of the National Economic Advisors, and Steve McMillin, Assistant Director at OMB, for their personal involvement i the negotiations.

The managers' substitute amendment modifies S. 1499 to recognize changes in the disaster relief and credit programs a Small Business Administration, SBA, that were enacted on January 10, 2002, in section 203 of the Department of Defense Emergency Supplemental Appropriations for Recovery from and Response to Terrorists Attacks on the United States, P.L. 107-117 Emergency Disaster Supplemental.

Enactment of S. 1499, as amended, will insure that valuable credit and management assistance will flow to small busines that were harmed by the September 11 terrorist attacks on the World Trade Centers and the Pentagon. It is my understanc the House of Representatives is prepared to act quickly on the bill soon after the 2-week recess, so that it can be sent to President Bush for his signature in the near future. Fast action by Congress is critical. Small businesses from across the Ur States are continuing to struggle under the dual pressures from the economy and the aftermath of the terrorist attacks.

As the ranking member of the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, I have received pleas for help from s business in Missouri and across the nation: small restaurants that have lost much of their business due to the fall off in bus travel; local flight schools that have been grounded as a result of the recent terrorist attacks; and Main Street retailers who struggling to survive. The American Small Business Emergency Relief and Recovery Act contains sound initiatives to help nation's small businesses and their employees. We in Congress must act and act soon to help our Nation's small business decline in the economy and stimulate a business rebound, last October I introduced the Small Business Leads to Econor Recovery Act of 2001, S. 1493, which was designed to provide effective economic stimulus in three distinct but complementary ways: increasing access to capital for the nation's small enterprises; providing tax relief and investment incentives for our small firms and the self-employed; and directing one of the Nation's largest consumers--the Federal Government--to shop with small business in America.

Historically, when our economy slows or turns into a recession, the strength of the small business sector helps to right ou economic ship, with small businesses leading the Nation to economic recovery. Small businesses employ over one-half of t U.S. workforce and create 75 percent of the net new jobs. Clearly, we cannot afford to ignore America's small businesses a we consider measures to stimulate our economy.

S. 1499 goes to the heart of a major problem confronting thousands of small businesses today by taking on access to ca barriers. This bill is a bipartisan collaboration between Senator KERRY, and me and our staffs of the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship. We have worked together to devise one-time modifications to the SBA Disaster Relief, 7(a and 504 Loan Programs because the traditional approach to disaster relief will not address the critical needs of thousands small businesses located at or around the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and in strategic locations throughout the Unit States.

In New York City, it could be a year and more before many of the small businesses destroyed or shut down by the terroris attacks can reopen their doors for business. Small firms near the Pentagon, such as those at the Reagan National Airport c Crystal City, VA, are also shut down or struggling. And there are small businesses throughout the United States that were s down for national security concerns and continue to struggle to regain lost customers.

Small enterprises located in the Presidentially declared disaster areas surrounding the World Trade Center and the Pent are not the only businesses experiencing extreme hardship as a direct result of the terrorist attacks of September 11. Nationwide, thousands of small businesses are unable to conduct business or are operating at a bare-minimum level. Tens thousands of jobs are at risk of being lost as small businesses weather the fall out from the September 11 attacks.

Regular small business disaster loans fall short of providing effective disaster relief to help these small businesses. The Emergency Disaster Supplemental included a provision from S. 1499 as introduced that allows small businesses to defer fo to 2 years repayment of principal and interest on their SBA disaster relief loans. Interest that would otherwise accrue during deferment period would be forgiven. The thrust of this essential ingredient is to allow the small businesses to get back on th feet without jeopardizing their credit or driving them into bankruptcy. The managers' substitute amendment restates this key provision.

The managers' substitute amendment also retains the provision permitting small businesses located in the Presidentially declared disaster areas and those small businesses directly affected by the terrorist attack to refinance existing business d Repayment of principal shall be deferred for disaster loans to refinance existing business debt, however, interest would acc during the deferment period.

S. 1499 would provide a special financial tool to assist small businesses as they deal with these significant business disru Small businesses in need of working capital would be able to obtain SBA-guaranteed ``Emergency Relief Loans'' from their banks to help them during this period. Fees normally paid by the borrower to the SBA would be eliminated, and the SBA would guarantee 85 percent of the loan. A key feature of the bill is the authorization for banks to defer repayment of princip for up to one year. This section would remain in effect for 9 months after the date of enactment of the act.

My colleagues and I have heard from thousands of small businesses since the terrorist attacks that small businesses are experiencing significant hardship. The downturn in business activity, however, was clearly underway prior to September 11 The downturn was further exacerbated by the terrorist attacks.

S. 1499 would provide for changes in the SBA 7(a) Guaranteed Business Loan Program and the 504 Certified Developm Company Loan Program to stimulate lending to small businesses that are most likely to grow and add new employees. The managers' substitute amen incorporates the provision from the emergency supplemental that reduces the annual fee paid by lenders from 50 basis poi 0.50 percent, to 25 basis points, 0.25 percent. In addition, the up front origination fee paid by small business borrowers wo be reduced. These enhancements to the SBA's 7(a) program, and comparable reductions in 504 loan program fees, are to continue through September 30, 2004. They are designed to make the programs operate more effectively and efficiently du the period when the economy is weak and banks have tightened their underwriting requirements for small business loans.

Specifically, when the economy is slowing, it is normal for banks to raise the bar for obtaining commercial loans. Howeve making it harder for small businesses to survive is the wrong reaction to a slowing economy. By making these adjustments the 7(a) and 504 loans to make them more affordable to borrowers and lenders, we will be working against history's rules governing a slowing economy, thereby adding a stimulus for small businesses. Essentially, we will be providing a counter-cyclical action in the face of a slow economy with the express purpose of accelerating the recovery.

The SBA has a very effective infrastructure for providing management assistance to small businesses located nationwide Small Business Development Center, SBDC, SCORE, Women's Business Center and Microloan programs provide much needed counseling to small businesses that are struggling or facing problems in their start-up phase. With the U.S. econon under unusual stress, many segments of the small business community are today unable to cope with daily management is

S. 1499 would authorize expansions in these programs so that the SBDCs, the SCORe chapters and the Women's Busir Centers are positioned to address the needs of a large influx of small businesses looking for help. Our bill would create spe authorization for each program to provide assistance tailored to the needs of small businesses following the September 11 terrorist attacks. In addition, the bill would increase the authorization levels by the following amounts: SBDC program, $25 million, SCORE $2 million, Women's Business Centers $2 million, and Microloan technical assistance, $5 million.

For small businesses that are doing business with the Federal Government section 9 of the managers' substitute amendr S. 1499 would authorize a fund of $50 million to compensate small businesses when Federal action as the result of the terr attacks, has caused the costs to increase for small businesses to meet the terms of their contracts. The fund would be administered by the Department of the Treasury. The Office of Federal Procurement Policy would establish guidelines for administering the program, and the contracting agencies would consult with the SBA when determining whether an award should be made.

The American Small Businesses Emergency Relief and Recovery Act is important legislation that is needed to help the m struggling small businesses. Swift passage will be very helpful to the long-term survival of many of American's small busine and I urge each of my colleagues to vote in favor of the bill.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill, as amended, be read the third time and passed; that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate; and that any statements relating to the bil printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 1499), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

-Is it ok for an OPA staffer to e-mail the liaisons/schedule c's on this matter from our RNC computer?
-Is it ok for a political appointee to use their personal/vacation time for campaign purposes (i.e. use vacation time and travel to volunteer for a campaign)? Is it ok, to communicate that they can use vacation time on a voluntary basis to help out? [DISCUSSION DRAFT]

107TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

H. R. _____

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. MANZULLO introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on _____

A BILL

To improve small business advocacy, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION. 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Small Business Advocacy Improvement Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

REV_00142319

(1) Excessive regulations continue to burden the Nation's small businesses.

(2) Federal agencies continue to propose regulations that impose disproportionate burdens on small businesses.

(3) An independent office of small business advocacy will help to ensure that Federal agencies are responsive to small businesses and that those agencies comply with their statutory obligations with respect to small businesses.

(4) The independence of an office that acts as an advocate for small businesses is essential to ensure that it can serve as an effective advocate without being restricted by the views or policies of the Small Business Administration or any other Federal executive branch agency.

(5) To be effective an office that acts as an advocate for small businesses needs sufficient resources to conduct creditable economic studies and research which are necessary for the maintenance of small business databases and for the accurate assessment of the impact of regulations on small businesses, the role of small business in the Nation's economy, and the barriers to the growth of small businesses.

(6) The research, information, and expertise provided by an independent office of small business advocacy will be a valuable source of information and advice for Congress and Federal agencies with which the office will work on behalf of small businesses.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to ensure that there exists an entity that has the statutory independence and adequate financial resources to effectively advocate for and on behalf of small business;

(2) to require that such an entity publish reports and make them available to the President, to the Chairmen and Ranking Members of the Committees on Small Business of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, and to the Administrator of the Small Business Administration, in order to keep them fully informed about current issues, economic conditions, and regulations affecting small businesses and the necessity for corrective action by Federal agencies or Congress;

(3) to provide a separate authorization for appropriations for such an entity; and

(4) to strengthen the role of the Small Business and Agriculture Regulatory Enforcement Ombudsman by ensuring greater cooperation between the Ombudsman and the Office of Advocacy of the Small Business Administration.

No on the cash donations. The CFC (Combined Federal Campaign) is the only recognized charitable solicitation (of money) permissible in the Federal workplace. As far as the school chest ideas go, something can be worked out, although it should be coordinated with management of the buildings where the chests are used, e.g. GSA in the EEOB, and, I presume, the Park Service in connection with the White House; I'm a little unclear as to who to talk to in the WH proper. GSA building management is in the WH directory. In my view, this should all be handled very informally, and no coercive tactics should be used to get people to participate. Let me know what you think.

FYI, here my edits to a memo relating to Toys for Tots from last fall. It may give you the general idea.

Subject: Cash donation question

Hi Moose,

Another question for you...

After the President's event last Wedensday, several people expressed interest in helping with the Red Cross school chests. Jim would like me to organize WH staff school chests asap. In thinking about how best to organize this (having the containers in a few designated drop spots w/lists of what each chest must include, still needs, etc) I thought that many busy people may find it easier to give a few dollars instead of hunting down the right type of chalkboard eraser.

If people donate money, am I allowed to purchase the needed supplies for the school chests?

Please let me know whenever you have chance. Thank you!!

-Shannon

MEMO FOR MARGARET SPELLINGS

THROUGH: STEPHEN GARRISON

FROM: TIFFANY BARFIELD

SUBJECT: HOLIDAY TOY DRIVE WITH TOYS FOR TOTS

Summary

Consistent with administration encouragement of charitable activities of all Americans, we suggest that agencies and departments consider, informal support of Toys for Tots for their 2001 Toy Drive. Each holiday season the Toys for Tots organization hosts a national toy drive. In addition to gifts for children whose parents can not afford to purchase toys, Toys for Tots is reaching out to victims of the September 11 tragedy. Toys will be distributed to the children who lost parents in the World Trade Centers, Pentagon, and on the four flights. Also included will be children who lost parents in the rescue and recovery efforts and whose parents became unemployed due to the economic circumstances from September 11.

Interested agencies should call [insert name] at Toys for Tots at [insert phone number], or Tiffany Barfield at (202) 456-5594. We would expect that toys would be collected between December 5th through the 18th. Any person who is an agency contact for coordinating this toy drive should not have any outside relationship with Toys for Tots; such a relationship could raise ethical questions.

Background

Marine Reservists in Los Angeles, California founded Toys for Tots in 1947. In the following year, they expanded the program into a nationwide campaign for the United State Marine Corp Reserves. One of the Toys for Tots goals this year is to deliver a message of hope to the children whose lives have been forever changed by the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. Toys for Tots is hosting two events on Monday, December 3 at the Pentagon and Wednesday, December 5 in New York City. Last year over 125,700 toys where distributed in the DC, southern Maryland, and northern Virginia region.

Recommended Actions

1. Two week Toy Drive within the White House and Cabinet Agencies – On the daily Chief of Staffs conference call, the White House will encourage participation in the Holiday Toy Drive. This model was successfully implemented for a food drive earlier this year.

2. Collection and Distribution of Toys – Individuals at agencies and departments coordinating the collection of toys should consult with agency counsel on how support for Toys or Tots should be coordinated at their particular agency. (The Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) is the only authorized solicitation of employees in the Federal workplace on behalf of charitable organizations. The collection of in-kind gifts, such as toys, however, is not inconsistent with CFC regulations, however. There are also General Services Administration regulations

3. White House Event - On the specific day of collection there will be a photo op with the Toys for Tots Marine Reserves, local DC children, White House Staff, and available Senior Staff. Date will be coordinated by Toys for Tots and the White House.

The effort to raise Toys for Tots should not be to the exclusion of any other worthwhile charitable activities that may be permissibly conducted by agencies and departments.

The question only asks for numbers, and that's all I would provide. In providing the numbers, I would not make distinctions between staff and non-staff or anything else; I would interpret the question to mean how many volunteers work here. I would also hedge the response fully and carefully, noting for example that by its nature, volunteer work is often temporary or of short duration, that these numbers fluctuate literally day-by-day and that it's difficult to get an accurate count. One way to go about it might be to see if the Secret Service can do a computer run to figure out how many Volunteer passes they distribute on average per day.

Any thoughts on a response to this? For background, Adam Greenstone has told me that there are two types of volunteers: those who are not considered to be WH staff and those who are. The former is not counted towards FTE caps while the latter are.

Moose. Desiree asked me to pass this through you before responding to Liz with volunteer information. As you see below I've been asked again for numbers of volunteers for a Congressional office. The last time there was a request for numbers of volunteers that were paid by the White House. I always thought those terms were mutually exclusive.

The first part of this request also uses that term -- employed. We do not employ any volunteers. We do, however, have a roll of approximately 815 volunteers -- not all of which are being utilized. They are used in Correspondence's various departments, the First Lady's office, the Vice President and Mrs. Cheney's offices, Visitor's office, NEC, Scheduling, Photo office, Faith-based, Political Affairs, White House Fellows, PPO, Conference Center, Freedom Corps, AIDS Policy Office, Press Office, Records Mgmt, Public Liaison and others that I may not even know about. This information is due back to Liz by cob tomorrow. Would you mind recommending a response? I'd appreciate it.

Thanks.

Laurie:
We received the following question for the record from Congressman Steny H. Hoyer as a result of an appropriations hearing held March 14 on the EOP's FY 2003 budget request:

How many volunteers are currently employed within the Executive Office of the President?

From the HRM database, I can retrieve the "Student Volunteer" numbers for all of EOP, but for those volunteers that fall outside of the HRM database, mainly White House Office volunteers, I need your assistance. For the record, can you provide the number and types of volunteers currently serving the White House Office as of March 15th? We will not provide the types of jobs they have, but we may need that for later. None of this information will be released to the Congressman prior to White House Counsel approval. Please provide the volunteer numbers and types by close of business, Thursday, March 28. If you have any questions or concerns, please call or email me.

Thanks.

The President rarely gets this partisan. This issue must have hit a chord:

There is no more fundamental issue than to making sure we have a judiciary of people that do not interpret the law from the bench; people who do not try to write law from the bench. (Applause.) People who interpret the law and not try to write it.

And I put up a good man from Mississippi the other day. And I don't remember the senior senator from Georgia defending this man's honor. And we're going to have more fights when it comes to the judiciary. And I'm going to put strict constructionists on the bench. And I expect people in the United States Senate from a great state like Georgia to do what Zell Miller did, and stood up and defended the honor and integrity of Judge Pickering. And that's what Saxby Chambliss is going to do. (Applause.)

Colleagues:

The coalition groups are thrilled the POTUS is talking about judges; but many of them want a POTUS speech or lengthy remarks.

Ginni Thomas, whose email is below, makes the point of much of what I am hearing. Brett and I heard the same message over and over at the Norquist meeting this week.

Warmly

tsg

Tim: - here's my personal feedback -- I'm glad he is mentioning that branch in his remarks; however, he does not appear to be using the time to EDUCATE on why the left so wants to take them over...what the Democrats are doing wrong. Maybe polling shows this is the only way that works, but it misses the edge that distinguishes his choices from Clinton's -- in my opinion.
But certainly, it is great that he is going places and using it in the effort.

Sen. Thompson will be issuing a statement in the next hour on a limited basis (i.e., only to those few news organizations that have asked) relating to Lieberman's letter to Andy. It is a fairly lengthy and fairly strong denunciation of the move, claiming among other things that Lieberman is asking for some materials at the heart of executive privilege (advice to the President on appointments matters) without an adequate predicate in fact and through an overbroad request. Sen. Thompson wants us to know that he will support us if we decide to resist but is not counseling us or pressuring us to take any particular approach. I told his staff that I thought the statement would be helpful regardless of what approach we ultimately decided to take and thanked them for the heads-up.
They will fax the statement when it goes out, and I will circulate it.

Hugh Davis Graham, a Vanderbilt University political historian who spearheaded a lawsuit to block President Bush's reinterpretation of a law on the release of White House records, has died. He was 65.

Graham, a highly regarded scholar of civil rights policy and a Pulitzer Prize-nominated author, died of cancer Tuesday at his home in Santa Barbara.

In November, he and a group of other historians and journalists asked a federal judge to strike down Bush's executive order that gives an incumbent president or a former president's representative the right to withhold the release of their presidential papers to the public. The order also extends to "vice presidential records." Immediately at issue were 68,000 pages of "confidential communications" from President Reagan's White House.

Graham and his fellow plaintiffs argued that Bush's executive order violated the 1978 Presidential Records Act, which was passed by Congress to make clear that a president's papers and files are the government's property.

The measure was enacted in the wake of Watergate and President Nixon's efforts to control access to his papers and secret White House tapes.

The law, which took effect in 1981, said most of a former president's papers would be available to the public 12 years after the chief executive left office.

A White House spokeswoman in November described Bush's executive order as "establishing an orderly process" for implementing the 1978 law.

"Bush's order is wrongheaded and dangerous on many counts," Graham told an audience at the Lyndon Johnson Presidential Library in Austin, Texas, in November. "It attempts to change a public law not by persuading Congress to revise it, but by executive decree. It is disingenuous, turning the statute on its head, displacing a premise of eventual openness with a license for permanent closure."

In January, a year after they were scheduled to be made public, 8,000 pages of Reagan presidency documents were unveiled at the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley, including memos from Chief of Staff James A. Baker III. An additional 60,000 pages that were to be released in January 2001 are expected to become available in early April.

Graham viewed the release of the Reagan papers as a mere public relations ploy to curb criticism over Bush's executive order.

"It's a gesture so that they can say, 'See, we're good guys, we're producing these documents and everyone can come look at them,'" Graham said in January. "They're trying to get the monkey off their back. But it's not going to get us off their backs."

The lawsuit, filed in Washington on behalf of the American Historical Assn., the Organization of American Historians, the National Security Archive and the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, in addition to Graham and Stanley I. Kutler of the University of Wisconsin, is pending.

A native of Little Rock, Ark., Graham graduated magna cum laude from Yale University in 1958 and later received his master's and PhD from Stanford University.

After a two-year stint in the Marine Corps on Okinawa, Graham worked briefly as a reporter for the Tennessean in Nashville in 1960 then taught history at Foothill College in Los Altos Hills, Calif., and at San Jose State College (now University).

From 1964 to 1966, he worked in the Peace Corps in Washington, first in the Office of Public Affairs and then as director of the Western region. He later taught history at Stanford, Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and the University of Maryland.

Graham began teaching at Vanderbilt in Nashville in 1991, but he moved to Santa Barbara early last year after his illness rendered him unable to teach.

He continued to write, however, and finished his final book, "Collision Course: The Strange Convergence of Affirmative Action and Immigration Policy in America," which has just been published by Oxford University Press.

Graham wrote or edited 15 books, mostly dealing with U.S. policy issues in the second half of the 20th century.

He was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in history in 1991 for "The Civil Rights Era: Origins and Development of National Policy, 1960-1972."

This week, an academic conference on Reagan's presidency that Graham helped organize was held at UC Santa Barbara.

Graham is survived by his wife, Janet; two brothers, Court TV anchor Fred Graham of Washington and historian Otis L. Graham Jr. of Wilmington, N.C.; and his son, Holter Graham of Baltimore. Another son, Hugh Patterson Graham, died in 1977 at age 8.

A memorial service will be held later at Vanderbilt.

I try to send out articles to interested staff on possible movement of legislation, hearings, markups, etc. Often, I see articles (like the following) explaining positions of interest groups on legislation. Would you be interested in seeing these types of articles? I usually stick to articles that purely explain Congressional action or likely action, but if it would be helpful to see articles like this, please let me know.
Thanks, Lisa

(references H.R. 2341; strongly support SAP sent to House Rules on 3/12)

The Conference of Chief Justices, which represents the interests of state supreme courts, has come out against class action reform legislation approved this month by the House, and pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee. "Absent hard evidence of the inability of state judicial systems to hear and decide fairly class actions brought in state courts, we do not believe such a procedure is warranted," the CCJ said in a letter sent last week to Senate Judiciary Chairman Leahy and ranking member Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. "Our position on this issue is not new," they added.
Moreover, it is "consistent with the position of our counterparts in the federal judicial system." Federalization of class actions "may not be the best solution. Improving state protocols and federal state court cooperative strategies may be a better solution consistent with principles of federalism," the group wrote.

Having reviewed the opinions in this case, I must say that I find Judge Luttig's opinion quite persuasive. On the merits, the case addresses two basic issues. The first, whether this case properly states a section 1983 claim under Heck v. Humphry or, instead, raises a claim that must be raised through a federal habeas petition. On this issue, I think Judge Luttig is plainly correct. (Arguably, Heck is no longer good law, as in Spencer v. Kemna, Justice Ginsburg, who provided the fifth vote in Heck, stated that she had "come to agree with Justice Souter's reasoning" in his dissenting opinion in Heck; Heck has not, however, been overruled, and so lower court judges remain bound by it). In Heck, the Supreme Court, in a 5-4 opinion, stated:

"[W]hen a state prisoner seeks damages in a s. 1983 suit, the district court must consider whether a judgment in favor of the plaintiff would necessarily imply the invalidity of his conviction and sentence; if it would, the complaint must be dismissed unless the plaintiff can demonstrate that the conviction or sentence has already been invalidated.
But if the district court determines that the plaintiff's action, even if successful, will not demonstrate the invalidity of any outstanding criminal judgment against the plaintiff, the action should be allowed to proceed, in the absence of some other bar to the suit."

(Judges Wilkinson and Luttig both agree that the legal test is the same where, as here, the prisoner seeks injunctive relief instead of damages). Here, a judgment in plaintiff's favor plainly would not "necessarily imply the invalidity of his conviction and sentence." Indeed, the DNA evidence could very well confirm his guilt (and hence the validity of conviction and sentence). In any event, it is not at all clear that even if exculpatory, such evidence would "necessarily imply the invalidity of his conviction and sentence" -- unless one believes that the Constitution prohibits the conviction of innocent people, a question on which jurists have disagreed. In other words, it is possible that the Constitution permits the valid conviction and sentence of an innocent person -- after all, only proof beyond reasonable doubt, not all doubt, is required for a "valid" conviction. Actual innocence and a valid conviction are not necessarily inconsistent, then, the ultimate safeguard being executive clemency, as Judge Luttig explains.

The second issue in this case is whether a prisoner has a due process right to access to DNA evidence post-conviction. Although reasonable people can disagree on this issue, I believe that Judge Luttig makes a very compelling case. Indeed, absent the right articulated in Judge Luttig's opinion, the prosecutor in this case would have been free to destroy the DNA evidence -- forever preventing a possibly innocent person from ever even having access to the best evidence that could prove his innocence (or confirm his guilt). Rather than paraphrase it, I will quote from Judge Luttig's opinion:

"That the Constitution would recognize a limited right of access to previously-produced forensic evidence should be unsurprising. Even though the incarcerated individual has been deprived of his liberty through due process of law, he obviously still has a continuing interest in the pursuit of his freedom from the executive through mechanisms of pardon, commutation, and parole that have been established by the executive (if not also from the judiciary through its processes). At least in the circumstances where STR or related DNA testing of previously-provided forensic evidence could prove the individual's innocence beyond all doubt, this interest is sufficient to outweigh the government's comparatively insubstantial interest in the withholding of access to the evidence in question -- an interest which I submit is non-existent where further resort to the judicial process is, under law, no longer available. Were mere access to such evidence denied in circumstances where it is possible to prove the individual's innocence beyond all doubt, the incarcerated would be effectively foreclosed from recourse to the very executive processes that the Supreme Court has instructed are, collectively and appropriately, the safety net of our criminal justice system -- and in precisely the circumstances in which the Court itself has repeatedly said that such recourse should lie, namely, where the system has failed by convicting the truly innocent. See Herrera v. Collins, 506 U.S. at 411-12 (observing that "clemency is deeply rooted in our Anglo-American tradition of law, and is the historic remedy for preventing miscarriages of justice where judicial process has been exhausted" (footnotes omitted)); id. at 412 n.13 (noting that "clemency has provided the historic mechanism for obtaining relief" on claims of actual innocence made after conclusion of judicial proceedings); id. at 415 ("Executive clemency has provided the 'fail safe' in our criminal justice system.").

"It is one thing to say that further access to the apparatus of the criminal justice system must at some point be curtailed in the indusputable interest of finality. It is another altogether to say that, having curtailed that access to the courts, one will even be denied access to evidence in the government's hands that he could present to the executive in an effort to prevent a miscarriage of justice, after he has been told that it is the role of the executive, not the courts, to prevent miscarriages of justice which, because of finality, are no longer remediable through the judicial process. Not only would such be fundamentally unfair; it would constitute, by definition, wholly arbitrary governmental conduct."

Finally, I must say that I strongly disagree with the argument that it was somehow injudicious for Judge Luttig to write his opinion. Indeed, under such reasoning, it would be injudicious for any judge to write an opinion concurring in the judgment only. Here, Judge Wilkinson's panel majority opinion, to which Judge Luttig's opinion is a response, is law of the circuit -- to my knowledge, Judge Wilkinson has not vacated his panel opinion as moot in light of the actions of the state court. Judge Luttig, therefore, was fully justified, and judicious, in registering his disagreement with that now-binding panel opinion in the context of this case -- precisely as would a judge on the panel who concurred in the judgment only. Indeed, this is arguably the only appropriate place, short of a full rehearing en banc, where Judge Luttig should register such views, for on all subsequent panels, he, like every other circuit and district court judge in the Fourth Circuit, will be bound to follow Judge Wilkinson's panel opinion. A panel dissenter, for example, may dissent the first time, but thereafter he is bound to follow the law of the circuit. (I will not comment, on the other hand, on whether it is injudicious for a judge to opine on his view of proper public policy notwithstanding his view of the law).

The only argument of which I can conceive against such a course is that it somehow mattered that Judge Luttig was not on the original panel. This, of course, would mean that all opinions concurring in the denial of rehearing en banc are injudicious, at least if they purport to opine on the substance of the underlying decision. More importantly, suppose Judge Luttig were to have written the exact same opinion, only in a dissent from denial of rehearing en banc. Surely this would not seem injudicious. Why is it any different where, as here, while he disagreed with the panel's reasoning, he did not believe rehearing en banc -- a decision as discretionary as granting certiorari -- appropriate? I must admit that I simply do not see any meaningful distinction.

The Honorable John D. Rockefeller
Chairman
Committee on Veterans' Affairs
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

As requested in connection with a hearing before your Committee on July 19, 2001, I am pleased to provide the views of the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) on S. 1042, 107th Congress, the "Filipino Veterans' Benefits Improvements Act of 2001," a bill, "[t]o amend title 38, United States Code, to improve benefits for Filipino veterans of World War II." We support this bill, in part, and oppose this bill, in part, for the reasons discussed below. We plan to submit to Congress this session a legislative proposal that includes those Filipino veterans' benefits enhancements that the Administration supports.

Compensation and Dependency and Indemnity Compensation

Sections 2(b) and 3(a) of S. 1042 would, in the case of compensation and dependency and indemnity compensation (DIC) paid by reason of service in the New Philippine Scouts, and in the case of DIC paid by reason of service in the organized military forces of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, including organized guerilla units, remove the $0.50 on-the-dollar limitation if the individual to whom the benefits are payable resides in the United States and is either a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States.

Section 107(a) of title 38, United States Code, generally provides that service before July 1, 1946, in the organized military forces of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, including organized guerilla units, may in some circumstances be a basis for entitlement to disability compensation, DIC, monetary burial benefits, and certain other benefits under title 38, United States Code, but that payment of such benefits will be at the rate of $0.50 for each dollar authorized. Similarly, section 107(b) of title 38, United States Code, generally provides that service in the Philippine Scouts under section 14 of the Armed Forces Voluntary Recruitment Act of 1945, i.e., service in the New Philippine Scouts, may be a basis for entitlement to disability compensation, DIC, and certain other benefits under title 38, United States Code, but that payment of such benefits will be at the rate of $0.50 for each dollar authorized.

These limitations on benefit payments to certain Filipino beneficiaries were intended to reflect the differing economic conditions in the Philippines and the United States. These limitations were not made contingent, in any respect, on the place of residence of the beneficiary, although, at the time the limitations were established, the great majority of affected individuals resided in the Philippines. Through the years, numerous Filipino veterans and their dependents and survivors have immigrated to this country, and many have become permanent residents or citizens. It became evident that the policy considerations underlying the restrictions on payment of compensation and DIC to the affected individuals are no longer relevant in the case of those who reside in the United States. VA realized that Filipino beneficiaries residing in the United States face living expenses comparable to United States veterans and imposition of limitations on the payment of these subsistence benefits to these individuals based on policy considerations applicable to Philippine residents was not only inequitable, but may result in undue hardships to this group of beneficiaries.

In 1998 and 1999, VA proposed elimination of the $0.50 on-the-dollar limitation in section 107 in the case of affected Filipino compensation and DIC beneficiaries who reside in the United States. Section 501(a) of Public Law 106-377, enacted in October 2000, added subsection (c) to section 107, providing that, in the case of disability compensation paid by reason of service in the organized military forces of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, including organized guerilla forces, the $0.50 on-the-dollar limitation would not apply if the individual to whom the benefits are payable resides in the United States and is either a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence. However, that statute left unchanged the $0.50 on-the-dollar limitation on the payment of DIC regardless of the recipient's place of residence.

VA continues to believe that in the case of those Filipino veterans and their dependents and survivors who reside in the United States and therefore face living expenses comparable to United States veterans and their dependents and survivors, imposition of limitations on the payment of subsistence benefits based on policy considerations applicable to Philippine residents is inequitable and may result in undue hardships to this group of beneficiaries. Thus, we believe a change in law such as that provided in Public Law 106-377 is justified in the case of compensation and DIC benefits payable to United States residents based on service in the New Philippine Scouts and DIC benefits payable to United States residents based on service in the Philippine Commonwealth Army. Thus, we support sections 2 and 3 of the draft bill.

We note that technical changes contemplated by section 2(a) of the draft bill have already been accomplished by Public Law 107-14, §8(a), enacted June 5, 2001.

Sections 2 and 3 of H.R. 1042 are subject to PAYGO limitations. VA projects that 120 former members of the New Philippine Scouts residing in the United States who have established service connection and currently receive compensation benefits at half-rates would become eligible for increased compensation benefits, under section 2 of the bill. VA estimates that the cost of section 2, if enacted, would be $568,000 in the first year of the program, and $2.5 million cumulatively for five years. VA also estimates that approximately 438 survivors of Filipino veterans reside in the United States and would become eligible for DIC benefits at full-dollar rates in FY 2002 pursuant to section 3. VA estimates that the cost of section 3, if enacted, would be $2.5 million in FY 2002, and $14.8 million in FYs 2002 through 2006.

Pension

Section 4 of S. 1042 would render service in both the organized military forces of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, including organized guerilla forces, and the New Philippine Scouts a basis for entitlement to pension under chapter 15 of title 38, United States Code. This section would allow for the payment of such benefits under chapter 15 to be made at the full-dollar rate authorized if the individual to whom the benefits are payable resides in the United States and is either a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States. This section would further provide for such benefits to be paid at the rate of $100 per month if the individual to whom the benefits are payable resides in the Republic of the Philippines.

The limitations on eligibility for United States veterans' benefits based on service in the Philippine military forces were established many years ago in a carefully considered determination of the United States and Philippine governments' respective responsibilities with regard to veterans of these forces. The current limitations on United States veterans' benefits for veterans of the Philippine forces stemmed from a comprehensive economic and political plan for allocating financial assistance to the Philippines. We understand that the array of benefits offered under current Philippine law for veterans of the Philippine armed forces is nearly as comprehensive as that authorized by United States law for veterans of service in our own Armed Forces. In our view, current law appropriately recognizes our two nations' shared responsibility for the well being of members of the Philippine forces, and the longstanding allocation of those responsibilities should not be disturbed.

We also note, with regard to section 4(b) of S. 1042, that VA's pension program is a needs-based program under which the amount of benefits awarded is based on the income of the recipient. The award of a flat pension rate to individuals who reside in the Republic of the Philippines would differ markedly from any award to which an individual who resides in the United States would be entitled. Under the proposed provision, an individual who resides in the Philippines could receive benefits, while an otherwise eligible resident of the United States subject to income limitations would receive none, even though the Philippine resident's income is equal to or greater than that of the United States resident. We can perceive of no basis for this inequitable treatment. Thus, VA opposes this provision.

Section 4 of S. 1042 is subject to PAYGO limitations. VA estimates that there are approximately 11,000 Filipino veterans residing in the United States, and approximately 34,000 Filipino veterans residing in the Philippines, who would become eligible for pension awards under section 4. VA estimates that total benefit costs of section 4, if enacted, would be $59.5 million in the first year of the program, and $251 million over five years, for Filipino veterans residing in the United States, and $40.7 million in the first year of the program, and $161.4 million over five years, in additional benefit costs for Filipino veterans residing in the Philippines.

Administrative Costs of Proposed Benefits Programs for Filipino Veterans

VA has determined that implementing the benefits programs for Filipino veterans proposed under section 2, 3 and 4 of H.R. 1042 would generate approximately 44,923 new claims, and would require 91 additional FTE. Administrative costs associated with these FTE would total $5.3 million.

Health Care in the United States

Section 5 of S. 1042 would broaden eligibility for VA health care within the United States for Filipino veterans who served in the Commonwealth Army and the New Philippine Scouts. Under current law, only Commonwealth Army veterans with compensable service-connected disabilities, who lawfully reside in the United States, can receive such comprehensive care. New Philippine Scouts can receive care only on a discretionary basis and only for a service-connected disability. Section 5 of the bill would make Commonwealth Army veterans and New Philippine Scouts eligible for hospital, nursing home and outpatient care, in VA facilities within the United States, in the same manner as United States veterans. Section 5 would, for the first time, allow VA to provide comprehensive care to veterans of the Commonwealth Army and New Philippine Scouts who have no service-connected disability. We note, however, that section 5, as drafted, would extend VA health benefits to Filipino veterans in the United States regardless of immigration status. We urge that section 5 be amended to limit eligibility to Filipino veterans who are residing in the United States and are either citizens of, or aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence in, the United States.

Section 5 of S. 1042 is subject to PAYGO limitations. VA estimates that there are approximately 11,000 nonservice-connected Filipino veterans residing in the United States and that extending eligibility as section 5 would do would result in approximately 2,300 new users of the health care system. VA estimates the cost of this use would be approximately $11.6 million in the first year and $52.6 million over five years.

Outpatient Health Care in the Philippines

Section 6 of the bill would require that VA provide comprehensive outpatient care at the Manila VA Outpatient Clinic to United States veterans of World War II, Commonwealth Army veterans, and New Philippine Scouts who reside in the Republic of the Philippines. However, section 6 would limit expenditures for such care to $500,000 per year. Section 6 also provides that the authority would be effective in any fiscal year only to the extent that appropriations are available. Section 6 would not change our current authority to furnish comprehensive outpatient care in the Manila Clinic to United States veterans with a service-connected disability, and the $500,000 cap would not apply to the existing authority.

VA opposes the expansion of authority contained in section 6. Last year Congress enacted legislation revising VA's authority to furnish care in the outpatient clinic in Manila, permitting the Department to furnish U.S. veterans and Old Philippine Scouts who have a service-connected disability with care for nonservice-connected disabilities. Old Philippine Scouts are considered to be U.S. veterans. Previously, the clinic was authorized to provide care only for the service-connected conditions of these veterans. Congress elected not to open the clinic to non-U.S. veterans. Congress made these changes because these veterans were already eligible for and receiving care for service-connected disabilities in a VA-operated clinic. It makes sense to treat all conditions of a patient when treating the patient for a service-connected disability. In all other foreign countries, VA is authorized only to provide reimbursement for the cost of care for veterans' service-connected disabilities.

The $500,000 per year limitation on VA's authority to provide care would necessitate that VA establish some basis for rationing the care in the clinic. The cost of caring for those who would be made eligible would far exceed that amount. Were VA to provide care on a first come first served basis, many veterans needing care would not receive it simply because they did not need the care soon enough.

Judge and Tim --
According to the Chicago Tribune, a Federal indictment was handed up in Chicago today against the campaign committee of current Illinois Governor George Ryan (Republican) and two Ryan campaign aides. It is believed to be the first time a major party campaign has ever been charged with RICO violations. The 85-page indictment also charges obstruction of justice and mail fraud.

One of those charged is Illinois lawyer Rich Juliano, who until last week was the White House liaison at the Dept. of Transportation.
According to the att'd Tribune report, Juliano resigned his post w/ the Administration last week.
Juliano apparently served as Exec. Dir. of the Bush-Cheney campaign in Illinois, and also worked in the Florida recounts. Governor Ryan, who was not charged, was Bush-Cheney Illinois state chairman.

Feds indict former aides to Gov. Ryan Tribune staff reports

Published April 2, 2002, 5:02 PM CST

Two of Gov. George Ryan,s former top aides, as well as the governor,s political campaign committee, were indicted today on federal charges they illegally used state workers for political purposes.

It was the biggest indictment to come out of the federal government,s four-year Operation Safe Road investigation, which began as a probe into the selling of driver,s license for bribes when Ryan was secretary of state. The governor has not been charged with any wrongdoing.

"The indictment alleges that Citizens for Ryan ... for a number of years broke the law with considerable vigor," U.S. Atty. Patrick Fitzgerald said during a news conference at the Dirksen Federal Building in downtown Chicago. &Public funds were stolen and plundered for political benefit."

&The message sent today is that tax dollars are not free money ... to be used for campaign purposes or for the personal benefit of those who work (for a campaign),8 Fitzgerald said.

Scott Fawell, Ryan,s chief of staff when he was secretary of state and manager of Ryan,s successful 1998 campaign for governor, was charged with racketeering, mail fraud and conspiracy to obstruct justice in a 10-count indictment. Fawell currently is chief executive officer of the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority, which runs Navy Pier and McCormick Place in Chicago.

Also charged was Richard Juliano, a top campaign aide and later a staff member to the governor before becoming the U.S. Transportation Department,s liaison to the White House. Juliano resigned last week from the Department of Transportation, the U.S. attorney,s office said.

Fitzgerald said Juliano is cooperating with the government,s investigation.

The indictment also seeks the forfeiture of more than $1 million in campaign funds allegedly raised illegally by Citizens for Ryan during the scheme, which ran from 1992 to October 1999, according to prosecutors. The money ended up being used in Ryan,s campaigns for secretary of state and governor, as well as in the 1996 presidential primary and some state legislative races, Fitzgerald said.

Juliano and Fawell will be arraigned sometime in the future, the prosecutor said.

The indictment charges the two men were part of a racketeering enterprise that involved Ryan,s campaign committee and the Illinois secretary of state,s office. It says the racketeering included 20 acts of mail fraud, bribery and obstruction of justice.

Prosecutors said the operation,s primary objectives were to illegally use secretary of state employees for campaign activities, to perform official acts as a way of helping the campaign and to conceal certain campaign activities from public exposure and possible prosecution.

Fawell and others caused the creation of false documents in the secretary of state,s office to justify pay raises and promotions for employees in return for the campaign work they performed, according to the indictment. Documents were destroyed, and perjury was committed, to cover up the activities, Fitzgerald said.

&More disturbingly, documents were destroyed at the Homewood (secretary of state) facility,8 he said.

Prosecutors previously have alleged that during Ryan,s tenure as secretary of state, managers at driver,s licensing facilities were pressured into raising tens of thousands of dollars in campaign contributions. That fueled a massive bribery scheme in which managers took payoffs in return for issuing driver,s licenses to hundreds of unqualified motorists, authorities have said.

About $170,000 in bribes ended up in Ryan,s campaign coffers, prosecutors have said.

Fitzgerald today said the indictment does not accuse Fawell or Juliano of being personally involved in issuing driver,s licenses in exchange for bribes. But the prosecutor added that Fawell is charged with cutting off an investigation into the alleged practice.

&Fawell took steps to end the investigation and to terminate the investigators,8 and gave false testimony in a subsequent grand jury probe, Fitzgerald said.

Operation Safe Road has resulted in the convictions of 42 people to date. Nearly half were former secretary of state,s employees.

Among those convicted was Dean Bauer, a former top Ryan aide and close friend who admitted to obstructing justice to try to protect Ryan from political embarrassment; and Larry Hall, a longtime friend of Fawell,s, who pleaded guilty to a bid-rigging and kickback scheme.

Fawell entered politics immediately after graduating from college, going to work in 1981 as administrator of Milton Township in DuPage County. He joined the re-election campaign of then-U.S. Sen. Charles Percy (R-Ill.) in 1984 and later served in the secretary of state,s office and in Ryan,s office of lieutenant governor.

Fawell also worked in the political campaigns of Gov. James R. Thompson and George W. Bush, and was campaign manager for Ryan,s successful secretary of state bid in 1990.

Tribune staff reporters Ray Gibson, Matt O,Connor, Jill Blackman and Dave Ibata, and the Associated Press contributed to this story.

Brett --

1. Re ABA standards, the TX Code is the relevant cite. I was not able to immediately (time constraint with other matters) find a mirror provision -- remember, TX is in the minority on the elected judges system of judicial selection.

2. In TX, corporations are prohibited from giving and campaigns are prohibited from receiving corporate contributions. That is why you see the "employees" and "employee PAC" language.

3. Re duty of judges to sit: All judges have the duty to sit and decide matters brought before them, unless there is a basis for disqualification or recusal. Sun Oil Company v. Whitaker, 483 S.W.2d 808, 823-24 (Tex. 1972). (2) Texas Code of Judicial Conduct Canon 3(B)(1) provides "A judge shall hear and decide matters assigned to the judge except those in which disqualification is required or recusal is appropriate."

4. Re Mott quotation, the hard copy is not on the street. Please use the following: Texas Lawyer on-line, March 29, 2002.

5. See my earlier email comment to you regarding the $79,000.

Would it be allowable to have the RNC pay for a user survey of the WH website? The company doing the survey would place a cookie in the WH site that would randomly select a predetermined number of users - those users would be asked if they'd like to participate in a survey on the usability, functionality and content of the WH site - if they say no, they go back to their original WH screen - if they say yes, they'll be transferred to another web site to complete the survey and then will be taken back to the WH site.

Very interesting and very helpful. I've told Joel my general view re best practices, but that the functional approach has been employed and past OLCs must have signed off on it, so it's not out of bounds for consideration. I told him that if it looks as if we start ttrending in that direction (right now, the rec is to do all of TSA), to let me know and we can gear up OLC. Thanks.

I have gone back and checked the draft aviation security EO we worked on with OLC in the fall. OLC edited the draft EO that had been prepared so that it would refer to some defined unit rather than to a class of employees defined by function. Claire Huntington worked on it at OLC. You should talk to her.

Strange Justice: The liberal coalition that killed the Pickering nomination

Byron York
National Review
Monday April 8, 2002

Late in the afternoon on Thursday, March 14, in a crowded hallway in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, Bruce Cohen, a top aide to Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Patrick Leahy, warmly greeted Elizabeth Cavendish, the legal director and general counsel of the National Abortion Rights Action League. "Thank you," said Cohen. "No, thank you!" said Cavendish, smiling and grasping Cohen's hand.

The cause of the smiling and thanking was the defeat, just minutes earlier, of the nomination of Charles Pickering to a place on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. The committee's narrow Democratic majority, led by Leahy, killed the nomination on a 10-9 party-line vote. What made the exchange between Cohen and Cavendish noteworthy was that a good deal of the debate leading up to the vote had concerned the role that liberal groups such as NARAL, People for the American Way, NOW, the Alliance for Justice, and the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights were playing in the opposition to the Pickering nomination.

Republicans charged that the groups -- which have formed a coalition to oppose Bush nominees -- were working in close coordination with committee Democrats. "Judge Pickering has been viciously attacked by outside, left-wing, liberal groups," said Iowa Republican Charles Grassley, "and unfortunately, the Democratic party has been more than willing to do the bidding of these groups, here in the Senate, to oppose Judge Pickering." It's a charge Republicans have made for years, at least since the days of the Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas confirmation battles. But for all their anger -- and there was plenty in the room during the Pickering vote -- Republicans have never really offered much evidence to support their allegations. Yes, groups in the coalition are powerful and well funded -- People for the American Way's budget dwarfs those of the groups that tried to defend Pickering -- but do they really exercise inordinate influence on the Democratic senators who cast votes on the Judiciary Committee? It's a question that is impossible to answer definitively -- no senator would admit that he follows the coalition's lead -- but a close look at events during the Pickering battle suggests that the groups did indeed work in particularly close collaboration with Democrats. Coalition members, especially People for the American Way, did much of the groundwork for the case against Pickering, acting as the de facto research arm of the committee's Democratic majority. More important, Democrats seemed unusually responsive to the coalition's concerns; throughout the confirmation fight, Leahy's actions, along with those of many of his colleagues, closely tracked demands made by the coalition.

In one instance, Democrats announced plans to hold a rare second hearing for Pickering almost immediately after the coalition demanded that they do so (and at a time when there was no grassroots outcry to delay the nomination or to give it unusually close scrutiny). In another instance, Democrats abandoned tentative plans to move ahead on Pickering's confirmation after the groups demanded the nomination be delayed again to allow them more time to delve into Pickering's record. And in yet a third instance, Democrats, when questioning Pickering, appear to have relied extensively on documents gathered by People for the American Way rather than the committee's own researchers.

Together, the coalition and their Democratic allies mounted an extraordinarily effective campaign against Pickering. While that fight is now over, the groups are preparing for bigger battles to come. Taking a detailed look at the coalition's involvement in the Pickering nomination provides a preview of what will happen in the coming confirmation conflicts over some of President Bush's most anticipated appellate-court nominees -- as well as what is expected to be the biggest fight of all, the battle over the next justice named to the Supreme Court.

President Bush nominated Pickering on May 25, 2001, making him among the administration's earliest choices for the federal bench. Pickering, who had served eleven years on the U.S. District Court in Mississippi, quickly completed his Senate questionnaire and FBI background check, and by July 23, 2001, the American Bar Association finished its detailed evaluation of his time on the bench, giving him its highest rating: "well qualified." Republicans had hoped that Leahy would hold a confirmation hearing for Pickering before the August recess, but none was scheduled. After Congress returned to work, the events of September 11 led to more delays. Finally, a hearing was set for October 18.

The nomination received almost no media attention; the papers were filled with news of the war on terrorism and, in the days before the hearing, the anthrax scare on Capitol Hill. But away from the headlines, People for the American Way had begun a campaign against the nomination. On October 15, the group sent out an urgent e-mail to its "activist network" headlined "controversial hearing should be postponed or extended." The e-mail said that "serious questions have been raised about [Pickering's] record on civil rights and reproductive choice." It said Pickering had "hundreds of published and unpublished opinions that should be reviewed," and that a hearing on October 18 would "make it difficult to fully research Judge Pickering's complete record." The e-mail urged liberal activists to get in touch with committee senators to "demand that Judge Pickering's hearing be postponed or extended to a second session."

Second hearings for judicial nominees are highly unusual, though not unprecedented. What was perhaps more unusual was for a group to suggest a second hearing before a first had been held. But the day after the People for the American Way e-mail, Leahy's staff laid the groundwork for a second session by asking Pickering to provide a list of all of his unpublished opinions as quickly as possible. The judge was astonished; his nomination had been announced nearly five months earlier, and Democrats had waited until two days before the confirmation hearing to make such a far-reaching request. Pickering responded that he had written opinions in about 1,100 cases -- of which only about 95 were published -- and could not possibly get them all together in two days.

The issue of unpublished opinions caught Republicans unaware. Judges decide when to publish their opinions; court guidelines suggest that judges like Pickering, whose cases do not often set legal precedents, limit the amount of opinions they publish to cases that either explore new legal ground or are particularly interesting in some way. That Pickering would publish 95 opinions in more than a decade on the bench seemed normal to his Republican supporters. The number was actually higher than that of some of President Clinton's nominees who had been confirmed to the U.S. circuit courts (one of them published 49 opinions in six years on the district court; another published 109 opinions in 14 years on the bench; a third published 76 cases in 16 years). Democrats had not raised objections then, but in Pickering's case Leahy wanted a list of everything. Pickering sent as much as he could to Leahy the next day, October 17.

On the 18th, the hearing was presided over by New York Democrat Charles Schumer, who had made news a few months earlier when he held a series of hearings designed to explore a new standard for evaluating judicial nominees on the basis of their ideology, regardless of their qualifications for the bench. The first issue Schumer brought up with Pickering was the unpublished opinions: "My opinion is 95 is a little too few to choose somebody for the court of appeals." Schumer told Pickering that he and Leahy had decided that there would be a second hearing, after a review of the unpublished opinions.

Republicans were dumbstruck. They had not seen the People for the American Way e-mail and did not know that Leahy and Schumer were even considering a second hearing, much less that they had agreed on one. Schumer's announcement was clearly an ominous development for Pickering, but at the time most Republicans did not believe Democrats intended to kill the nomination. "I just assumed that they were gonna beat him up a little bit for the outside groups," says one top aide.

After the first hearing, Democrats ratcheted up their requests for Pickering's unpublished opinions. First Leahy had asked for a list of all the opinions. Then, immediately after the hearing, he asked for the opinions themselves in cases involving abortion, the Voting Rights Act, the Fair Housing Act, equal protection, and a few other issues. Leahy later asked Pickering for unpublished opinions on cases involving the Violence Against Women Act, the Fourth Amendment, and the Eleventh Amendment. Finally, in a November 13 letter, Leahy asked for all of Pickering's unpublished opinions.

At that point, it would have been reasonable for Republicans to go into full emergency mode; but they still believed there was reason to remain cautiously confident that Pickering would be confirmed. During November and December, minority leader (and Pickering friend) Trent Lott spoke with Leahy on more than one occasion about the nomination, and, according to two key aides, Democrats gave Republican leaders reason to believe that Pickering would be approved before the Senate went home for its year-end recess.

But the coalition had other plans. On December 6, leaders of the Ms. Foundation for Women held a conference call with some other coalition leaders, including representatives from the Alliance for Justice, a close ally of People for the American Way. According to notes made of the call, an Alliance official told the group:

There will be a MAJOR fight in January over Charles Pickering . . . He has a troubling record on civil and reproductive rights. He wrote [the decision] to preserve the state senate as all-white. All integrated marriages are illegal. Wants to ban abortion. Has a record he wants to hide -- he does not have a lot of published opinions . . . We can win on that fight, but it will be nasty and contentious.

When one highly placed GOP staffer heard about the conference call, he phoned a Leahy aide to see what was going on. Something had changed; this time, there was no talk of confirmation. "At that point, alarm bells are going off," recalls the staffer. "They're talking about going to jihad, and they haven't read the opinions yet."

As the days ticked down to the Senate's adjournment, Republicans realized there would be no quick second hearing, and no vote on Pickering before Congress went home for the holidays. What the GOP did not know was that while Democrats on the Judiciary Committee focused on the unpublished opinions -- and found little to use against the judge -- researchers for People for the American Way were preparing to take the Pickering fight in a new direction.

Margaret Kinchen is the court reporter for the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Mississippi, located in Hattiesburg. She handles requests for things like transcripts of trials, sentencing hearings, and other court proceedings. They are public documents, but anyone who wants to see them or get copies of them has to go through Kinchen to do it. She keeps records of who requests what.

On December 19, Judith Schaeffer, deputy legal director for People for the American Way, called Kinchen to request transcripts from two sentencing hearings in a celebrated Mississippi murder case tried in Pickering's courtroom. "She wanted them as fast as she could get them," recalls Kinchen, who e-mailed the documents to Schaeffer the same day.

When Kinchen returned to her office the day after New Year's, there was a message from Schaeffer wanting more transcripts. Then there were calls on January 7 and January 8: requests for still more transcripts, most of them involving sentencing hearings presided over by Pickering. On January 11, Schaeffer called again, wanting yet another transcript. Kinchen says the requests from People for the American Way were, up to that point, the only inquiries she received for Pickering-related documents -- "They were the only group that asked," she says. Although one might have expected committee Democrats to request documents, given the intensity of their interest in Pickering's record, Kinchen says she did not receive any inquiries from them.

On January 24, People for the American Way president Ralph Neas held a press conference in Washington to release the group's report on Pickering's record. Although Neas had not earlier called for Pickering's defeat, at the news conference he launched an all-out attack on both Pickering and the Bush White House. "Achieving ideological domination of the federal judiciary is the top goal of right-wing activists inside and outside the Bush administration," Neas said, "and judges like Charles Pickering are the means to that end."

The report was a grab-bag of issues, all of which suggested that Pickering was an unreconstructed segregationist who was hostile to the rights of women, minorities, and the poor. The report criticized Pickering for a 1959 law-review note on Mississippi's interracial-marriage ban that Pickering wrote as a first-year law student; it accused Pickering of having had "contact" with Mississippi's racist Sovereignty Commission in the 1970s; it accused Pickering of being indifferent to equal voting rights; it said Pickering had a "troubling record of reversals in the Court of Appeals"; it said he was hostile to abortion rights; and it accused him of blurring the separation of church and state.

Republicans on the Judiciary Committee sent a staff member to the Neas press conference. But when the aide came back with a copy of the report, GOP aides simply did not take the charges very seriously. Most, if not all, of Neas's accusations seemed without merit, and many had been considered by the committee in 1990 when it unanimously approved Pickering's nomination to the district court. But what Republicans did not know was that the Neas report would have a profound effect on the Pickering battle, becoming, almost overnight, a blueprint for Democratic committee members' objections to the nomination.

Another thing Republicans did not know was that Neas's research project did not stop when the report was released. On January 29, Judith Schaeffer contacted Kinchen again to request transcripts from sentencing hearings in a case known as United States v. Swan. The case involved a cross burning in southern Mississippi in 1994, and although no one knew it at the time, Swan would ultimately become a critical issue in the Pickering fight. On January 30, one day after Schaeffer called Kinchen, Leahy wrote Pickering to inquire about the judge's actions "relating to the criminal case of United States v. Swan."

Pickering's second hearing was scheduled for February 7. When the judge appeared before the committee, Democratic questioning hewed closely to the lines established in the Neas report. The report had focused on Pickering's reversal rate; at the hearing, Democrat Charles Schumer focused on Pickering's reversal rate. The report focused on Pickering's decisions in employment-discrimination cases; Democrat Edward Kennedy covered that topic. The report focused on Pickering's "contact" with the Sovereignty Commission; Democrat Richard Durbin handled that. The report focused on Pickering's views on abortion; Democrats Dianne Feinstein and Maria Cantwell covered that. And the report focused on Pickering's views on habeas corpus; Leahy handled that. The only new ground covered in the hearing was the Swan case, which had not been in the Neas report (Schaeffer did not request the Swan transcripts until five days after the report was released, suggesting that People for the American Way did not know about the case before that time). At the hearing, North Carolina Democrat John Edwards interrogated Pickering about Swan, implying that Pickering had gone to unethical lengths to go easy on a white man convicted of burning a cross in the yard of a mixed-race couple.

A week after the hearing, on February 14, Democrat Joseph Biden sent Pickering a series of follow-up questions about Swan. The first question began, "According to court documents . . ." and went on to recount details about the case that were available only in the court documents that Margaret Kinchen had sent to People for the American Way. While it is not clear how Biden learned about the details of Swan, a source close to the senator says Biden's staff first heard of the case "around the time of the People for the American Way press conference" and later got documents on the case "from other committee staffers." On February 15, the day after Biden sent his questions and long after People for the American Way had already gotten the information, Leahy finally asked for a transcript of Swan. By then, the work had been done -- not by the committee, but by People for the American Way.

At each step of the way in the Pickering nomination, Republicans underestimated the nature of the threat that Pickering faced from committee Democrats and, perhaps just as important, from People for the American Way and the rest of the coalition. Unknown to GOP staffers, coalition researchers were far ahead of them -- and Democrats, for that matter -- as they dug into Pickering's record.

One of the reasons Republicans miscalculated the threat was that they knew little about the power and scope of People for the American Way. It is an extraordinarily rich and well-run organization -- two organizations, actually, both of them tax-exempt under Internal Revenue Service rules. One, People for the American Way, is a so-called 501(c)(4) organization -- named for the section of the IRS code that provides for such groups -- that is legally allowed to engage in partisan political activity. The other, the People for the American Way Foundation, is a 501(c)(3) organization, which is allowed to receive tax-deductible donations and which is prohibited by law from engaging in partisan political work. To qualify as a 501(c)(3), groups like the People for the American Way Foundation have to state on their tax forms that they will not engage in any activity "to influence national, state, or local legislation, including any attempt to influence public opinion on a legislative matter or referendum."

Together, the two branches collect an impressive amount of money. According to tax records for the year 2000, People for the American Way took in $5,140,131 in contributions, while the People for the American Way Foundation took in $7,469,722 -- for a total of $12,609,853 in one year alone. Much of that money came in large chunks from wealthy donors. In its 2000 return, the foundation listed anonymous individual donations of $540,000, of $432,488, of $314,058, of $250,000, and many more in the six-figure range (the law requires the foundation to list the donations, but not the names of the donors).

Even though the foundation is forbidden to engage in political lobbying, there appears to be significant overlap between the two arms of People for the American Way. Neas's salary, for example, is paid by both the main group and the foundation. In 2000, he received $79,556 in salary from People for the American Way, the political arm, and $119,335 from the People for the American Way Foundation, the non-partisan arm. The salary of People for the American Way's number-two officer, Carol Blum, was also divided between the two parts of the organization. (Officials of People for the American Way told National Review they were too busy to be interviewed for this article.)

While People for the American Way has an impressive bankroll, it was just one part of the anti-Pickering coalition. To its $12.6 million budget must be added the budgets of groups such as NARAL, NOW, the Alliance for Justice, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the NAACP, and others -- a total that might well approach $50 million.

The numbers point to a striking disparity in the ongoing battle over judicial nominations. On the pro-Republican side, there simply was no group fighting on behalf of Pickering that had anything approaching the coalition's resources. Yes, there are rich conservative organizations like the National Rifle Association and National Right to Life Committee (which also maintain tax-exempt 501(c)(3) arms), but none was deeply involved in the Pickering battle. Instead, there were a few small groups like the newly formed Coalition for a Fair Judiciary, which was created after the near defeat of the John Ashcroft nomination and which operates with one employee, working out of her home in suburban Virginia.

That imbalance virtually assures that the Pickering situation will play out again in the future, with Republicans significantly outgunned in the lobbying battle. Democrats have made no secret of their intention to defeat more of the president's judicial nominees, and People for the American Way and other coalition members are already at work on coming campaigns. The close coordination between committee Democrats and the coalition during the Pickering fight will no doubt be a model for future efforts. What worries many conservatives is that the meagerly funded, poorly organized effort on Pickering's behalf might become a model for the Republican side. If that is the case, it will not be long before Republicans are again left fuming after another bitter defeat.

GOP: Bush nominees treated unfairly

Audrey Hudson
The Washington Times
Wednesday, April 03, 2002

The confirmation process for President Bush's judicial nominees in the Democrat-controlled Senate has taken on a sense of "McCarthyism," a leading Senate Republican said yesterday.

"Are you now or have you ever been a conservative or a member of a conservative organization?" said Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania in an interview, mimicking Sen. Joseph McCarthy's standard line for hunting communists in government in the early 1950s. "That's it; you are disqualified. It's just a different C word." Republicans charge that Judge D. Brooks Smith of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania, Mr. Bush's nominee for a federal 3rd Circuit Appeals Court seat, is the next target for defeat by Senate Democrats.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden, Jr., Delaware Democrat, said he is maintaining an open mind in regards to Judge Smith's confirmation. But Mr. Biden has vowed to kill the nomination if Judge Smith is not completely forthcoming in answers to questions from Senate Democrats during his confirmation process.

"I will do everything in my power to defeat you, including moving to the Senate floor to take action I've never taken in my life as a United States senator: a filibuster," Mr. Biden said during Judge Smith's confirmation hearing Feb. 26. In the 15 months he has been in the White House, Mr. Bush has nominated 29 circuit court judges, and seven have been confirmed. By comparison, in their first two years in office, President Clinton nominated 22 circuit judges with 19 confirmed, President George Bush nominated 23 circuit judges with 22 confirmed, and President Reagan nominated 20 circuit judges with 19 confirmed. Calls to the Judiciary Committee, headed by Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, were not returned.

Before leaving for the Easter recess, Mr. Leahy defended the committee's record on the confirmation process. "We are moving forward as quickly as we can, and I will continue to do that," Mr. Leahy said. "No matter what is said on the other side, no matter how much things are taken out of context, no matter how much fiction we hear on the floor from that side, I will move them forward," Mr. Leahy said. The bruising confirmation process of failed Appeals Court nominee Judge Charles W. Pickering is a preview of what is in store for other conservative members of the bench, Republicans said. "They are on a witch hunt," Mr. Santorum said, referring to Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee. "I am sure that with every nominee who has any kind of conservative credentials, [Democrats] will make a big issue of it. The question is, how many Democrats on the committee will bite?" Mr. Santorum said.

A source close to the Smith confirmation proceedings said that despite the judge's popularity and widespread support in his home state of Pennsylvania, Democrats are intent on blocking or defeating the confirmation. "This is about George Bush and putting Republicans on the bench. It doesn't make any difference who you are; they are going to tailor these things to [hurt] each nominee," the source said.

Mr. Santorum said that in an environment "other than the Leahy jihad," Judge Smith would be approved. The pace of hearings and confirmation votes has angered many Republicans. The Senate has confirmed 42 nominees, and 56 nominations are still pending. Only two hearings have been held on the pending nominations, according to the Justice Department's office of legal policy.

"Almost a year has passed, and President Bush's first eight circuit court nominees have not even received the courtesy of a hearing," said Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, Mississippi Republican. "All we are asking for is that the Senate Judiciary Committee provide fair treatment for these experienced and qualified individuals, and that clearly is not happening," Mr. Lott said.

Democrats are questioning Judge Smith's judicial ethics and recusal from a fraud case. People for the American Way, which led the effort to defeat Judge Pickering, have questioned Judge Smith's record on states' rights, civil rights, the environment and consumer protection.

Liberal groups that oppose conservative nominees became part of the debate over Judge Pickering, and Republicans say they will continue to highlight that influence in other nomination fights.

The Scarlet 'E'; Will 5th Circuit nominee be able to get out from under the Enron cloud?

John Council

REV_00142547

Texas Lawyer
Wednesday, April 3, 2002

As any Washington, D.C., insider will tell you, this is not the best time to be an elected official with connections to the sinking Enron Corp.

Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen is finding that out. Owen is entering the political fray as she seeks confirmation to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. She can expect a thorough audit of her background during a congressional nomination hearing, including questions about an opinion she wrote in 1996 that favored the controversial energy trading company. The spotlight likely won't be pleasant, as 5th Circuit nominee Charles Pickering recently discovered when he was targeted for his civil rights rulings.

Among the first of President George W. Bush's federal appellate bench nominees named on May 9, 2001, Owen has not received a hearing date from the Senate Judiciary Committee. The committee must vote to confirm Owen's nomination, followed by a confirmation vote by the full Senate, for her to take the federal appellate bench.

It's unclear if Owen will even receive a hearing this year. But concern over her nomination is so dire that Owen supporter Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, pleaded in a speech on the Senate floor March 20 that the Senate give Owen a hearing and confirm her.

"I just want to ask that we have a fair hearing on Justice Owen," Hutchison said.

Hutchison's remarks came after Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., was quoted by Reuters as saying that Owen's past with Enron may put her nomination in jeopardy.

"I have heard from a lot of Republicans who are concerned about her Enron connections," said Leahy, who chairs the Democrat-controlled committee, two weeks ago.

David Carl, a spokesman for Leahy, says Owen will get a hearing -- but he can't say when.

Leahy's comment was that the Senate would have to examine Owen's Enron past as well as her record, Carl says. "He outlined the good faith the Democrats were taking to break the deadlock over the past five or six years. He named her as an example."

Meanwhile, activist groups have jumped all over Owen's nomination, harping about her conservative record.

Leading the activists' list of concerns is Owen's 1996 opinion in Enron Corp., et al. v. Spring Independent School District, which allowed the company to get a tax break. The groups point out that Owen also has accepted thousands in donations to her Texas Supreme Court campaign from Houston's Enron.

But conservative groups say Owen is an outstanding candidate whose nomination is being blocked by Democrats on the contentious Judiciary Committee just because she will not toe their ideological line.

Texas appellate lawyers who know Owen say she's a judge who wears her conservative philosophy on her sleeve. But she also maintains the highest standard of ethics and doesn't deserve to be smeared with Enron mud, they say.

Even the plaintiff's lawyer who was on the losing side of Enron v. Spring ISD -- a complicated analysis of a Tax Code provision that dealt with what date the market value of inventory could be appraised -- says attempts to discredit Owen because of the ruling are "nonsense."

"This is a bunch of crap is what it is," says Robert Mott, a partner in Houston's Perdue, Brandon, Fielder, Collins & Mott who represented Spring ISD. "To suggest that Justice Owen would rule this way based on a campaign contribution is just nonsense."

Mott says the ruling was reflective of the conservative nature of the court at the time.

Interestingly, the opinion, although written by Owen, was unanimous with all nine jurists -- even Democratic Justices Rose Spector and Raul Gonzalez -- joining in the decision.

Owen declines to comment for this article.

ACTIVISTS CONVERGE

Just as activists this year targeted 5th Circuit nominee Charles Pickering for his civil rights rulings, groups from Texas say they plan to protest against Owen as well.

The Judiciary Committee shot down Pickering's nomination in March in a party-line 10-9 vote. Civil rights activists opposed his nomination and pointed to a case in which Pickering, a U.S. district judge in Mississippi, sought a lighter sentence for a defendant tried on a cross-burning charge -- a case Republicans say was misinterpreted by Pickering's opponents.

There's no indication that Owen's confirmation hearing will be as contentious -- Pickering was called back by the committee for a second hearing so members could further research his rulings, which is rare.

But activists from consumer, environmental and abortion rights groups such as Texans for Public Justice, the Sierra Club and the Texas Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League say they plan to converge on Washington this month to discuss Owen's record with members of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Given Congress' obsession with Enron, questions about Owen's connection to the fallen energy trading giant will likely be a priority for Judiciary Committee members.

REV_00142549

Representatives from Texans for Public Justice, a consumer judicial watchdog group, will make sure of that.

"The connections to Enron and the judge's raising huge amounts of money from them will be troubling to some senators and will be raised," says Craig McDonald, director of Texans for Public Justice. "That's my belief. I've given them materials and background."

Included in that material is the group's report on money Texas Supreme Court justices received from Enron. Since 1993, the company contributed $134,058 to the justices -- $8,600 of that went to Owen, who was elected to the high court in 1994.

But a leader of a Washington conservative think tank believes the smell of Enron won't stick to Owen once it's put in context.

"That contribution was in full compliance with the rules of ethics," says John Nowacki, director of legal policy at the Free Congress Foundation. "I think she's shown on that issue that she's in the mainstream of Texas contribution laws."

Owen is falling victim to liberal interest groups who want to turn circuit court nomination hearings into the raucous, ideological process that's normally reserved for nominees to the Supreme Court, Nowacki says.

"There's been a deliberate effort by the liberal interest groups to turn the circuit court nominations into something resembling the Supreme Court nomination process," Nowacki says. "It all boils down to politics. The Democrats have made it very clear that they want judicial candidates that reflect their point of view."

Tactics such as those used against Pickering eventually will backfire as the public discovers there is little substance behind the activists' allegations, Nowacki says. He believes Owen eventually will be confirmed.

"I think if people start to realize that the only time [candidates] get defeated is when the Democrats are in control, they'll realize that it's plain politics," Nowacki says. "And Leahy will realize it looks plain bad."

Enron isn't the only issue that disturbs activists. Sarah Wheat, director of public affairs for the Texas Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League, says her group plans to meet with senators this month.

Wheat's group is troubled by Owen's dissenting opinions in a series of rulings in early 2000 that interpreted Texas' abortion parental notification law. In a March 2000 opinion, In Re Jane Doe 3, Owen voted to reject a minor's request for a judicial bypass -- even though the girl claimed that informing her parents about her desire to get an abortion would lead to "emotional abuse." Owen wrote in a dissent that the girl had not proved that she would be subjected to abuse.

Notes Wheat, "She sends out red flags for a lot of us."

HOMEFRONT SUPPORT

Notably, the people who know Owen best and who've practiced in front of her are not the ones complaining about her reputation or her abilities as a judge.

Owen, who graduated at the top of her class from Baylor University School of Law in 1977, received a "well qualified" rating (the highest possible) by the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Judiciary on June 21, 2001.

"In terms of the intellectual firepower, she's got it," says Douglas Alexander, an appellate specialist and partner in Austin, Texas' Scott, Douglass & McConnico. "In terms of whether you agree with her conservative philosophy or bent, that's a completely different question and that's what's sparking a lot of the opposition."

But Alexander says there's no hint that Owen's decisions ever have been influenced by campaign donations.

"Any notion of Priscilla deciding a case based on a campaign contribution -- I don't attribute anything to that," Alexander says. "I don't doubt that things like that are going to be dragged out, but I don't think that's a legitimate concern."

David Keltner, a Fort Worth, Texas, appellate specialist and former 2nd Court of Appeals justice, agrees.

"I'm a Democrat, and I sometimes disagree with her political philosophy, but she comes about it honestly," Keltner says.

Keltner says partisanship is once again affecting the administration of federal justice. He points to two other 5th Circuit nominees of former President Bill Clinton's -- Jorge Rangel of Corpus Christi and Enrique Moreno of El Paso, Texas -- who never got a hearing before the judiciary committee.

"We need to get these people heard and out. We need judges in federal courts desperately," Keltner says. "And the people that are withholding those votes are wrong. It's affecting the practice of law in Texas, and it's wrong."

As the Senate takes its time filling two vacant 5th Circuit spots, the judges on that court continue to struggle to keep up with a heavy caseload. The court had 8,616 appeals filed last year and as of June 30, 2001, the most recent figures available, the court had 4,533 appeals awaiting disposition.

More often than not, the 5th Circuit uses visiting judges on three-member panels when it issues decisions.

"The number of the visiting judges that sit on the 5th Circuit are indicative of a heavy workload," says Gregory Nussel, circuit executive of the 5th Circuit.

While Texas' two U.S. senators have great influence in helping select and confirm U.S. district judges assigned to Texas, they have little, if any, power in helping select circuit judges. The president has the sole responsibility to select circuit judges.

While Hutchison pleaded Owen's case on the Senate floor, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, has been silent on the matter, although he supports Owen's nomination, says Gramm spokesman Larry Neal.

Neal says Gramm would only speak out on behalf of Owen if he was asked to by Owen or Bush.

"To my knowledge, he had not been asked to make statements," Neal says. "And it's a good policy because sometimes your friends do more damage than good."

Jacksonian chutzpah

Rod Dreher
Scripps Howard News Service
April 4, 2002, Thursday

Nobody has ever erred by accusing Jesse Jackson of a surfeit of chutzpah, but many people won't grasp why his offer to mediate between the Palestinians and the Israelis is so outrageous as to beggar belief. It's like this: What if, during the Republican-Democrat battle royal in Florida, Alec Baldwin had presented himself as an honest broker able to bring both sides to mutual understanding? Jackson's offer makes as much sense.

Jesse's love affair with Yasser Arafat is well-documented by Kenneth Timmerman in "Shakedown," and will come as news to folks who think Jackson's only brush with Jew-bashing was his infamous "Hymietown" remark in 1984.

In August of 1979, Carter sacked Andrew Young, his ambassador to the United Nations, after the black former mayor of Atlanta met privately with the Palestinian Liberation Organization's man at the United Nations.. Jackson, a friend of Young's, publicly insinuated that Jews brought down Young, and complained that Jews were false friends of blacks. A month later, Jackson announced he would go to Beirut to meet with Arafat, who was living in exile there. Citing media reports at the time, Timmerman quotes Jackson as telling Arab-American supporters gathered at PUSH headquarters: "By Oct. 1, there will be no black leader left willing to come to the aid of the Palestinian cause if there is not an immediate infusion of funds into the black community from the Arab states."

Two weeks later, Jackson and his entourage took off for Israel on a junket paid for by Arab donors. When Israeli prime minister Menachem Begin failed to turn up at the airport, an insulted Jackson gave a news conference in which he intimated that racism might be behind the snub. Days later, Jackson visited Yad Vashem, the national memorial to Holocaust victims, where he equated the incineration of six million Jews to American slavery.

Newsweek quoted Jackson as saying that "a persecution complex ...almost invariably makes Jews overreact to their own suffering."

Then Jackson lit out to visit Palestinians in the fetid Dheisheh refugee camp. "I know this camp," he preached. "When I smell the stench of the open sewers, this is nothing new to me. This is where I grew up." (Actually, he grew up in relative comfort in North Carolina.)

Two American Jews who had helped arrange for Jackson's trip quit in disgust. One of them, publisher Philip Blazer, said Jackson was piggybacking on the plight of the Palestinians to raise money for his own interests. Even the Rev. Harold Schomer, a left-wing cleric who accompanied Jackson, noted in his private journal that the Arab states were trying to use the Jackson fact-finding trip to weaken U.S. backing of Israel, and to legitimize the PLO.

When Jackson finally met Arafat in Lebanon, he gave him a big kiss and declared the terrorist "my friend and the friend of justice and humanity." Two years later, Israeli forces invaded Lebanon in an attempt to drive out PLO terrorists mounting attacks on Israel from Lebanese soil. The Israelis, commanded by Gen. Ariel Sharon, drove Arafat into exile.

Jackson arrived home and was greeted by a hailstorm of criticism for having succored the Soviet-proxy PLO, and endangered domestic relations between blacks and Jews. The indignant Jackson blamed - who else? - Jews in the media.

Happily for Jackson, his pro-Arafat sojourn opened the floodgates of Arab money into PUSH coffers. A $10,000 check from a Libyan diplomat nearly earned him an FBI subpoena. In 1981, a fat donation from the Arab League made up 80 percent of the funds Jackson raised for his group that year; Jackson said he didn't know a thing about it.

Jackson's most notorious anti-Semitic comment came in 1984, when he made what he assumed was an off-the-record comment to a black reporter in which he called Jews "Hymies" and New York "Hymietown." He publicly apologized and has been largely excused by the media, even as he insists that whites like the recently defeated Charles Pickering are unfit for government office because of racist views they might have held 40 years ago.

Still, the record of this man who offers himself as a peacemaker between the Israelis and the Palestinians bears remembering. All things considered, Alec Baldwin would stand a better chance.(Rod Dreher is a senior writer for National Review.)

JUDGES: Pickering and Choosing

National Review
Monday April 8, 2002

Republicans are in high dudgeon about the treatment of Judge Charles Pickering, whose nomination to an appeals court was defeated by ten Senate Democrats in a party-line vote of the Judiciary Committee. But Pickering was treated badly by both parties. Democrats made scurrilous attacks on him, and Republicans did not defend him until it was too late. The Democrats themselves seem to be somewhat embarrassed by their tactics, as witness their efforts to squirm away from them. Sens. Charles Schumer and Patrick Leahy insist that nobody ever insinuated that Pickering was a racist. Of course not: When Terry McAuliffe said that President Bush was trying to "disenfranchise" black voters in Mississippi by nominating Pickering, it was all in good fun. Liberal columnist E. J. Dionne Jr. admits that "the anti-Pickering campaign did get ugly," but his spin is that Democrats ended up opposing him on defensible grounds -- e.g., the fact that his decisions have been "so often reversed on appeal." Except that this fact is not a fact at all: Pickering's reversal rate is lower than the average in his circuit or in the nation. Late in the day, liberals -- notably Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California -- also made the argument that Bush had no mandate and therefore should not be allowed to stack the courts with conservatives. (She also took the curious view that Pickering would be able to overturn Roe v. Wade from a circuit court of appeals.) The pattern of attack is the same one exhibited in the confirmation hearings for attorney general John Ashcroft last year: First, a few scattered decisions are used to portray the nominee as anti-black; once the poison has been released into the atmosphere, its very existence is denied. The Democrats do not really believe that Pickering (or Ashcroft) is a racist, of course; in 1990, Pickering was unanimously approved for the district judgeship he now holds. But he was a target of convenience, being a white male Republican from Mississippi of a certain age, as Ashcroft was a target of convenience as a white male fundamentalist Christian. By voting down Pickering, Democrats handed the president (and Pickering's friend Trent Lott) a defeat; elicited donations for liberal interest groups; and sought to make the president think twice before nominating conservatives, or at least opponents of liberal orthodoxy on abortion, in the future. The Democratic onslaught caught Republicans napping. The White House viewed Pickering as Lott's concern and intervened too late. Senate Republicans were little better, becoming engaged only when it was fairly clear Pickering was going down. Byron York's reporting for National Review Online did more to counter Democratic distortions than any of them did. Even now, they are focusing on procedural rather than substantive issues. They are quite right to chastise the Democrats for not allowing a full Senate vote on Pickering. But the more important point is the need for constitutionalist judges. Bush should not bow to the Democrats' intimidation by refraining from nominating such judges. The Democrats' demand for "moderate" judges is in any case phony. The federal judiciary is still, on balance, an instrument of the Left. Moderate judges in the context of the liberal legal academy are those who overturn laws in favor of liberal whims only some of the time, and who allow previous acts of liberal usurpation from the bench to stand. The public is neither enamored of liberal judges nor afraid of conservative ones. If the Democrats want to keep blocking the latter, Bush should call their obstruction to the attention of voters in the Senate races this fall.

Virginia Thomas is using her husband's trials for advancement

Steven Lubet
Fulton County Daily Report
April 2, 2002 Tuesday

Virginia Thomas, the wife of Justice Clarence Thomas, recently published an op-ed in The Wall Street Journal that expressed sympathy for Judge Charles Pickering Sr., President Bush's now-defeated nominee to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Drawing upon her experience during her husband's stormy confirmation hearings, Thomas urged Pickering not to take his rejection personally. "It helps," she wrote, "to find your faith and be reminded that you are not called to be popular, but rather to have integrity."

But Thomas did not limit herself to commiseration. Instead, her March 14 commentary launched a sharp attack on feminists, civil rights groups and "the hard left." Then, leaving no doubt where she stood, she lambasted Senate Democrats in highly ideological terms.

Thomas said that the Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee don't think of Pickering "as human right now." She said that "facts matter little" to Senate Democrats, who are "impervious to the truth." Their opposition to Pickering, she also noted, "doesn't hurt their fund-raising efforts." She claimed that the Democrats' strategy was to "influence votes, scare off conservatives from being nominated, being defended or even applying for such positions in public service." These are political thunderbolts of a sort we have never before seen hurled by the spouse of a sitting Supreme Court justice. Whether one agrees or disagrees with Thomas on the merits, it was surprising to see a Supreme Court spouse make such a pronounced entry into the political fray. Her essay was published on the morning that the Judiciary Committee was scheduled to vote on the Pickering nomination, which was understood to be headed toward defeat. Republicans felt that the nominee was being victimized by scorched-earth tactics, and no one was better suited to expose the smear than Thomas, who had lived through her own confirmation ordeal.

So what do we make of it that Virginia Thomas so very publicly weighed in on such an intensely political controversy?

In the wake of the Florida election fiasco, it is more important than ever to hold the Supreme Court scrupulously neutral in political disputes, both in fact and in appearance.

Critics claim that the five-vote majority in Bush v. Gore was motivated more by political affinity than by constitutional law, sometimes referring to a report that Justice Sandra Day O'Connor reacted with audible dismay when it first appeared that Al Gore would carry Florida and win the presidency. Defenders, of course, argue that the majority opinion was rigorously correct, unaffected by any motive other than the strict desire to follow the Constitution.

In any case, it should be obvious to all that the court's legitimacy depends greatly upon its perceived detachment. If the justices come to be regarded as political players, their opinions will be seen as instrumental rather than principled. Thus it is axiomatic that the court must remain painstakingly aloof from political combat.

But to what extent does that axiom apply to the spouses?

In one sense, of course, it does not pertain at all. Apart from some financial disclosure requirements, the ethical rules that constrain judges simply do not apply to their spouses. And any effort to impose a spousal gag rule surely would run afoul of the First Amendment.

Consequently, Virginia Thomas is legally entitled to write whatever she pleases. She is an exceptionally capable professional, with an important career completely independent of her husband's job. She has much to say on many issues, and it would be absolutely wrong to insist that she, or any other spouse, live a life of public silence.

Wiser Heads

But that does not end the discussion, since the public conduct of spouses does have the potential to compromise the court. Imagine the furor that would have followed if John O'Connor or Martin Ginsburg actively had campaigned for their preferred presidential candidates in the 2000 election. Although the First Amendment surely protects that activity, it would have been a disaster for the court-no doubt prompting demands that O'Connor and Ruth Bader Ginsburg recuse themselves in Bush v. Gore.

The Supreme Court is a fragile institution, dependent on its reputation, and often best served by the voluntary circumspection of those connected to it. A decent respect for the court's neutrality-in both reality and appearance-counsels self-restraint.

The spouses of most justices seem to recognize this. For example, Martin Ginsburg, a prominent tax attorney, divested himself of perfectly legitimate investments in order to avoid even an appearance of judicial partiality.

Which brings us to Virginia Thomas and her appearance on the op-ed page of The Wall Street Journal.

Unique in the history of Supreme Court spouses, Thomas has been an active political player during her husband's entire tenure on the court. She served as senior policy coordinator for the House Republican Conference and later became a top adviser to Republican Majority Leader Richard K. Armey. She is currently director of executive branch relations for the conservative Heritage Foundation.

In each of those positions, Thomas wisely had refrained from open politicking. With her Wall Street Journal op-ed, however, she has broken another barrier, invoking her husband's name in what can be seen only as an effort to sway public opinion against Democrats and in favor of the Republican administration.

In a nutshell, Thomas showed dreadfully poor judgment in publishing that particular op-ed. It would have been a different matter if she merely had written a pro-Pickering essay or if she had written a piece about the travails of confirmation without resorting to partisan invective. Instead, she intentionally capitalized on Justice Thomas' position in order to score political points.

We do not know whether Virginia Thomas consulted anyone about her op-ed. We should assume, to be sure, that Justice Thomas had no part in it. But questions, at least in skeptical quarters, are unavoidable. Husbands and wives do tend to talk to each other about important matters. Is it out of place to wonder whether Virginia Thomas, about to take the seemingly unprecedented step of going public on a political controversy, might have asked her husband whether he had any concerns? Might she have mentioned the op-ed to him? Even without any input from the justice into the content, that possibility may create the appearance of his tacit approval.

Of course, the supposition could be completely wrong. Perhaps Justice Thomas was more surprised than anyone else to see his wife's byline in The Wall Street Journal. If so, both Thomases must have been shocked to see the column illustrated by a picture of Justice Thomas himself, presumably inserted by a Journal editor (likely unbeknownst to the writer) lest anyone miss the connection.

Using the Court

A federal statute prohibits a Supreme Court justice from sitting in any case in which his or her spouse has a nonfinancial "interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding." Until March 14, no one would have suggested that Virginia Thomas' political affiliations should disqualify Justice Thomas from participating in any case, even one that determined, say, the presidency of the United States. But after her recent foray into open partisan warfare, the situation may well have changed.

It is not likely that we ever again will see a Supreme Court spouse who doesn't lead an independent life in one realm or another. It would be unacceptable to place formal limits on their activities, but it is not too much to request some prudence.

Yes, Virginia Thomas has the right to say whatever she chooses. It's just too bad that she didn't choose to keep the Supreme Court out of it.

Judge Pickering deserves position

The Myrtle Beach Sun-News
April 2, 2002 Tuesday

U.S. SENATE

On March 14, the Democrat-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee voted against the nomination of [U.S. District] Judge Charles Pickering [for the U.S. Court of Appeals].

This action was contrary to what the American Bar Association had to say, as well as leading blacks in Mississippi.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., stated that Pickering does not have "the temperament, the moderation or the commitment to core constitutional ... protections that is required for a life tenure position."

Kennedy, who is widely known for his excessive drinking and womanizing, should not be standing in our most sacred halls and calling [names].

[Neither] Kennedy nor any of the other Democratic senators can hold a candle to Pickering's morals and ethics.

The Reynolds recess appointment

April 02, 2002, Tuesday

It had been more than six months since President Bush selected Gerald A. Reynolds to be assistant secretary of education for civil rights, but Mr. Reynolds, the former president of the Center for New Black Leadership (CNBL), still had not received a vote on his nomination in the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions. In fact, the committee, which is chaired by Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy, never managed to give Mr. Reynolds the consideration of a hearing until Feb. 26.

It should hardly be surprising, therefore, that Mr. Bush decided last week to elevate Mr. Reynolds in a recess appointment. Mr. Reynolds' official arrival at the Office of Civil Rights in the Department of Education cannot come a minute too soon. After all, his predecessor during the Clinton administration, Norma Cantu, was an overbearing activist who willfully disregarded court rulings. It was particularly important for the president to act, given the highly politicized campaign that was being orchestrated against Mr. Reynolds. Once he was nominated, a slew of self-appointed guardians of civil-rights coalesced, determined to thwart the Senate's confirmation of a young conservative black attorney to the position that Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas once held. The usual suspects were involved, including the NAACP, People for the American Way, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the National Organization for Women, etc. However, after it became apparent that Mr. Reynolds would be confirmed by the entire Senate, Mr. Kennedy angled to defeat the nomination in his committee, just as the Senate Judiciary Committee had used a party-line vote to derail the appeals court nomination of Judge Charles Pickering.

When Mr. Reynolds explained at the committee's hearing on Feb. 26 that he intended to enforce existing civil-rights laws, Mr. Kennedy bellowed, "Don't pander to me." Subsequently, Mr. Kennedy, whose expulsion from Harvard for cheating did not preclude him from becoming chairman of the Senate committee responsible for education, audaciously declared that he was "struck by Mr. Reynolds' lack of policy experience and his longstanding hostility to basic civil-rights laws."

Mr. Kennedy's partisan assertions nothwithstanding, Mr. Reynolds knew what he was talking about. As CNBL president, he told the committee, he focused on "the significant achievement gap between white and black students," arguing that "we need to expand the concept of civil rights so that it includes improving the quality of education for America's disadvantaged children."

"To limit an individual's education," Mr. Reynolds persuasively argued at his hearing, "is to limit his freedom." And he added, "A sound education is the fastest, and sometimes the only, way out of poverty." Now is the time for him to pursue the CNBL's innovative ideas, which members of the old guard have spent their careers blocking in order to preserve the failures of the status quo.

Battle over federal seats ignores the middle ground

The Detroit Free Press
Tuesday April 2, 2002

Don't look for the fight over federal judges to simmer down any time soon. At least not based on the rhetoric coming from the White House.

"We're going to have more fights when it comes to the judiciary," President George W. Bush said last week, declaring he would send more "good, conservative judges" to the Senate for confirmation.

REV_00142559

Conservatives are his prerogative, but ideologues are not. The president seems to be looking for trouble from the Democrat-controlled Senate that rejected Mississippi Judge Charles Pickering.

Instead, Bush -- and Democrats -- should stake out more middle ground. The Senate has approved 41 of the 90 candidates Bush has submitted since July; Pickering was the only reject.

With advice and consent privileges, the Senate has a responsibility to ensure the nation's courts remain balanced and nominees don't have political agendas far out of the mainstream.

That does not mean Senate Democrats should engage in the delaying tactics Republicans used during the Clinton years. Only 35 percent of the former president's nominees got the courtesy of a hearing; Michigan Appeals Court Judge Helene White and Detroit attorney Kathleen McCree Lewis were left on the sidelines.

Bush should aim to fill the depleted bench. That requires working with folks on both sides. The breezy confirmation of his nominees from Nebraska, Montana and Iowa should have shown him the way. Nominees succeeded with ease because both of each state's senators -- one from each party -- could sign off on solid, but not extreme, conservatives.

To fill the bench, the president should reach out to Democrats with an extended hand, not an angry fist.

Israeli Forces Occupy More of West Bank; Are Americans Rude?

CNN
SHOW: CNN INSIDE POLITICS
April 3, 2002 Wednesday

JUDY WOODRUFF, CNN ANCHOR: I'm Judy Woodruff in Washington. Israeli forces move into more areas of the West Bank as the pressure and the protests spread across the Middle East.

CANDY CROWLEY, CNN SR. POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT: I'm Candy Crowley, Some conservatives may find fault with the president, but at the end of the day, he's still their man. ... finance reform, amnesty for illegal immigrants, and steel tariffs: Those are issues that have divided President Bush and some conservative leaders recently. But does that translate into disaffection among rank-and-file conservative voters?

Our Candy Crowley has been looking into that question.

(BEGIN VIDEOTAPE)

NORTH: I'm Oliver North. This is Radio America.

CANDY CROWLEY, CNN SR. POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT (voice-over): Wonder what conservatives complain about now that Bill Clinton has left the scene? Answer: George Bush.

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: We are in 62 countries right now, Ollie. We need to get the hell out. We need to close our doors and be isolationists.

CROWLEY: Conservative talk radio is where the grassroots go to vent.

ELDER: KABC, Larry Elder here. And my guess is the president of the NRA, Charlton Heston, of course.

CROWLEY: And from D.C. to L.A., lately, conservatives have found a lot to vent about.

ELDER: The issue that I think bothers most conservatives is the president's inexplicable support of campaign finance reform.

NORTH: There is some concern ...

ELDER: It was a big mistake to apply tariffs on certain imported steel goods.

NORTH: The idea of amnesty for illegal aliens set people's temperature just off the charts.

CROWLEY: Not to mention an education bill conservatives thought looked more Ted Kennedy than George Bush, what some saw as a too-late, too-tepid defense of doomed judicial nominee Charles Pickering, and that new federal budget, with 9 percent more spending, including an increase in foreign aid.

What's up here? Some conservatives fear it's poll numbers.

STEVEN MOORE, CLUB FOR GROWTH: It's almost as if, ever since 9/11, Bush has become -- has sort of transcended party. He's not even a Republican anymore. He's the president of all the people. And he is trying to make this full 80 percent happy.

CROWLEY: Asked if he worries about complaints from conservatives, one top Bush politico said: "Every single day. It is something you have to monitor." And that job falls primarily to the president's chief political strategist.

MOORE: Karl Rove will rush in and talk to the conservative groups and say: "Look, George W.

Bush feels your pain. He is going to be with you on these things."

CROWLEY: So far, so good: Dissent has not meant desertion.

CHARLTON HESTON, PRESIDENT, NRA: The conservatives will still turn out, because he is the only guy we've got. And I think -- by and large, I think he has been doing a good job.

CROWLEY: It is the half-a-loaf-is-better-than-none theory applied to politics. The head of the National Rifle Association has gone to court to overturn the campaign finance reform that George Bush signed into saw.

WAYNE LAPIERRE, NRA: I wished he'd vetoed it. Is that going to make Wayne cheer any less when I'm in a crowd and they introduce him? Probably not.

CROWLEY: The truth is, there are three primary things that give George Bush maneuvering room with conservatives: the war on terrorism; the tax cut he pushed through last year; and the fact that he is not Bill Clinton. And the greatest of these is the war.

LAPIERRE: The fact is, we are six months away from the worst terrorist attack in America's history. And I think he's done a fabulous job.

(END VIDEOTAPE)

CROWLEY: "Conservatives," said one of them, "will swallow hard on a lot of issues right now because of the war." But he warned the Bush administration not to downplay conservative grumblings. The source added there is a danger of arrogance that comes with high poll numbers. "We know," responded one Bush insider. "We hear them" -- Judy.

WOODRUFF: Candy, is there one issue out there, one thing that would really be a relationship breaker for conservatives and the president?

CROWLEY: What I really gather, from talking to a lot of conservatives over the past couple of days is, look, as long as the war seems to be going well, as long as the economy seems to be getting better, he's fine. If there's a double-dip ...

... It's like the overriding issue right now is the war and the economy. If that starts to fall apart, there's a problem.

WOODRUFF: As long as those two things continue, it is almost as if anything the president does, he'll survive, right?

CROWLEY: Well, and they know that this is calibrated very carefully. One conservative said to me: "We understand there's an election coming up. We understand he didn't want to spend a lot of political capital on campaign finance reform." So, yes, he's calibrating this carefully. I don't think he's going to go out and do something right in their face. But he's got some room there.

REV_00142562

WOODRUFF: OK, Candy Crowley, thank you. We appreciate it.

And checking the headlines in our "Campaign News Daily": The former stripper-turned-Colorado town mayor is out of a job. Voters in tiny Georgetown, Colorado recalled Mayor ...

Strange Justice: The liberal coalition that killed the Pickering nomination

Byron York
National Review
Monday April 8, 2002

Late in the afternoon on Thursday, March 14, in a crowded hallway in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, Bruce Cohen, a top aide to Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Patrick Leahy, warmly greeted Elizabeth Cavendish, the legal director and general counsel of the National Abortion Rights Action League. "Thank you," said Cohen. "No, thank you!" said Cavendish, smiling and grasping Cohen's hand.

The cause of the smiling and thanking was the defeat, just minutes earlier, of the nomination of Charles Pickering to a place on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. The committee's narrow Democratic majority, led by Leahy, killed the nomination on a 10-9 party-line vote. What made the exchange between Cohen and Cavendish noteworthy was that a good deal of the debate leading up to the vote had concerned the role that liberal groups such as NARAL, People for the American Way, NOW, the Alliance for Justice, and the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights were playing in the opposition to the Pickering nomination.

Republicans charged that the groups -- which have formed a coalition to oppose Bush nominees -- were working in close coordination with committee Democrats. "Judge Pickering has been viciously attacked by outside, left-wing, liberal groups," said Iowa Republican Charles Grassley, "and unfortunately, the Democratic party has been more than willing to do the bidding of these groups, here in the Senate, to oppose Judge Pickering." It's a charge Republicans have made for years, at least since the days of the Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas confirmation battles. But for all their anger -- and there was plenty in the room during the Pickering vote -- Republicans have never really offered much evidence to support their allegations. Yes, groups in the coalition are powerful and well funded -- People for the American Way's budget dwarfs those of the groups that tried to defend Pickering -- but do they really exercise inordinate influence on the Democratic senators who cast votes on the Judiciary Committee? It's a question that is impossible to answer definitively -- no senator would admit that he follows the coalition's lead -- but a close look at events during the Pickering battle suggests that the groups did indeed work in particularly close collaboration with Democrats. Coalition members, especially People for the American Way, did much of the groundwork for the case against Pickering, acting as the de facto research arm of the committee's Democratic majority. More important, Democrats seemed unusually responsive to the coalition's concerns; throughout the confirmation fight, Leahy's actions, along with those of many of his colleagues, closely tracked demands made by the coalition.

In one instance, Democrats announced plans to hold a rare second hearing for Pickering almost immediately after the coalition demanded that they do so (and at a time when there was no grassroots outcry to delay the nomination or to give it unusually close scrutiny). In another instance, Democrats abandoned tentative plans to move ahead on Pickering's confirmation after the groups demanded the nomination be delayed again to allow them more time to delve into Pickering's record. And in yet a third instance, Democrats, when questioning Pickering, appear to have relied extensively on documents gathered by People for the American Way rather than the committee's own researchers.

Together, the coalition and their Democratic allies mounted an extraordinarily effective campaign against Pickering. While that fight is now over, the groups are preparing for bigger battles to come. Taking a detailed look at the coalition's involvement in the Pickering nomination provides a preview of what will happen in the coming confirmation conflicts over some of President Bush's most anticipated appellate-court nominees -- as well as what is expected to be the biggest fight of all, the battle over the next justice named to the Supreme Court.

President Bush nominated Pickering on May 25, 2001, making him among the administration's earliest choices for the federal bench. Pickering, who had served eleven years on the U.S. District Court in Mississippi, quickly completed his Senate questionnaire and FBI background check, and by July 23, 2001, the American Bar Association finished its detailed evaluation of his time on the bench, giving him its highest rating: "well qualified." Republicans had hoped that Leahy would hold a confirmation hearing for Pickering before the August recess, but none was scheduled. After Congress returned to work, the events of September 11 led to more delays. Finally, a hearing was set for October 18.

The nomination received almost no media attention; the papers were filled with news of the war on terrorism and, in the days before the hearing, the anthrax scare on Capitol Hill. But away from the headlines, People for the American Way had begun a campaign against the nomination. On October 15, the group sent out an urgent e-mail to its "activist network" headlined "controversial hearing should be postponed or extended." The e-mail said that "serious questions have been raised about [Pickering's] record on civil rights and reproductive choice." It said Pickering had "hundreds of published and unpublished opinions that should be reviewed," and that a hearing on October 18 would "make it difficult to fully research Judge Pickering's complete record." The e-mail urged liberal activists to get in touch with committee senators to "demand that Judge Pickering's hearing be postponed or extended to a second session."

Second hearings for judicial nominees are highly unusual, though not unprecedented. What was perhaps more unusual was for a group to suggest a second hearing before a first had been held. But the day after the People for the American Way e-mail, Leahy's staff laid the groundwork for a second session by asking Pickering to provide a list of all of his unpublished opinions as quickly as possible. The judge was astonished; his nomination had been announced nearly five months earlier, and Democrats had waited until two days before the confirmation hearing to make such a far-reaching request. Pickering responded that he had written opinions in about 1,100 cases -- of which only about 95 were published -- and could not possibly get them all together in two days.

The issue of unpublished opinions caught Republicans unaware. Judges decide when to publish their opinions; court guidelines suggest that judges like Pickering, whose cases do not often set legal precedents, limit the amount of opinions they publish to cases that either explore new legal ground or are particularly interesting in some way. That Pickering would publish 95 opinions in more than a decade on the bench seemed normal to his Republican supporters. The number was actually higher than that of some of President Clinton's nominees who had been confirmed to the U.S. circuit courts (one of them published 49 opinions in six years on the district court; another published 109 opinions in 14 years on the bench; a third published 76 cases in 16 years). Democrats had not raised objections then, but in Pickering's case Leahy wanted a list of everything. Pickering sent as much as he could to Leahy the next day, October 17.

On the 18th, the hearing was presided over by New York Democrat Charles Schumer, who had made news a few months earlier when he held a series of hearings designed to explore a new standard for evaluating judicial nominees on the basis of their ideology, regardless of their qualifications for the bench. The first issue Schumer brought up with Pickering was the unpublished opinions: "My opinion is 95 is a little too few to choose somebody for the court of appeals." Schumer told Pickering that he and Leahy had decided that there would be a second hearing, after a review of the unpublished opinions.

Republicans were dumbstruck. They had not seen the People for the American Way e-mail and did not know that Leahy and Schumer were even considering a second hearing, much less that they had agreed on one. Schumer's announcement was clearly an ominous development for Pickering, but at the time most Republicans did not believe Democrats intended to kill the nomination. "I just assumed that they were gonna beat him up a little bit for the outside groups," says one top aide.

After the first hearing, Democrats ratcheted up their requests for Pickering's unpublished opinions. First Leahy had asked for a list of all the opinions. Then, immediately after the hearing, he asked for the opinions themselves in cases involving abortion, the Voting Rights Act, the Fair Housing Act, equal protection, and a few other issues. Leahy later asked Pickering for unpublished opinions on cases involving the Violence Against Women Act, the Fourth Amendment, and the Eleventh Amendment. Finally, in a November 13 letter, Leahy asked for all of Pickering's unpublished opinions.

At that point, it would have been reasonable for Republicans to go into full emergency mode; but they still believed there was reason to remain cautiously confident that Pickering would be confirmed. During November and December, minority leader (and Pickering friend) Trent Lott spoke with Leahy on more than one occasion about the nomination, and, according to two key aides, Democrats gave Republican leaders reason to believe that Pickering would be approved before the Senate went home for its year-end recess.

But the coalition had other plans. On December 6, leaders of the Ms. Foundation for Women held a conference call with some other coalition leaders, including representatives from the Alliance for Justice, a close ally of People for the American Way. According to notes made of the call, an Alliance official told the group:

There will be a MAJOR fight in January over Charles Pickering . . . He has a troubling record on civil and reproductive rights. He wrote [the decision] to preserve the state senate as all-white. All integrated marriages are illegal. Wants to ban abortion. Has a record he wants to hide -- he does not have a lot of published opinions . . . We can win on that fight, but it will be nasty and contentious.

When one highly placed GOP staffer heard about the conference call, he phoned a Leahy aide to see what was going on. Something had changed; this time, there was no talk of confirmation. "At that point, alarm bells are going off," recalls the staffer. "They're talking about going to jihad, and they haven't read the opinions yet."

As the days ticked down to the Senate's adjournment, Republicans realized there would be no quick second hearing, and no vote on Pickering before Congress went home for the holidays. What the GOP did not know was that while Democrats on the Judiciary Committee focused on the unpublished opinions -- and found little to use against the judge -- researchers for People for the American Way were preparing to take the Pickering fight in a new direction.

Margaret Kinchen is the court reporter for the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Mississippi, located in Hattiesburg. She handles requests for things like transcripts of trials, sentencing hearings, and other court proceedings. They are public documents, but anyone who wants to see them or get copies of them has to go through Kinchen to do it. She keeps records of who requests what.

On December 19, Judith Schaeffer, deputy legal director for People for the American Way, called Kinchen to request transcripts from two sentencing hearings in a celebrated Mississippi murder case tried in Pickering's courtroom. "She wanted them as fast as she could get them," recalls Kinchen, who e-mailed the documents to Schaeffer the same day.

When Kinchen returned to her office the day after New Year's, there was a message from Schaeffer wanting more transcripts. Then there were calls on January 7 and January 8: requests for still more transcripts, most of them involving sentencing hearings presided over by Pickering. On January 11, Schaeffer called again, wanting yet another transcript. Kinchen says the requests from People for the American Way were, up to that point, the only inquiries she received for Pickering-related documents -- "They were the only group that asked," she says. Although one might have expected committee Democrats to request documents, given the intensity of their interest in Pickering's record, Kinchen says she did not receive any inquiries from them.

On January 24, People for the American Way president Ralph Neas held a press conference in Washington to release the group's report on Pickering's record. Although Neas had not earlier called for Pickering's defeat, at the news conference he launched an all-out attack on both Pickering and the Bush White House. "Achieving ideological domination of the federal judiciary is the top goal of right-wing activists inside and outside the Bush administration," Neas said, "and judges like Charles Pickering are the means to that end."

The report was a grab-bag of issues, all of which suggested that Pickering was an unreconstructed segregationist who was hostile to the rights of women, minorities, and the poor. The report criticized Pickering for a 1959 law-review note on Mississippi's interracial-marriage ban that Pickering wrote as a first-year law student; it accused Pickering of having had "contact" with Mississippi's racist Sovereignty Commission in the 1970s; it accused Pickering of being indifferent to equal voting rights; it said Pickering had a "troubling record of reversals in the Court of Appeals"; it said he was hostile to abortion rights; and it accused him of blurring the separation of church and state.

Republicans on the Judiciary Committee sent a staff member to the Neas press conference. But when the aide came back with a copy of the report, GOP aides simply did not take the charges very seriously. Most, if not all, of Neas's accusations seemed without merit, and many had been considered by the committee in 1990 when it unanimously approved Pickering's nomination to the district court. But what Republicans did not know was that the Neas report would have a profound effect on the Pickering battle, becoming, almost overnight, a blueprint for Democratic committee members' objections to the nomination.

Another thing Republicans did not know was that Neas's research project did not stop when the report was released. On January 29, Judith Schaeffer contacted Kinchen again to request transcripts from sentencing hearings in a case known as United States v. Swan. The case involved a cross burning in southern Mississippi in 1994, and although no one knew it at the time, Swan would ultimately become a critical issue in the Pickering fight. On January 30, one day after Schaeffer called Kinchen, Leahy wrote Pickering to inquire about the judge's actions "relating to the criminal case of United States v. Swan."

Pickering's second hearing was scheduled for February 7. When the judge appeared before the committee, Democratic questioning hewed closely to the lines established in the Neas report. The report had focused on Pickering's reversal rate; at the hearing, Democrat Charles Schumer focused on Pickering's reversal rate. The report focused on Pickering's decisions in employment-discrimination cases; Democrat Edward Kennedy covered that topic. The report focused on Pickering's "contact" with the Sovereignty Commission; Democrat Richard Durbin handled that. The report focused on Pickering's views on abortion; Democrats Dianne Feinstein and Maria Cantwell covered that. And the report focused on Pickering's views on habeas corpus; Leahy handled that. The only new ground covered in the hearing was the Swan case, which had not been in the Neas report (Schaeffer did not request the Swan transcripts until five days after the report was released, suggesting that People for the American Way did not know about the case before that time). At the hearing, North Carolina Democrat John Edwards interrogated Pickering about Swan, implying that Pickering had gone to unethical lengths to go easy on a white man convicted of burning a cross in the yard of a mixed-race couple.

A week after the hearing, on February 14, Democrat Joseph Biden sent Pickering a series of follow-up questions about Swan. The first question began, "According to court documents . . ." and went on to recount details about the case that were available only in the court documents that Margaret Kinchen had sent to People for the American Way. While it is not clear how Biden learned about the details of Swan, a source close to the senator says Biden's staff first heard of the case "around the time of the People for the American Way press conference" and later got documents on the case "from other committee staffers." On February 15, the day after Biden sent his questions and long after People for the American Way had already gotten the information, Leahy finally asked for a transcript of Swan. By then, the work had been done -- not by the committee, but by People for the American Way.

At each step of the way in the Pickering nomination, Republicans underestimated the nature of the threat that Pickering faced from committee Democrats and, perhaps just as important, from People for the American Way and the rest of the coalition. Unknown to GOP staffers, coalition researchers were far ahead of them -- and Democrats, for that matter -- as they dug into Pickering's record.

One of the reasons Republicans miscalculated the threat was that they knew little about the power and scope of People for the American Way. It is an extraordinarily rich and well-run organization -- two organizations, actually, both of them tax-exempt under Internal Revenue Service rules. One, People for the American Way, is a so-called 501(c)(4) organization -- named for the section of the IRS code that provides for such groups -- that is legally allowed to engage in partisan political activity. The other, the People for the American Way Foundation, is a 501(c)(3) organization, which is allowed to receive tax-deductible donations and which is prohibited by law from engaging in partisan political work. To qualify as a 501(c)(3), groups like the People for the American Way Foundation have to state on their tax forms that they will not engage in any activity "to influence national, state, or local legislation, including any attempt to influence public opinion on a legislative matter or referendum."

Together, the two branches collect an impressive amount of money. According to tax records for the year 2000, People for the American Way took in $5,140,131 in contributions, while the People for the American Way Foundation took in $7,469,722 -- for a total of $12,609,853 in one year alone. Much of that money came in large chunks from wealthy donors. In its 2000 return, the foundation listed anonymous individual donations of $540,000, of $432,488, of $314,058, of $250,000, and many more in the six-figure range (the law requires the foundation to list the donations, but not the names of the donors).

Even though the foundation is forbidden to engage in political lobbying, there appears to be significant overlap between the two arms of People for the American Way. Neas's salary, for example, is paid by both the main group and the foundation. In 2000, he received $79,556 in salary from People for the American Way, the political arm, and $119,335 from the People for the American Way Foundation, the non-partisan arm. The salary of People for the American Way's number-two officer, Carol Blum, was also divided between the two parts of the organization. (Officials of People for the American Way told National Review they were too busy to be interviewed for this article.)

While People for the American Way has an impressive bankroll, it was just one part of the anti-Pickering coalition. To its $12.6 million budget must be added the budgets of groups such as NARAL, NOW, the Alliance for Justice, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the NAACP, and others -- a total that might well approach $50 million.

The numbers point to a striking disparity in the ongoing battle over judicial nominations. On the pro-Republican side, there simply was no group fighting on behalf of Pickering that had anything approaching the coalition's resources. Yes, there are rich conservative organizations like the National Rifle Association and National Right to Life Committee (which also maintain tax-exempt 501(c)(3) arms), but none was deeply involved in the Pickering battle. Instead, there were a few small groups like the newly formed Coalition for a Fair Judiciary, which was created after the near defeat of the John Ashcroft nomination and which operates with one employee, working out of her home in suburban Virginia.

That imbalance virtually assures that the Pickering situation will play out again in the future, with Republicans significantly outgunned in the lobbying battle. Democrats have made no secret of their intention to defeat more of the president's judicial nominees, and People for the American Way and other coalition members are already at work on coming campaigns. The close coordination between committee Democrats and the coalition during the Pickering fight will no doubt be a model for future efforts. What worries many conservatives is that the meagerly funded, poorly organized effort on Pickering's behalf might become a model for the Republican side. If that is the case, it will not be long before Republicans are again left fuming after another bitter defeat.

GOP: Bush nominees treated unfairly

Audrey Hudson
The Washington Times
Wednesday, April 03, 2002

The confirmation process for President Bush's judicial nominees in the Democrat-controlled Senate has taken on a sense of "McCarthyism," a leading Senate Republican said yesterday.

"Are you now or have you ever been a conservative or a member of a conservative organization?" said Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania in an interview, mimicking Sen. Joseph McCarthy's standard line for hunting communists in government in the early 1950s. "That's it; you are disqualified. It's just a different C word." Republicans charge that Judge D. Brooks Smith of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania, Mr. Bush's nominee for a federal 3rd Circuit Appeals Court seat, is the next target for defeat by Senate Democrats.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden, Jr., Delaware Democrat, said he is maintaining an open mind in regards to Judge Smith's confirmation. But Mr. Biden has vowed to kill the nomination if Judge Smith is not completely forthcoming in answers to questions from Senate Democrats during his confirmation process.

"I will do everything in my power to defeat you, including moving to the Senate floor to take action I've never taken in my life as a United States senator: a filibuster," Mr. Biden said during Judge Smith's confirmation hearing Feb. 26. In the 15 months he has been in the White House, Mr. Bush has nominated 29 circuit court judges, and seven have been confirmed. By comparison, in their first two years in office, President Clinton nominated 22 circuit judges with 19 confirmed, President George Bush nominated 23 circuit judges with 22 confirmed, and President Reagan nominated 20 circuit judges with 19 confirmed. Calls to the Judiciary Committee, headed by Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, were not returned.

Before leaving for the Easter recess, Mr. Leahy defended the committee's record on the confirmation process. "We are moving forward as quickly as we can, and I will continue to do that," Mr. Leahy said. "No matter what is said on the other side, no matter how much things are taken out of context, no matter how much fiction we hear on the floor from that side, I will move them forward," Mr. Leahy said. The bruising confirmation process of failed Appeals Court nominee Judge Charles W. Pickering is a preview of what is in store for other conservative members of the bench, Republicans said. "They are on a witch hunt," Mr. Santorum said, referring to Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee. "I am sure that with every nominee who has any kind of conservative credentials, [Democrats] will make a big issue of it. The question is, how many Democrats on the committee will bite?" Mr. Santorum said.

A source close to the Smith confirmation proceedings said that despite the judge's popularity and widespread support in his home state of Pennsylvania, Democrats are intent on blocking or defeating the confirmation. "This is about George Bush and putting Republicans on the bench. It doesn't make any difference who you are; they are going to tailor these things to [hurt] each nominee," the source said.

Mr. Santorum said that in an environment "other than the Leahy jihad," Judge Smith would be approved. The pace of hearings and confirmation votes has angered many Republicans. The Senate has confirmed 42 nominees, and 56 nominations are still pending. Only two hearings have been held on the pending nominations, according to the Justice Department's office of legal policy.

"Almost a year has passed, and President Bush's first eight circuit court nominees have not even received the courtesy of a hearing," said Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, Mississippi Republican. "All we are asking for is that the Senate Judiciary Committee provide fair treatment for these experienced and qualified individuals, and that clearly is not happening," Mr. Lott said.

Democrats are questioning Judge Smith's judicial ethics and recusal from a fraud case. People for the American Way, which led the effort to defeat Judge Pickering, have questioned Judge Smith's record on states' rights, civil rights, the environment and consumer protection.

Liberal groups that oppose conservative nominees became part of the debate over Judge Pickering, and Republicans say they will continue to highlight that influence in other nomination fights.

The Scarlet 'E'; Will 5th Circuit nominee be able to get out from under the Enron cloud?

John Council

REV_00142575

Texas Lawyer
Wednesday, April 3, 2002

As any Washington, D.C., insider will tell you, this is not the best time to be an elected official with connections to the sinking Enron Corp.

Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen is finding that out. Owen is entering the political fray as she seeks confirmation to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. She can expect a thorough audit of her background during a congressional nomination hearing, including questions about an opinion she wrote in 1996 that favored the controversial energy trading company. The spotlight likely won't be pleasant, as 5th Circuit nominee Charles Pickering recently discovered when he was targeted for his civil rights rulings.

Among the first of President George W. Bush's federal appellate bench nominees named on May 9, 2001, Owen has not received a hearing date from the Senate Judiciary Committee. The committee must vote to confirm Owen's nomination, followed by a confirmation vote by the full Senate, for her to take the federal appellate bench.

It's unclear if Owen will even receive a hearing this year. But concern over her nomination is so dire that Owen supporter Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, pleaded in a speech on the Senate floor March 20 that the Senate give Owen a hearing and confirm her.

"I just want to ask that we have a fair hearing on Justice Owen," Hutchison said.

Hutchison's remarks came after Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., was quoted by Reuters as saying that Owen's past with Enron may put her nomination in jeopardy.

"I have heard from a lot of Republicans who are concerned about her Enron connections," said Leahy, who chairs the Democrat-controlled committee, two weeks ago.

David Carl, a spokesman for Leahy, says Owen will get a hearing -- but he can't say when.

Leahy's comment was that the Senate would have to examine Owen's Enron past as well as her record, Carl says. "He outlined the good faith the Democrats were taking to break the deadlock over the past five or six years. He named her as an example."

Meanwhile, activist groups have jumped all over Owen's nomination, harping about her conservative record.

Leading the activists' list of concerns is Owen's 1996 opinion in Enron Corp., et al. v. Spring Independent School District, which allowed the company to get a tax break. The groups point out that Owen also has accepted thousands in donations to her Texas Supreme Court campaign from Houston's Enron.

But conservative groups say Owen is an outstanding candidate whose nomination is being blocked by Democrats on the contentious Judiciary Committee just because she will not toe their ideological line.

Texas appellate lawyers who know Owen say she's a judge who wears her conservative philosophy on her sleeve. But she also maintains the highest standard of ethics and doesn't deserve to be smeared with Enron mud, they say.

Even the plaintiff's lawyer who was on the losing side of Enron v. Spring ISD -- a complicated analysis of a Tax Code provision that dealt with what date the market value of inventory could be appraised -- says attempts to discredit Owen because of the ruling are "nonsense."

"This is a bunch of crap is what it is," says Robert Mott, a partner in Houston's Perdue, Brandon, Fielder, Collins & Mott who represented Spring ISD. "To suggest that Justice Owen would rule this way based on a campaign contribution is just nonsense."

Mott says the ruling was reflective of the conservative nature of the court at the time.

Interestingly, the opinion, although written by Owen, was unanimous with all nine jurists -- even Democratic Justices Rose Spector and Raul Gonzalez -- joining in the decision.

Owen declines to comment for this article.

ACTIVISTS CONVERGE

Just as activists this year targeted 5th Circuit nominee Charles Pickering for his civil rights rulings, groups from Texas say they plan to protest against Owen as well.

The Judiciary Committee shot down Pickering's nomination in March in a party-line 10-9 vote. Civil rights activists opposed his nomination and pointed to a case in which Pickering, a U.S. district judge in Mississippi, sought a lighter sentence for a defendant tried on a cross-burning charge -- a case Republicans say was misinterpreted by Pickering's opponents.

There's no indication that Owen's confirmation hearing will be as contentious -- Pickering was called back by the committee for a second hearing so members could further research his rulings, which is rare.

But activists from consumer, environmental and abortion rights groups such as Texans for Public Justice, the Sierra Club and the Texas Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League say they plan to converge on Washington this month to discuss Owen's record with members of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Given Congress' obsession with Enron, questions about Owen's connection to the fallen energy trading giant will likely be a priority for Judiciary Committee members.

REV_00142577

Representatives from Texans for Public Justice, a consumer judicial watchdog group, will make sure of that.

"The connections to Enron and the judge's raising huge amounts of money from them will be troubling to some senators and will be raised," says Craig McDonald, director of Texans for Public Justice. "That's my belief. I've given them materials and background."

Included in that material is the group's report on money Texas Supreme Court justices received from Enron. Since 1993, the company contributed $134,058 to the justices -- $8,600 of that went to Owen, who was elected to the high court in 1994.

But a leader of a Washington conservative think tank believes the smell of Enron won't stick to Owen once it's put in context.

"That contribution was in full compliance with the rules of ethics," says John Nowacki, director of legal policy at the Free Congress Foundation. "I think she's shown on that issue that she's in the mainstream of Texas contribution laws."

Owen is falling victim to liberal interest groups who want to turn circuit court nomination hearings into the raucous, ideological process that's normally reserved for nominees to the Supreme Court, Nowacki says.

"There's been a deliberate effort by the liberal interest groups to turn the circuit court nominations into something resembling the Supreme Court nomination process," Nowacki says. "It all boils down to politics. The Democrats have made it very clear that they want judicial candidates that reflect their point of view."

Tactics such as those used against Pickering eventually will backfire as the public discovers there is little substance behind the activists' allegations, Nowacki says. He believes Owen eventually will be confirmed.

"I think if people start to realize that the only time [candidates] get defeated is when the Democrats are in control, they'll realize that it's plain politics," Nowacki says. "And Leahy will realize it looks plain bad."

Enron isn't the only issue that disturbs activists. Sarah Wheat, director of public affairs for the Texas Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League, says her group plans to meet with senators this month.

Wheat's group is troubled by Owen's dissenting opinions in a series of rulings in early 2000 that interpreted Texas' abortion parental notification law. In a March 2000 opinion, In Re Jane Doe 3, Owen voted to reject a minor's request for a judicial bypass -- even though the girl claimed that informing her parents about her desire to get an abortion would lead to "emotional abuse." Owen wrote in a dissent that the girl had not proved that she would be subjected to abuse.

Notes Wheat, "She sends out red flags for a lot of us."

HOMEFRONT SUPPORT

Notably, the people who know Owen best and who've practiced in front of her are not the ones complaining about her reputation or her abilities as a judge.

Owen, who graduated at the top of her class from Baylor University School of Law in 1977, received a "well qualified" rating (the highest possible) by the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Judiciary on June 21, 2001.

"In terms of the intellectual firepower, she's got it," says Douglas Alexander, an appellate specialist and partner in Austin, Texas' Scott, Douglass & McConnico. "In terms of whether you agree with her conservative philosophy or bent, that's a completely different question and that's what's sparking a lot of the opposition."

But Alexander says there's no hint that Owen's decisions ever have been influenced by campaign donations.

"Any notion of Priscilla deciding a case based on a campaign contribution -- I don't attribute anything to that," Alexander says. "I don't doubt that things like that are going to be dragged out, but I don't think that's a legitimate concern."

David Keltner, a Fort Worth, Texas, appellate specialist and former 2nd Court of Appeals justice, agrees.

"I'm a Democrat, and I sometimes disagree with her political philosophy, but she comes about it honestly," Keltner says.

Keltner says partisanship is once again affecting the administration of federal justice. He points to two other 5th Circuit nominees of former President Bill Clinton's -- Jorge Rangel of Corpus Christi and Enrique Moreno of El Paso, Texas -- who never got a hearing before the judiciary committee.

"We need to get these people heard and out. We need judges in federal courts desperately," Keltner says. "And the people that are withholding those votes are wrong. It's affecting the practice of law in Texas, and it's wrong."

As the Senate takes its time filling two vacant 5th Circuit spots, the judges on that court continue to struggle to keep up with a heavy caseload. The court had 8,616 appeals filed last year and as of June 30, 2001, the most recent figures available, the court had 4,533 appeals awaiting disposition.

More often than not, the 5th Circuit uses visiting judges on three-member panels when it issues decisions.

"The number of the visiting judges that sit on the 5th Circuit are indicative of a heavy workload," says Gregory Nussel, circuit executive of the 5th Circuit.

While Texas' two U.S. senators have great influence in helping select and confirm U.S. district judges assigned to Texas, they have little, if any, power in helping select circuit judges. The president has the sole responsibility to select circuit judges.

While Hutchison pleaded Owen's case on the Senate floor, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, has been silent on the matter, although he supports Owen's nomination, says Gramm spokesman Larry Neal.

Neal says Gramm would only speak out on behalf of Owen if he was asked to by Owen or Bush.

"To my knowledge, he had not been asked to make statements," Neal says. "And it's a good policy because sometimes your friends do more damage than good."

Jacksonian chutzpah

Rod Dreher
Scripps Howard News Service
April 4, 2002, Thursday

Nobody has ever erred by accusing Jesse Jackson of a surfeit of chutzpah, but many people won't grasp why his offer to mediate between the Palestinians and the Israelis is so outrageous as to beggar belief. It's like this: What if, during the Republican-Democrat battle royal in Florida, Alec Baldwin had presented himself as an honest broker able to bring both sides to mutual understanding? Jackson's offer makes as much sense.

Jesse's love affair with Yasser Arafat is well-documented by Kenneth Timmerman in "Shakedown," and will come as news to folks who think Jackson's only brush with Jew-bashing was his infamous "Hymietown" remark in 1984.

In August of 1979, Carter sacked Andrew Young, his ambassador to the United Nations, after the black former mayor of Atlanta met privately with the Palestinian Liberation Organization's man at the United Nations.. Jackson, a friend of Young's, publicly insinuated that Jews brought down Young, and complained that Jews were false friends of blacks. A month later, Jackson announced he would go to Beirut to meet with Arafat, who was living in exile there. Citing media reports at the time, Timmerman quotes Jackson as telling Arab-American supporters gathered at PUSH headquarters: "By Oct. 1, there will be no black leader left willing to come to the aid of the Palestinian cause if there is not an immediate infusion of funds into the black community from the Arab states."

Two weeks later, Jackson and his entourage took off for Israel on a junket paid for by Arab donors. When Israeli prime minister Menachem Begin failed to turn up at the airport, an insulted Jackson gave a news conference in which he intimated that racism might be behind the snub. Days later, Jackson visited Yad Vashem, the national memorial to Holocaust victims, where he equated the incineration of six million Jews to American slavery.

Newsweek quoted Jackson as saying that "a persecution complex ...almost invariably makes Jews overreact to their own suffering."

Then Jackson lit out to visit Palestinians in the fetid Dheisheh refugee camp. "I know this camp," he preached. "When I smell the stench of the open sewers, this is nothing new to me. This is where I grew up." (Actually, he grew up in relative comfort in North Carolina.)

Two American Jews who had helped arrange for Jackson's trip quit in disgust. One of them, publisher Philip Blazer, said Jackson was piggybacking on the plight of the Palestinians to raise money for his own interests. Even the Rev. Harold Schomer, a left-wing cleric who accompanied Jackson, noted in his private journal that the Arab states were trying to use the Jackson fact-finding trip to weaken U.S. backing of Israel, and to legitimize the PLO.

When Jackson finally met Arafat in Lebanon, he gave him a big kiss and declared the terrorist "my friend and the friend of justice and humanity." Two years later, Israeli forces invaded Lebanon in an attempt to drive out PLO terrorists mounting attacks on Israel from Lebanese soil. The Israelis, commanded by Gen. Ariel Sharon, drove Arafat into exile.

Jackson arrived home and was greeted by a hailstorm of criticism for having succored the Soviet-proxy PLO, and endangered domestic relations between blacks and Jews. The indignant Jackson blamed - who else? - Jews in the media.

Happily for Jackson, his pro-Arafat sojourn opened the floodgates of Arab money into PUSH coffers. A $10,000 check from a Libyan diplomat nearly earned him an FBI subpoena. In 1981, a fat donation from the Arab League made up 80 percent of the funds Jackson raised for his group that year; Jackson said he didn't know a thing about it.

Jackson's most notorious anti-Semitic comment came in 1984, when he made what he assumed was an off-the-record comment to a black reporter in which he called Jews "Hymies" and New York "Hymietown." He publicly apologized and has been largely excused by the media, even as he insists that whites like the recently defeated Charles Pickering are unfit for government office because of racist views they might have held 40 years ago.

Still, the record of this man who offers himself as a peacemaker between the Israelis and the Palestinians bears remembering. All things considered, Alec Baldwin would stand a better chance.(Rod Dreher is a senior writer for National Review.)

JUDGES: Pickering and Choosing

National Review
Monday April 8, 2002

Republicans are in high dudgeon about the treatment of Judge Charles Pickering, whose nomination to an appeals court was defeated by ten Senate Democrats in a party-line vote of the Judiciary Committee. But Pickering was treated badly by both parties. Democrats made scurrilous attacks on him, and Republicans did not defend him until it was too late. The Democrats themselves seem to be somewhat embarrassed by their tactics, as witness their efforts to squirm away from them. Sens. Charles Schumer and Patrick Leahy insist that nobody ever insinuated that Pickering was a racist. Of course not: When Terry McAuliffe said that President Bush was trying to "disenfranchise" black voters in Mississippi by nominating Pickering, it was all in good fun. Liberal columnist E. J. Dionne Jr. admits that "the anti-Pickering campaign did get ugly," but his spin is that Democrats ended up opposing him on defensible grounds -- e.g., the fact that his decisions have been "so often reversed on appeal." Except that this fact is not a fact at all: Pickering's reversal rate is lower than the average in his circuit or in the nation. Late in the day, liberals -- notably Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California -- also made the argument that Bush had no mandate and therefore should not be allowed to stack the courts with conservatives. (She also took the curious view that Pickering would be able to overturn Roe v. Wade from a circuit court of appeals.) The pattern of attack is the same one exhibited in the confirmation hearings for attorney general John Ashcroft last year: First, a few scattered decisions are used to portray the nominee as anti-black; once the poison has been released into the atmosphere, its very existence is denied. The Democrats do not really believe that Pickering (or Ashcroft) is a racist, of course; in 1990, Pickering was unanimously approved for the district judgeship he now holds. But he was a target of convenience, being a white male Republican from Mississippi of a certain age, as Ashcroft was a target of convenience as a white male fundamentalist Christian. By voting down Pickering, Democrats handed the president (and Pickering's friend Trent Lott) a defeat; elicited donations for liberal interest groups; and sought to make the president think twice before nominating conservatives, or at least opponents of liberal orthodoxy on abortion, in the future. The Democratic onslaught caught Republicans napping. The White House viewed Pickering as Lott's concern and intervened too late. Senate Republicans were little better, becoming engaged only when it was fairly clear Pickering was going down. Byron York's reporting for National Review Online did more to counter Democratic distortions than any of them did. Even now, they are focusing on procedural rather than substantive issues. They are quite right to chastise the Democrats for not allowing a full Senate vote on Pickering. But the more important point is the need for constitutionalist judges. Bush should not bow to the Democrats' intimidation by refraining from nominating such judges. The Democrats' demand for "moderate" judges is in any case phony. The federal judiciary is still, on balance, an instrument of the Left. Moderate judges in the context of the liberal legal academy are those who overturn laws in favor of liberal whims only some of the time, and who allow previous acts of liberal usurpation from the bench to stand. The public is neither enamored of liberal judges nor afraid of conservative ones. If the Democrats want to keep blocking the latter, Bush should call their obstruction to the attention of voters in the Senate races this fall.

Virginia Thomas is using her husband's trials for advancement

Steven Lubet
Fulton County Daily Report
April 2, 2002 Tuesday

Virginia Thomas, the wife of Justice Clarence Thomas, recently published an op-ed in The Wall Street Journal that expressed sympathy for Judge Charles Pickering Sr., President Bush's now-defeated nominee to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Drawing upon her experience during her husband's stormy confirmation hearings, Thomas urged Pickering not to take his rejection personally. "It helps," she wrote, "to find your faith and be reminded that you are not called to be popular, but rather to have integrity."

But Thomas did not limit herself to commiseration. Instead, her March 14 commentary launched a sharp attack on feminists, civil rights groups and "the hard left." Then, leaving no doubt where she stood, she lambasted Senate Democrats in highly ideological terms.

Thomas said that the Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee don't think of Pickering "as human right now." She said that "facts matter little" to Senate Democrats, who are "impervious to the truth." Their opposition to Pickering, she also noted, "doesn't hurt their fund-raising efforts." She claimed that the Democrats' strategy was to "influence votes, scare off conservatives from being nominated, being defended or even applying for such positions in public service." These are political thunderbolts of a sort we have never before seen hurled by the spouse of a sitting Supreme Court justice. Whether one agrees or disagrees with Thomas on the merits, it was surprising to see a Supreme Court spouse make such a pronounced entry into the political fray. Her essay was published on the morning that the Judiciary Committee was scheduled to vote on the Pickering nomination, which was understood to be headed toward defeat. Republicans felt that the nominee was being victimized by scorched-earth tactics, and no one was better suited to expose the smear than Thomas, who had lived through her own confirmation ordeal.

So what do we make of it that Virginia Thomas so very publicly weighed in on such an intensely political controversy?

In the wake of the Florida election fiasco, it is more important than ever to hold the Supreme Court scrupulously neutral in political disputes, both in fact and in appearance.

Critics claim that the five-vote majority in Bush v. Gore was motivated more by political affinity than by constitutional law, sometimes referring to a report that Justice Sandra Day O'Connor reacted with audible dismay when it first appeared that Al Gore would carry Florida and win the presidency. Defenders, of course, argue that the majority opinion was rigorously correct, unaffected by any motive other than the strict desire to follow the Constitution.

In any case, it should be obvious to all that the court's legitimacy depends greatly upon its perceived detachment. If the justices come to be regarded as political players, their opinions will be seen as instrumental rather than principled. Thus it is axiomatic that the court must remain painstakingly aloof from political combat.

But to what extent does that axiom apply to the spouses?

In one sense, of course, it does not pertain at all. Apart from some financial disclosure requirements, the ethical rules that constrain judges simply do not apply to their spouses. And any effort to impose a spousal gag rule surely would run afoul of the First Amendment.

Consequently, Virginia Thomas is legally entitled to write whatever she pleases. She is an exceptionally capable professional, with an important career completely independent of her husband's job. She has much to say on many issues, and it would be absolutely wrong to insist that she, or any other spouse, live a life of public silence.

Wiser Heads

But that does not end the discussion, since the public conduct of spouses does have the potential to compromise the court. Imagine the furor that would have followed if John O'Connor or Martin Ginsburg actively had campaigned for their preferred presidential candidates in the 2000 election. Although the First Amendment surely protects that activity, it would have been a disaster for the court-no doubt prompting demands that O'Connor and Ruth Bader Ginsburg recuse themselves in Bush v. Gore.

The Supreme Court is a fragile institution, dependent on its reputation, and often best served by the voluntary circumspection of those connected to it. A decent respect for the court's neutrality-in both reality and appearance-counsels self-restraint.

The spouses of most justices seem to recognize this. For example, Martin Ginsburg, a prominent tax attorney, divested himself of perfectly legitimate investments in order to avoid even an appearance of judicial partiality.

Which brings us to Virginia Thomas and her appearance on the op-ed page of The Wall Street Journal.

Unique in the history of Supreme Court spouses, Thomas has been an active political player during her husband's entire tenure on the court. She served as senior policy coordinator for the House Republican Conference and later became a top adviser to Republican Majority Leader Richard K. Armey. She is currently director of executive branch relations for the conservative Heritage Foundation.

In each of those positions, Thomas wisely had refrained from open politicking. With her Wall Street Journal op-ed, however, she has broken another barrier, invoking her husband's name in what can be seen only as an effort to sway public opinion against Democrats and in favor of the Republican administration.

In a nutshell, Thomas showed dreadfully poor judgment in publishing that particular op-ed. It would have been a different matter if she merely had written a pro-Pickering essay or if she had written a piece about the travails of confirmation without resorting to partisan invective. Instead, she intentionally capitalized on Justice Thomas' position in order to score political points.

We do not know whether Virginia Thomas consulted anyone about her op-ed. We should assume, to be sure, that Justice Thomas had no part in it. But questions, at least in skeptical quarters, are unavoidable. Husbands and wives do tend to talk to each other about important matters. Is it out of place to wonder whether Virginia Thomas, about to take the seemingly unprecedented step of going public on a political controversy, might have asked her husband whether he had any concerns? Might she have mentioned the op-ed to him? Even without any input from the justice into the content, that possibility may create the appearance of his tacit approval.

Of course, the supposition could be completely wrong. Perhaps Justice Thomas was more surprised than anyone else to see his wife's byline in The Wall Street Journal. If so, both Thomases must have been shocked to see the column illustrated by a picture of Justice Thomas himself, presumably inserted by a Journal editor (likely unbeknownst to the writer) lest anyone miss the connection.

Using the Court

A federal statute prohibits a Supreme Court justice from sitting in any case in which his or her spouse has a nonfinancial "interest that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding." Until March 14, no one would have suggested that Virginia Thomas' political affiliations should disqualify Justice Thomas from participating in any case, even one that determined, say, the presidency of the United States. But after her recent foray into open partisan warfare, the situation may well have changed.

It is not likely that we ever again will see a Supreme Court spouse who doesn't lead an independent life in one realm or another. It would be unacceptable to place formal limits on their activities, but it is not too much to request some prudence.

Yes, Virginia Thomas has the right to say whatever she chooses. It's just too bad that she didn't choose to keep the Supreme Court out of it.

Judge Pickering deserves position

The Myrtle Beach Sun-News
April 2, 2002 Tuesday

U.S. SENATE

On March 14, the Democrat-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee voted against the nomination of [U.S. District] Judge Charles Pickering [for the U.S. Court of Appeals].

This action was contrary to what the American Bar Association had to say, as well as leading blacks in Mississippi.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., stated that Pickering does not have "the temperament, the moderation or the commitment to core constitutional ... protections that is required for a life tenure position."

Kennedy, who is widely known for his excessive drinking and womanizing, should not be standing in our most sacred halls and calling [names].

[Neither] Kennedy nor any of the other Democratic senators can hold a candle to Pickering's morals and ethics.

The Reynolds recess appointment

April 02, 2002, Tuesday

It had been more than six months since President Bush selected Gerald A. Reynolds to be assistant secretary of education for civil rights, but Mr. Reynolds, the former president of the Center for New Black Leadership (CNBL), still had not received a vote on his nomination in the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions. In fact, the committee, which is chaired by Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy, never managed to give Mr. Reynolds the consideration of a hearing until Feb. 26.

It should hardly be surprising, therefore, that Mr. Bush decided last week to elevate Mr. Reynolds in a recess appointment. Mr. Reynolds' official arrival at the Office of Civil Rights in the Department of Education cannot come a minute too soon. After all, his predecessor during the Clinton administration, Norma Cantu, was an overbearing activist who willfully disregarded court rulings. It was particularly important for the president to act, given the highly politicized campaign that was being orchestrated against Mr. Reynolds. Once he was nominated, a slew of self-appointed guardians of civil-rights coalesced, determined to thwart the Senate's confirmation of a young conservative black attorney to the position that Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas once held. The usual suspects were involved, including the NAACP, People for the American Way, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the National Organization for Women, etc. However, after it became apparent that Mr. Reynolds would be confirmed by the entire Senate, Mr. Kennedy angled to defeat the nomination in his committee, just as the Senate Judiciary Committee had used a party-line vote to derail the appeals court nomination of Judge Charles Pickering.

When Mr. Reynolds explained at the committee's hearing on Feb. 26 that he intended to enforce existing civil-rights laws, Mr. Kennedy bellowed, "Don't pander to me." Subsequently, Mr. Kennedy, whose expulsion from Harvard for cheating did not preclude him from becoming chairman of the Senate committee responsible for education, audaciously declared that he was "struck by Mr. Reynolds' lack of policy experience and his longstanding hostility to basic civil-rights laws."

Mr. Kennedy's partisan assertions nothwithstanding, Mr. Reynolds knew what he was talking about. As CNBL president, he told the committee, he focused on "the significant achievement gap between white and black students," arguing that "we need to expand the concept of civil rights so that it includes improving the quality of education for America's disadvantaged children."

"To limit an individual's education," Mr. Reynolds persuasively argued at his hearing, "is to limit his freedom." And he added, "A sound education is the fastest, and sometimes the only, way out of poverty." Now is the time for him to pursue the CNBL's innovative ideas, which members of the old guard have spent their careers blocking in order to preserve the failures of the status quo.

Battle over federal seats ignores the middle ground

The Detroit Free Press
Tuesday April 2, 2002

Don't look for the fight over federal judges to simmer down any time soon. At least not based on the rhetoric coming from the White House.

"We're going to have more fights when it comes to the judiciary," President George W. Bush said last week, declaring he would send more "good, conservative judges" to the Senate for confirmation.

REV_00142587

Conservatives are his prerogative, but ideologues are not. The president seems to be looking for trouble from the Democrat-controlled Senate that rejected Mississippi Judge Charles Pickering.

Instead, Bush -- and Democrats -- should stake out more middle ground. The Senate has approved 41 of the 90 candidates Bush has submitted since July; Pickering was the only reject.

With advice and consent privileges, the Senate has a responsibility to ensure the nation's courts remain balanced and nominees don't have political agendas far out of the mainstream.

That does not mean Senate Democrats should engage in the delaying tactics Republicans used during the Clinton years. Only 35 percent of the former president's nominees got the courtesy of a hearing; Michigan Appeals Court Judge Helene White and Detroit attorney Kathleen McCree Lewis were left on the sidelines.

Bush should aim to fill the depleted bench. That requires working with folks on both sides. The breezy confirmation of his nominees from Nebraska, Montana and Iowa should have shown him the way. Nominees succeeded with ease because both of each state's senators -- one from each party -- could sign off on solid, but not extreme, conservatives.

To fill the bench, the president should reach out to Democrats with an extended hand, not an angry fist.

Israeli Forces Occupy More of West Bank; Are Americans Rude?

CNN
SHOW: CNN INSIDE POLITICS
April 3, 2002 Wednesday

JUDY WOODRUFF, CNN ANCHOR: I'm Judy Woodruff in Washington. Israeli forces move into more areas of the West Bank as the pressure and the protests spread across the Middle East.

CANDY CROWLEY, CNN SR. POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT: I'm Candy Crowley, Some conservatives may find fault with the president, but at the end of the day, he's still their man. ... finance reform, amnesty for illegal immigrants, and steel tariffs: Those are issues that have divided President Bush and some conservative leaders recently. But does that translate into disaffection among rank-and-file conservative voters?

Our Candy Crowley has been looking into that question.

(BEGIN VIDEOTAPE)

NORTH: I'm Oliver North. This is Radio America.

CANDY CROWLEY, CNN SR. POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT (voice-over): Wonder what conservatives complain about now that Bill Clinton has left the scene? Answer: George Bush.

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: We are in 62 countries right now, Ollie. We need to get the hell out. We need to close our doors and be isolationists.

CROWLEY: Conservative talk radio is where the grassroots go to vent.

ELDER: KABC, Larry Elder here. And my guess is the president of the NRA, Charlton Heston, of course.

CROWLEY: And from D.C. to L.A., lately, conservatives have found a lot to vent about.

ELDER: The issue that I think bothers most conservatives is the president's inexplicable support of campaign finance reform.

NORTH: There is some concern ...

... credibility.

ELDER: It was a big mistake to apply tariffs on certain imported steel goods.

NORTH: The idea of amnesty for illegal aliens set people's temperature just off the charts.

CROWLEY: Not to mention an education bill conservatives thought looked more Ted Kennedy than George Bush, what some saw as a too-late, too-tepid defense of doomed judicial nominee Charles Pickering, and that new federal budget, with 9 percent more spending, including an increase in foreign aid.

What's up here? Some conservatives fear it's poll numbers.

STEVEN MOORE, CLUB FOR GROWTH: It's almost as if, ever since 9/11, Bush has become -- has sort of transcended party. He's not even a Republican anymore. He's the president of all the people. And he is trying to make this full 80 percent happy.

CROWLEY: Asked if he worries about complaints from conservatives, one top Bush politico said: "Every single day. It is something you have to monitor." And that job falls primarily to the president's chief political strategist.

MOORE: Karl Rove will rush in and talk to the conservative groups and say: "Look, George W.

REV_00142589

Bush feels your pain. He is going to be with you on these things."

CROWLEY: So far, so good: Dissent has not meant desertion.

CHARLTON HESTON, PRESIDENT, NRA: The conservatives will still turn out, because he is the only guy we've got. And I think -- by and large, I think he has been doing a good job.

CROWLEY: It is the half-a-loaf-is-better-than-none theory applied to politics. The head of the National Rifle Association has gone to court to overturn the campaign finance reform that George Bush signed into saw.

WAYNE LAPIERRE, NRA: I wished he'd vetoed it. Is that going to make Wayne cheer any less when I'm in a crowd and they introduce him? Probably not.

CROWLEY: The truth is, there are three primary things that give George Bush maneuvering room with conservatives: the war on terrorism; the tax cut he pushed through last year; and the fact that he is not Bill Clinton. And the greatest of these is the war.

LAPIERRE: The fact is, we are six months away from the worst terrorist attack in America's history. And I think he's done a fabulous job.

(END VIDEOTAPE)

CROWLEY: "Conservatives," said one of them, "will swallow hard on a lot of issues right now because of the war." But he warned the Bush administration not to downplay conservative grumblings. The source added there is a danger of arrogance that comes with high poll numbers. "We know," responded one Bush insider. "We hear them" -- Judy.

WOODRUFF: Candy, is there one issue out there, one thing that would really be a relationship breaker for conservatives and the president?

CROWLEY: What I really gather, from talking to a lot of conservatives over the past couple of days is, look, as long as the war seems to be going well, as long as the economy seems to be getting better, he's fine. If there's a double-dip ...

... It's like the overriding issue right now is the war and the economy. If that starts to fall apart, there's a problem.

WOODRUFF: As long as those two things continue, it is almost as if anything the president does, he'll survive, right?

CROWLEY: Well, and they know that this is calibrated very carefully. One conservative said to me: "We understand there's an election coming up. We understand he didn't want to spend a lot of political capital on campaign finance reform." So, yes, he's calibrating this carefully. I don't think he's going to go out and do something right in their face. But he's got some room there.

REV_00142590

WOODRUFF: OK, Candy Crowley, thank you. We appreciate it.

And checking the headlines in our "Campaign News Daily": The former stripper-turned-Colorado town mayor is out of a job. Voters in tiny Georgetown, Colorado recalled Mayor ...

Burton is holding a hearing on Thursday afternoon with one panel on "lack of access to Presidential Records"

Apparently there is some conference of historians in town next week - so some of these folks will be witnesses to say how important access is for research - they dont have a witness list yet.

White House seeks Hispanic nominee's speedy confirmation (followed by Spanish version)

Washington, Apr 4 (EFE).- White House Counsel Al Gonzales on attorney Miguel Estrada's "superb qualifications and great professional training" to result in the speedy confirmation of the first Hispanic nominated to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

According to Gonzales, President George W. Bush nominated Estrada to the country's second most important court because of his "great talent and abilities." "Estrada's nomination demonstrates the importance the president places on diversity, and he is sending a powerful message to the Hispanic community," Gonzales said in an interview with EFE.

The White House counsel argued that the Senate should give Estrada a "fair hearing" and bring his nomination up for a vote. Estrada, who was nominated in May 2001 amid certain criticism, has not been granted a hearing by the Democratic-controlled Senate, a delay blasted by Republicans. According to Democratic leaders, several Hispanic judges nominated by former President Bill Clinton, including Richard Paez, Jorge Rangel and Enrique Moreno, came up against obstacles and delays when Republicans controlled the Senate. While Paez waited four years for his confirmation hearing, Moreno never received one.

Nonetheless, Gonzales said the Bush administration is not responsible for what happened in the past, adding that now is "the right time" for the Senate to act. Gonzales attributed harsh criticism of Estrada's nomination to "misunderstandings" about his philosophy that judges have a limited role in the government and should simply apply the law, regardless of their personal opinions.

Former Deputy White House Chief of Staff Maria Echaveste, the highest-ranking Hispanic in the Clinton administration, told EFE that Estrada's nomination "was problematic" and that having "a Hispanic face" is not enough to defend the interests of Latinos.

Echaveste described Estrada as a jurist with "very conservative" ties who does not believe in affirmative action or the government's role in defending the rights of minorities and the poor.

However, Gabriela Lemus, policy director for the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), said Estrada, along with the Hispanics nominated by the Clinton administration, have fallen victim to "political games" between Republicans and Democrats.

Lemus noted that LULAC supports Estrada's nomination "because there isn't enough Hispanic representation in the judicial system," adding, "regardless of his ideology," he is qualified to do the job. Estrada's nomination has also received the backing of the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and the Hispanic National Bar Association.

A Honduran immigrant who came to the United States in 1979, Estrada studied law at Harvard University and has argued 15 cases before the Supreme Court as an assistant to the solicitor general. He has also worked with Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy. Estrada, currently practicing law at the offices of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, and worked with Theodore B. Olson, acting solicitor general, argued then-Gov. Bush's case before the Supreme Court regarding the 2000 election controversy over Florida ballots. EFE

Casa Blanca pide pronta ratificaci¢n de Miguel Estrada

Por Rebeca Logan.
Washington, 4 abr (EFE).- El consejero legal de la Casa Blanca, Al Gonzales, dijo hoy a EFE, que espera que "las excelentes cualidades y alta capacitaci¢n profesional" del abogado Miguel Estrada, lleven a una pronta ratificaci¢n del primer latino nominado para ser juez en el circuito federal del Distrito de Columbia.

Seg£n Gonzales el "gran talento y las habilidades" de Estrada le merecieron el nombramiento del presidente George W. Bush, a la segunda corte m s importante del pa¡s, que es vista como la antesala a la Corte Suprema. "El nombramiento de Estrada demuestra la importancia que tiene la diversidad para el presidente y le env¡a un poderoso mensaje a la comunidad hispana", dijo Gonzales en una entrevista, en la que agreg¢ que Bush estuvo muy impresionado por la historia personal del nominado.

Gonzales agreg¢ que Estrada "comparte la filosof¡a" judicial del presidente Bush y que el Senado, encargado de ratificar este nombramiento, debe darle una "audiencia justa" y votar a favor o en contra del nominado. Estrada, un inmigrante hondure¤o que lleg¢ a EEUU en 1979, se doctor¢ en Leyes en la prestigiosa Universidad de Harvard, present¢ 15 casos ante la Corte Suprema en calidad de asistente del procurador general y trabaj¢ con el juez supremo Anthony Kennedy, uno de los m s conservadores de este tribunal.

Actualmente, Estrada ejerce como abogado en la firma Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, y argument¢, junto a Theodore B. Olson, actual procurador general de Estados Unidos, en favor de Bush ante la Corte Suprema, durante la controversia que rodeo el conteo de los votos de Florida en la elecci¢n presidencial del a¤o 2000. Estrada, que fue nominado en mayo del a¤o pasado y cuyo nombramiento ha generado cr¡ticas, todav¡a no ha tenido una audiencia en el Senado de mayor¡a dem¢crata, hecho criticado por los republicanos y sobre el cual se pronunci¢ el presidente Bush antes de su reciente visita a Latinoam?rica.

Los dem¢cratas han se¤alado que varios jueces latinos, entre ellos Richard P ez, Jorge Rangel y Enrique Moreno, nominados por el ex presidente Bill Clinton, enfrentaron trabas y demoras cuando los republicanos controlaron el Senado. Mientras que P ez esper¢ cuatro a¤os para su confirmaci¢n, Moreno ni siquiera recibi¢ una audiencia. Gonzales reiter¢ que la administraci¢n Bush no es responsable de lo que haya sucedido en el pasado y que ahora es "el momento propicio" para que el Senado act£e.

El consejero presidencial agreg¢ que las cr¡ticas a Estrada se deben a "malentendidos acerca de la filosof¡a" del abogado, quien cree que los jueces tienen un papel limitado dentro del gobierno y que deben simplemente aplicar la ley, sin importar sus opiniones personales.

Mar¡a Echaveste, ex jefa adjunta de gabinete de la Casa Blanca y la latina con el cargo m s alto durante la administraci¢n de Clinton, dijo a EFE, que el nombramiento de Estrada "era problem tico" y que no bastaba con "tener una cara latina" para defender los intereses de esta comunidad.

Echaveste describi¢ a Estrada como un jurista con alianzas "muy conservadoras", que no cree en la acci¢n afirmativa ni en el papel del gobierno en defender los derechos de los pobres y las minor¡as.

Adem s, se¤al¢ que Estrada, quien ha sido descrito como un fiel seguidor de "la letra de la ley", nunca ha sido juez, por lo cual no se sabe qu? tipo de fallos emitir .

Agreg¢ que "le asusta" la posibilidad de tener un juez que piense de forma similar a la mayor¡a de la actual Corte Suprema, que decidi¢ la semana pasada limitar los derechos laborales de los trabajadores indocumentados.

Seg£n Echaveste, "s¡ queremos tener latinos en las cortes importantes del pa¡s, pero queremos alguien que act£e a favor de los hispanos y de la comunidad en general".

Por su parte, la directora de pol¡tica de La Liga de Ciudadanos Latinoamericanos Unidos (LULAC), Gabriela Lemus, dijo que parec¡a que Estrada, al igual que los jueces latinos nominados por la administraci¢n Clinton, era v¡ctima del "juego pol¡tico" entre ambos partidos.

Lemus inform¢ que LULAC respalda el nombramiento de Estrada, "porque no hay suficiente representaci¢n hispana en el sistema judicial", y agreg¢ que, "sin importar su ideolog¡a", se trata de una persona cualificada para asumir este cargo.

Estrada tambi?n recibi¢ el respaldo de la C mara de Comercio Hispana y de la Asociaci¢n de Abogados Hispanos de EEUU, mientras que el Consejo Nacional de la Raza y el Fondo M?xicoamericano de Educaci¢n y Defensa Legal (MALDEF), no se han pronunciado al respecto.

"Lo m s importante es que le den su oportunidad ante el Senado y punto", concluy¢ Lemus. EFE

According to Democratic leaders, several Hispanic judges nominated by former President Bill Clinton, including Richard Paez, Jorge Rangel and Enrique Moreno, came up against obstacles and delays when Republicans controlled the Senate. While Paez waited four years for his confirmation hearing, Moreno never received one.

Nonetheless, Gonzales said the Bush administration is not responsible for what happened in the past, adding that now is "the right time" for the Senate to act. Gonzales attributed harsh criticism of Estrada's nomination to "misunderstandings" about his philosophy that judges have a limited role in the government and should simply apply the law, regardless of their personal opinions.

Former Deputy White House Chief of Staff Maria Echaveste, the highest-ranking Hispanic in the Clinton administration, told EFE that Estrada's nomination "was problematic" and that having "a Hispanic face" is not enough to defend the interests of Latinos.

Echaveste described Estrada as a jurist with "very conservative" ties who does not believe in affirmative action or the government's role in defending the rights of minorities and the poor.

However, Gabriela Lemus, policy director for the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), said Estrada, along with the Hispanics nominated by the Clinton administration, have fallen victim to "political games" between Republicans and Democrats.

Lemus noted that LULAC supports Estrada's nomination "because there isn't enough Hispanic representation in the judicial system," adding, "regardless of his ideology," he is qualified to do the job. Estrada's nomination has also received the backing of the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and the Hispanic National Bar Association.

A Honduran immigrant who came to the United States in 1979, Estrada studied law at Harvard University and has argued 15 cases before the Supreme Court as an assistant to the solicitor general. He has also worked with Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy. Estrada, currently practicing law at the offices of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, and worked with Theodore B. Olson, acting solicitor general, argued then-Gov. Bush's case before the Supreme Court regarding the 2000 election controversy over Florida ballots. EFE

Por Rebeca Logan.
Washington, 4 abr (EFE).- El consejero legal de la Casa Blanca, Al Gonzales, dijo hoy a EFE, que espera que "las excelentes cualidades y alta capacitaci¢n profesional" del abogado Miguel Estrada, lleven a una pronta ratificaci¢n del primer latino nominado para ser juez en el circuito federal del Distrito de Columbia.

Seg£n Gonzales el "gran talento y las habilidades" de Estrada le merecieron el nombramiento del presidente George W. Bush, a la segunda corte m s importante del pa¡s, que es vista como la antesala a la Corte Suprema. "El nombramiento de Estrada demuestra la importancia que tiene la diversidad para el presidente y le env¡a un poderoso mensaje a la comunidad hispana", dijo Gonzales en una entrevista, en la que agreg¢ que Bush estuvo muy impresionado por la historia personal del nominado.

Gonzales agreg¢ que Estrada "comparte la filosof¡a" judicial del presidente Bush y que el Senado, encargado de ratificar este nombramiento, debe darle una "audiencia justa" y votar a favor o en contra del nominado. Estrada, un inmigrante hondure¤o que lleg¢ a EEUU en 1979, se doctor¢ en Leyes en la prestigiosa Universidad de Harvard, present¢ 15 casos ante la Corte Suprema en calidad de asistente del procurador general y trabaj¢ con el juez supremo Anthony Kennedy, uno de los m s conservadores de este tribunal.

Actualmente, Estrada ejerce como abogado en la firma Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, y argument¢, junto a Theodore B. Olson, actual procurador general de Estados Unidos, en favor de Bush ante la Corte Suprema, durante la controversia que rodeo el conteo de los votos de Florida en la elecci¢n presidencial del a¤o 2000. Estrada, que fue nominado en mayo del a¤o pasado y cuyo nombramiento ha generado cr¡ticas, todav¡a no ha tenido una audiencia en el Senado de mayor¡a dem¢crata, hecho criticado por los republicanos y sobre el cual se pronunci¢ el presidente Bush antes de su reciente visita a Latinoam?rica.

Los dem¢cratas han se¤alado que varios jueces latinos, entre ellos Richard P ez, Jorge Rangel y Enrique Moreno, nominados por el ex presidente Bill Clinton, enfrentaron trabas y demoras cuando los republicanos controlaron el Senado. Mientras que P ez esper¢ cuatro a¤os para su confirmaci¢n, Moreno ni siquiera recibi¢ una audiencia. Gonzales reiter¢ que la administraci¢n Bush no es responsable de lo que haya sucedido en el pasado y que ahora es "el momento propicio" para que el Senado act£e.

El consejero presidencial agreg¢ que las cr¡ticas a Estrada se deben a "malentendidos acerca de la filosof¡a" del abogado, quien cree que los jueces tienen un papel limitado dentro del gobierno y que deben simplemente aplicar la ley, sin importar sus opiniones personales.

Mar¡a Echaveste, ex jefa adjunta de gabinete de la Casa Blanca y la latina con el cargo m s alto durante la administraci¢n de Clinton, dijo a EFE, que el nombramiento de Estrada "era problem tico" y que no bastaba con "tener una cara latina" para defender los intereses de esta comunidad.

Echaveste describi¢ a Estrada como un jurista con alianzas "muy conservadoras", que no cree en la acci¢n afirmativa ni en el papel del gobierno en defender los derechos de los pobres y las minor¡as.

Adem s, se¤al¢ que Estrada, quien ha sido descrito como un fiel seguidor de "la letra de la ley", nunca ha sido juez, por lo cual no se sabe qu? tipo de fallos emitir .

Agreg¢ que "le asusta" la posibilidad de tener un juez que piense de forma similar a la mayor¡a de la actual Corte Suprema, que decidi¢ la semana pasada limitar los derechos laborales de los trabajadores indocumentados.

Seg£n Echaveste, "s¡ queremos tener latinos en las cortes importantes del pa¡s, pero queremos alguien que act£e a favor de los hispanos y de la comunidad en general".

Por su parte, la directora de pol¡tica de La Liga de Ciudadanos Latinoamericanos Unidos (LULAC), Gabriela Lemus, dijo que parec¡a que Estrada, al igual que los jueces latinos nominados por la administraci¢n Clinton, era v¡ctima del "juego pol¡tico" entre ambos partidos.

Lemus inform¢ que LULAC respalda el nombramiento de Estrada, "porque no hay suficiente representaci¢n hispana en el sistema judicial", y agreg¢ que, "sin importar su ideolog¡a", se trata de una persona cualificada para asumir este cargo.

Estrada tambi?n recibi¢ el respaldo de la C mara de Comercio Hispana y de la Asociaci¢n de Abogados Hispanos de EEUU, mientras que el Consejo Nacional de la Raza y el Fondo M?xicoamericano de Educaci¢n y Defensa Legal (MALDEF), no se han pronunciado al respecto.

"Lo m s importante es que le den su oportunidad ante el Senado y punto", concluy¢ Lemus. EFE

More Battles Loom Over Bush's Nominees For Judgeships (NYT)
By NEIL A. LEWIS
The New York Times, April 08, 2002
WASHINGTON, April 6 - Neither the White House nor Senate Democrats are giving any quarter in their battle over what kind of judges should sit on the federal bench, and officials on both sides say they expect more confirmation fights in the months ahead.
The first confrontation could be over any of several conservative nominees. One possibility, both sides say, is President Bush's declared choice of Priscilla Owen, a conservative justice on the Texas Supreme Court, for a federal appeals court post. Justice Owen is an opponent of abortion rights for minors without their parents' permission.

The Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee banded together last month to defeat the nomination of Charles W. Pickering Sr. of Mississippi to a seat on the federal appeals court based in New Orleans, provoking denunciations from Republicans.
Some Democrats were blunt about what they hoped to accomplish. Senator Charles E. Schumer of New York said that in opposing the Pickering nomination they were sending a message to the White House that Mr. Bush should stop trying to stack the courts with conservatives.
"The bottom line is that the administration has made ideology a major factor in their selection of judges," Senator Schumer said in an interview. "I think it's fine that ideology is being debated more openly now."
But he added that the Judiciary Committee would not accept the administration's judicial nominees unless Mr. Bush broadened their ideological range.
The chief lawyer in the White House, however, rejected the idea that Mr. Bush would change his approach to choosing judicial nominees.
"The president has made very clear he has definite ideas about the kind of people he wants to fill the judiciary," Alberto R. Gonzales, the White House counsel, said in an interview this week. "The intention here is to keep sending up people like the ones we have sent up who we believe are qualified and in the mainstream."
On a recent campaign swing through the South, President Bush said he wanted a Republican-controlled Senate so he could put conservatives on the bench.
Mr. Gonzales said the president was naming lawyers to the bench who are chosen for competence, character and a judicial philosophy that respects precedent and believes in judicial restraint.
But Mr. Bush's use of the word conservatives in his campaign appearances was unusually direct.
Republicans have generally shown themselves willing to take casualties in their efforts to shape the federal bench to their liking. Even though Mr. Bush suffered a defeat with the Pickering nomination, the Republican Party is trying to extract some political advantage from the experience.
Mr. Bush has tried to use the issue against Senator Max Cleland of Georgia, who is running for re-election, and a Republican strategist said he expected the Pickering issue to play a role in several races in the South. One Republican Senate candidate, Lamar Alexander of Tennessee, has even broadcast a television advertisement arguing that the treatment of Judge Pickering was unfair to the South.
Democrats on the Judiciary Committee, which holds hearings on all judicial nominees, have also tried to send their message by arranging the order in which they will consider Mr. Bush's nominees, delaying votes on those they consider most conservative. To that end, the Democrats, who control the committee, are generally planning to schedule hearings and votes on those Bush nominees they consider more acceptable, such as James Howard of New Hampshire, who has been nominated for a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, in Boston.
Mr. Howard is considered a moderate and a relatively noncontroversial candidate, Democratic staff aides said. Others whom committee members consider less ideological, and who thus may get early consideration, include Julia Smith Gibbons and John M. Rogers, both nominated for seats on the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, in Cincinnati.
Eventually, the committee will run out of such candidates and will have to deal with some of the more outspokenly conservative nominees.
The committee may soon take up Mr. Bush's nomination of Justice Owen of the Texas Supreme Court to a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, in New Orleans, the same court to which Mr. Pickering was named. Justice Owen is generally viewed as a member of the conservative wing of a conservative State Supreme Court.
In addition to objecting to her views on abortion rights, liberal advocacy groups have raised questions about the relationship of Justice Owen's opinions to donations she received from Texas corporations, including Enron, the Houston energy giant that filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy law.
Justice Owen, who was elected in 1994 with the help of an $8,600 donation from Enron, later wrote a majority opinion that reversed a lower court order, saving the company about $225,000 in taxes.

Senator Patrick J. Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who is chairman of the Judiciary Committee, recently sent a series of questions to the White House asking for comment on the issue of any relationship between the donations and her rulings.

Mr. Gonzales said that he had examined the issue and found nothing improper on Justice Owen's part. He said he would soon write to Mr. Leahy outlining his position.

"Based on our review she's superbly qualified to serve on the Fifth Circuit," he said. "She's extremely bright, extraordinarily dedicated and very principled."

But opponents of Justice Owen are certain to recall a dispute that arose in 2000, when Mr. Gonzales was a fellow justice on the Texas court and Justice Owen was one of three court members who wrote dissents in a case involving a new Texas law regarding parental notification of abortions among minors. At the time, Mr. Gonzales suggested that the narrow reading of the law by the dissenters was "an unconscionable act of judicial activism."

Anne Womack, a spokesman for Mr. Gonzales, minimized the significance of the disagreement. "Judge Gonzales's opinion and Justice Owen's dissent reflect an honest and legitimate difference of how to interpret a difficult and vague statute," Ms. Womack said.

Justice Owen's nomination is likely to bring the abortion debate into play. Kate Michelman, the president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said that abortion rights groups would strongly oppose her. "We regard her as someone who exemplifies the most extreme hostility to reproductive rights of any of the nominees that President Bush has named," Ms. Michelman said.

Other Bush nominees who could become the subject of sharp battles include Miguel Estrada, a strong conservative who has been nominated to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, and D. Brooks Smith, nominated for the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, in Philadelphia.

Mr. Leahy has promised hearings this year to Ms. Owen, Mr. Estrada and Prof. Michael W. McConnell of the University of Utah, nominated to a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit, in Denver. Professor McConnell is considered the least likely to engender opposition of the three because of support for him among academics across the ideological spectrum.

In addition to objecting to her views on abortion rights, liberal advocacy groups have raised questions about the relationship of Justice Owen's opinions to donations she received from Texas corporations, including Enron, the Houston energy giant that filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy law.
Justice Owen, who was elected in 1994 with the help of an $8,600 donation from Enron, later wrote a majority opinion that reversed a lower court order, saving the company about $225,000 in taxes.

Senator Patrick J. Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who is chairman of the Judiciary Committee, recently sent a series of questions to the White House asking for comment on the issue of any relationship between the donations and her rulings.

Mr. Gonzales said that he had examined the issue and found nothing improper on Justice Owen's part. He said he would soon write to Mr. Leahy outlining his position.

"Based on our review she's superbly qualified to serve on the Fifth Circuit," he said. "She's extremely bright, extraordinarily dedicated and very principled."

But opponents of Justice Owen are certain to recall a dispute that arose in 2000, when Mr. Gonzales was a fellow justice on the Texas court and Justice Owen was one of three court members who wrote dissents in a case involving a new Texas law regarding parental notification of abortions among minors. At the time, Mr. Gonzales suggested that the narrow reading of the law by the dissenters was "an unconscionable act of judicial activism."

Anne Womack, a spokesman for Mr. Gonzales, minimized the significance of the disagreement. "Judge Gonzales's opinion and Justice Owen's dissent reflect an honest and legitimate difference of how to interpret a difficult and vague statute," Ms. Womack said.

Justice Owen's nomination is likely to bring the abortion debate into play. Kate Michelman, the president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said that abortion rights groups would strongly oppose her. "We regard her as someone who exemplifies the most extreme hostility to reproductive rights of any of the nominees that President Bush has named," Ms. Michelman said.

Other Bush nominees who could become the subject of sharp battles include Miguel Estrada, a strong conservative who has been nominated to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, and D. Brooks Smith, nominated for the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, in Philadelphia.

Mr. Leahy has promised hearings this year to Ms. Owen, Mr. Estrada and Prof. Michael W. McConnell of the University of Utah, nominated to a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit, in Denver. Professor McConnell is considered the least likely to engender opposition of the three because of support for him among academics across the ideological spectrum.

Senate Girds For Judicial Battle (Roll Call)
By Paul Kane
Roll Call, April 08, 2002
With an eye toward being fully prepared for a potential Supreme Court vacancy, both sides in the battle over judicial nominations are girding for more fights in the near future.
Republican aides say there could still be more to come in terms of payback for the Judiciary Committee's party-line defeat of the appellate court nomination of Judge Charles Pickering, a close friend of Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.). But their primary focus is going to be on revamping the way Senate Republicans and the White House battle with

Judiciary Democrats and liberal interest groups over the nominations. "We're going to have to be geared up for battle as much as possible," an administration official said. "Pickering has to be a wake-up call to every single Republican."

The first public step in their effort will come this week, when Senate Republicans expect to hold a press conference with Hispanic groups and Latino leaders urging the confirmation of Miguel Estrada, a lawyer nominated to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Also, key figures on the GOP side of the judicial nomination fights, including Senate Republican leaders and White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales, plan to meet midweek. The meeting is part of a series of new strategy sessions in which they will talk face-to-face every other week. GOPstaffers plan to meet once a week exclusively to discuss judicial nominations, aides said.

Senate staffers met at the White House early last week to discuss how to better coordinate message and outreach with conservative interest groups. Senate and administration officials feel that they haven't been as aggressive as the liberal groups that led the attack on Pickering.

Estrada's nomination, first announced in May, is seen as a chance for Republicans to actively push a Latino for a high-level position and earn goodwill with the burgeoning number of Hispanic voters. At past events on judicial nominations, Republicans, usually led by Minority Whip Don Nickles (Okla.), haven't missed a chance to mention the up-from-his-bootstraps story of Estrada, a Honduras native who climbed into the Ivy League and the highest levels of the legal profession.

But the same liberal interest groups that helped defeat Pickering are also readying themselves for this fight, and they see Supreme Court ambitions driving the GOP push for Estrada. Ralph Neas, president of People for the American Way, noted that by August it will have been eight years since there has been a vacancy on the Supreme Court - the longest drought since the Monroe administration in the early 1820s.

The heavy betting among legal observers is that President Bush will want to make history by putting the first Hispanic on the Court, and Estrada is one of the names mentioned as a possibility.

"My guess is it would be a Latino Clarence Thomas,"Neas said, referring to the black Supreme Court justice who had served on the D.C. appellate court for a little more than a year before his nomination.

Another potential candidate is Gonzales, a longtime friend of Bush's who has played a lead role in selecting judicial nominees. Of the two, Estrada - a Federalist Society member who worked with Solicitor General Ted Olson at Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLC - is viewed as more reliably conservative.

Either Estrada or Gonzales would present a difficult political target for Democrats and their allies, who might be hesitant to attack a historic nomination from a key voting bloc. Besides two years on the Texas Supreme Court, Gonzales has never served as a judge, and Estrada has no experience on the bench, providing virtually no paper trail for groups like Neas' or the similarly aligned Alliance for Justice to pick apart as they did with Pickering.

"We don't know that much about him," Marcia Kuntz, the alliance's judicial expert, said of Estrada. While Neas and the Alliance for Justice haven't taken an official stand on Estrada, Kuntz said the groups are very concerned about his "judicial temperament" and what they call a "very rigid, right-wing approach to issues."

Timing could be key. None of the three oldest justices - John Paul Stevens, 81, Chief Justice William Rehnquist, 77, or Sandra Day O'Connor, 71 - has indicated an intention to retire, and legal observers say they have yet to hear the whispers that usually precede a retirement. Still, one observer noted that it will become clear some time next month, just before the Court's term ends in June, if one of the justices plans to retire.

If an opening occurs this summer, it would be difficult to envision Bush nominating Estrada, who may or may not have been confirmed to the appellate court by then. Republicans have accused Judiciary Democrats of stonewalling the Estrada nomination in an effort to hurt his chances of getting a Supreme Court nod, something Democrats say is ridiculous.

David Carle, spokesman for Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), noted that Leahy has promised that Estrada and other controversial nominees, including Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen, will get a hearing and eventually a vote, a different tactic than Republicans used against controversial Clinton administration nominees in the 1990s.

"Republicans blocked more than 50 judicial nominees from the federal bench just as surely as Judge Pickering wasn't promoted in this case," Carle said. "The difference is that Judge Pickering got a hearing and a vote, and so did the 42 judges who have been confirmed in the last eight months."

A Supreme Court nomination would instantly become a national political issue, particularly if it comes this summer with hearings in the fall. With so many key Court decisions coming on 5-4 margins, "it would be a highly dramatic, historic moment,"Neas said.

Even without a Supreme Court vacancy, Republicans feel that the Pickering vote has given them an opening in Senate races in the South. At a fundraiser for Rep. Saxby Chambliss (R-Ga.) on March 27, Bush attacked Chambliss' opponent, Sen. Max Cleland (D), for not publicly supporting the Pickering nomination - and Cleland isn't even on Judiciary.

Last week, with Vice President Cheney at his side in Arkansas, Sen. Tim Hutchinson (R-Ark.), one of the GOP's two most vulnerable incumbents, vowed to support "strict constructionist" nominees from the Bush administration.

Liberal groups, and privately some Democrats, say they will welcome this debate with open arms. "That's the kind of debate we would love to have. That's the kind of debate I would relish having," Neas said.

If the judicial nominees become a campaign issue, Neas said it will provide Democrats a chance to "have the debate that did not occur in 2000," one that deals with the consequences of conservative judges and what that means to abortion rights, civil rights, environmental law and other liberal causes.

"These are all issues that are at stake now," said Kuntz, the Alliance for Justice's director of the Judicial Selection Project.

Because of the Pickering defeat, Republicans say they have developed more respect for and fear of the liberal interest groups that fought him, particularly the NAACP and the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League, which both represent constituencies of millions of voters that can be easily activated on social issues.

The GOP was able to activate its grassroots on the Pickering vote through talk radio and conservative Christian broadcasts just before the vote, but aides lament that they don't have groups that focus on these issues full-time the way liberal groups do.

The Republicans' most reliable, well-funded backers come from the business community, which almost never gets involved in the federal judicial process the way the NAACP and NARAL do. "That's their bread and butter, while we're better on tax issues," said one senior GOP aide.

And that's not going to change any time soon, according to a prominent GOP lobbyist and fundraiser. He said the business community is primarily concerned about "the immediate effect of legislation on their bottom line."

If asked to devote time or money toward judicial nomination fights, he said the business community would likely tell Republicans that they'd rather spend their resources on reinstating a GOP majority in the Senate, which could then do what it wants with the judiciary.

"The smarter money would be electing a Republican majority in the Senate," he said, "because it'll take care of all your problems."

STATEMENT OF DEPUTY SECRETARY

LEO S. MACKAY, Jr. PhD

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

BEFORE THE

HOUSE COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS

SUBCOMMITTEE ON HEALTH

APRIL 10, 2002

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Subcommittee:

I am pleased to be here today to comment on two bills, H.R. 3254, the "Medical Education for National Defense in the 21st Century Act" and H.R. 3253, the "National Medical Emergency Preparedness Act of 2001." VA is the largest integrated national health care system with personnel and facilities in virtually every community across the U.S., a robust research program, affiliations with most of the Nation's medical schools, and proven expertise in emergency management. As a predeployed national asset, VA is uniquely positioned to positively contribute to Homeland Security. If enacted, these bills would each enhance VA's ability, chiefly through educational and research efforts, to assist both VA's health care providers and the Nation's medical community to recognize and promptly respond to national medical emergencies, particularly those involving chemical, biological, and radiological (CBR) warfare agents. In general terms, both bills would expand VA's current efforts to train VA and non-VA health care providers in, and to sponsor sound research into, the prevention, containment, and treatment of injuries related to exposure to CBR agents.

Mr. Chairman, in opening remarks at his subcommittee's hearing on November 14, 2001, "Terror on the Homefront: Are We Medically Prepared?," Chairman Buyer asked whether the U.S. medical community was prepared for biological, chemical, and radiological acts of terrorism.

At that same hearing, we heard from Dr. Carlos Omenaca, a Specialist in Infectious Diseases and Critical Care Medicine in Miami, Florida, who was directly involved in the diagnosis and treatment of inhalation anthrax in one of the cases in Florida. It was his contention that the Nation's medical personnel lack the training needed to recognize illnesses that have not occurred in this country in decades, such as smallpox, anthrax, plague, Q fever, tularemia, brucellosis, and viral hemorrhagic fevers. Consequently, those diseases are not emphasized in the core curriculum in our health provider training programs. This situation is troubling given that such pathogens may be used as biological weapons.

The two proposals under discussion today address the issues raised in that hearing. Both proposals could help the U.S. medical community prepare for acts of terrorism.

We generally support both bills. However, I am concerned that carrying out the proposed activities without dedicated funding could unacceptably diminish VA's ability to fulfill its primary mission—providing health care and services to veterans and their families. Accordingly, we urge modification of the bills to make them effective only if Congress appropriates funds specifically for the proposed activities.

Today, I would like to briefly go over the main provisions of each bill and provide VA's views on those provisions.

H.R. 3254

Mr. Chairman, the first bill, H.R. 3254, would require the Secretaries of Veterans Affairs and Defense to develop jointly and distribute a series of model education and training programs on the preparedness needed by health professionals in dealing with terrorist activities and medical responses to the consequences of terrorist activities. The programs' content would emphasize education and training in the recognition of chemical, biological, and radiological agents that may be used in terrorist activities and identification of the potential symptoms related to use of those agents and how to prepare best for managing the clinical consequences of terrorist acts resulting in the exposure of victims to chemical, biological, and radiological agents. The education and training programs would also be required to address short-term and long-term health consequences, including psychological effects that may result from exposure to such agents and the appropriate treatment of those health consequences. In addition, the programs must identify measures to be taken by health care professionals to prevent them from suffering secondary contamination or infection while treating victims of a national medical emergency. H.R. 3254 would also require that the proposed joint education and training programs be designed for health professions students, graduate medical education trainees, and health practitioners in a variety of fields.

Under the legislation, initial funding for the programs would be authorized from funds made available under the Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act (Public Law 107-38).

VA strongly supports H.R. 3254. The events of September 11, 2001, and the subsequent incidents involving anthrax are evidence of an increase in the use of unconventional weapons by terrorists. Such weapons include CBR agents that have the potential to inflict serious, widespread, and sustained injury to exposed populations. As you are aware, injuries associated with such unconventional weapons or agents may result not only in immediate physical trauma but also in long-term adverse health effects. Victims might also suffer from psychological trauma, such as post-traumatic stress disorder, which may not manifest itself until long after the infliction of the trauma.

Given the growing capability and desire of terrorists to use CBR warfare agents on military and civilian populations, it is imperative that VA and non-VA health care providers receive the education and training needed to become highly adept at recognizing and responding to both the immediate and potential long-term medical needs of individuals exposed to such unconventional warfare agents. If enacted, H.R. 3254 would serve as a significant means of reaching that end because VA and DoD are experienced in educating and training the Nation's health care professionals, and education and training in these specific subjects is part of the mission of both Departments.

We particularly support the proposed requirement that the education and training programs be designed for a wide range of health care professionals at varying levels of expertise and training including medical students and residents. In the event of a national medical emergency, the Nation will require the expert services of not only physicians but also myriad other health care professionals. Today, VA sponsors the largest medical education and health professions training program in the United States, training about 85,000 health professionals last year in its medical facilities that are affiliated with almost 1,400 medical and other schools. It is also critical that the Nation's medical schools integrate recognition and response to these unconventional weapons into core curriculum for students and graduate medical education trainees. The proposed joint program could assist these efforts.

However, we recommend that the Committee consider inclusion of education and training programs for injuries caused by incendiaries, explosives, and basic trauma because the medical responses for those types of injuries are frequently highly specialized. We also recommend that the Committee consider placing DoD responsibility for the joint program in the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs), which is the appropriate counterpart to the Under Secretary for Health. As drafted, the bill provides that DoD would carry out the joint program through the F. Edward Hebert School of Medicine of the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences.

I reiterate my concern that these programs and activities must not interfere or diminish our ability to provide care to veterans and their families. If enacted, the Department projects the first-year costs associated with H.R. 3254 to be $5,641,500, with ten-year costs estimated to be $55,065,000.

H.R. 3253

Mr. Chairman, I next turn to H.R. 3253. This bill would require the Secretary to establish four or more Emergency Medical Preparedness Centers within the Veterans Health Administration (VHA). Under the proposal, VA employees would staff the proposed Centers, and the VHA Headquarters official responsible for medical preparedness would be responsible for supervising and evaluating the Centers' operations. The Centers would have three specific missions. First, they would carry out research on and develop methods in detection, diagnosis, vaccination, protection, and treatment for CBR threats to the public health and safety. Second, they would provide education, training, and advice to VA and non-VA healthcare professionals. Third, the Centers would provide contingent rapid response laboratory assistance and other assistance to local health care authorities in the event of a national emergency.

H.R. 3253 would require that at least one of the proposed Centers focus on chemical threats, another concentrate on biological threats, and a third on radiological threats. Each Center would be required to conduct research on improved medical preparedness in that Center's particular area of expertise. To carry out this particular mandate, each Center would be authorized to seek funding from both public and private sources.

In addition, the bill would require the Secretary to ensure that the work of the Centers is conducted in close coordination with the Office of Homeland Security (OHS) and the Department of Defense (DoD), and that research products or other information produced by the Centers is coordinated and shared with the OHS and DoD. Work produced by the Centers would also have to be made available to the Nation's health care providers.

REV_00142726

H.R. 3253 would also authorize the Secretary to assist Federal, State, and local civil and law enforcement authorities with investigations to protect the public safety and to prevent or obviate CBR-related threats. Although we have the expertise to support such activities, I am concerned that we should identify mechanisms to reimburse VA lest those activities detract from our primary mission of serving veterans.

Finally, the bill would authorize initial funding from the Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act (Public Law 107-38). It would also authorize additional appropriations and require the Under Secretary for Health to allocate from funds appropriated for the Medical Care Account and the Medical and Prosthetics Research Accounts such amounts as the Under Secretary for Health determines appropriate to carry out the activities of the Centers.

We strongly support the goals of H.R. 3253 and believe that VA's expertise and infrastructure should be enlisted to help the Nation respond to the health consequences of terrorists' use, and potential use, of CBR agents and other similar unconventional weapons. However, as I have stated above, the bill's requirements to establish and conduct the Centers, as set forth in the legislation, and to carry out the other additional activities must be conditioned on Congress appropriating funds specifically and separately for those purposes.

The training mission of the Centers is somewhat similar to the goals of H.R. 3254 addressed earlier. Again, we strongly support this role for VA and recommend that the Subcommittee work to integrate the similar training provisions of the two bills. To help address the concern that the expenses of these activities must not diminish VA's capacity to carry out its primary mission, we suggest that the authority to obtain private and public funding for research into improved medical preparedness, including reimbursement, be extended to the Centers for operation of their programs and activities. We further recommend modification of the bill to leave to the Secretary oversight responsibility over the Centers.

We also strongly support VA's having a role in the conduct of medical-preparedness research. Indeed, I would like to point out that VA has already initiated several research activities that, in our view, are consistent with the proposed activities of the Centers. For instance, VA's Office of Research and Development (ORD) recently issued two solicitations for research relating to bio-terrorism. VA Medical Research Service will fund and establish Research Enhancement Award Programs for scientifically meritorious program projects relating to the diagnosis, prevention, and treatment of potentially fatal airborne pathogens or toxins. The Health Services Research and Development Service will support research focused on improving the capacity of the VA system to prepare for and respond to terrorist attacks. In addition, ORD is providing grants to VA facilities to enhance the physical security of research laboratories and animal facilities. Overall, in FY 2003 VA will commit up to $2 million from research funds for these and similar initiatives. VA is proud of the success of its research programs, including our research efforts into war-related illnesses. We embrace our national role in addressing these concerns. As Secretary Principi pointed out in a recent interview, VA was involved in biological and chemical warfare research prior to Sept. 11, 2001. Our research extends beyond the smallpox vaccine to possible treatments for various biochemical threats. Our aim is to continue these dynamic and vital research efforts as part of the overall national effort.

VA also supports having a role in the provision of rapid response laboratory assistance in the event of national emergencies, as this bill would authorize.

We recommend that the Committee consider adding the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) as the third organization with whom VA is to coordinate the conduct of the work of the Centers. As you are aware, HHS possesses great expertise in the specialized areas and activities to be pursued by the Centers.

If enacted, VA will limit expenditures to carry out the mandates of H.R. 3253 to the amounts authorized for appropriation.

This concludes my statement. I will be happy to answer any questions you may have.

Senate Girds for Judicial Battle

Paul Kane
Roll Call
April 8, 2002, Monday

With an eye toward being fully prepared for a potential Supreme Court vacancy, both sides in the battle over judicial nominations are girding for more fights in the near future.

Republican aides say there could still be more to come in terms of payback for the Judiciary Committee's party-line defeat of the appellate court nomination of Judge Charles Pickering, a close friend of Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.). But their primary focus is going to be on revamping the way Senate Republicans and the White House battle with Judiciary Democrats and liberal interest groups over the nominations.

"We're going to have to be geared up for battle as much as possible," an administration official said. "Pickering has to be a wake-up call to every single Republican."

The first public step in their effort will come this week, when Senate Republicans expect to hold a press conference with Hispanic groups and Latino leaders urging the confirmation of Miguel Estrada, a lawyer nominated to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Also, key figures on the GOP side of the judicial nomination fights, including Senate Republican leaders and White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales, plan to meet midweek. The meeting is part of a series of new strategy sessions in which they will talk face-to-face every other week. GOPstaffers plan to meet once a week exclusively to discuss judicial nominations, aides said.

Senate staffers met at the White House early last week to discuss how to better coordinate message and outreach with conservative interest groups. Senate and administration officials feel that they haven't been as aggressive as the liberal groups that led the attack on Pickering.

Estrada's nomination, first announced in May, is seen as a chance for Republicans to actively push a Latino for a high-level position and earn goodwill with the burgeoning number of Hispanic voters. At past events on judicial nominations, Republicans, usually led by Minority Whip Don Nickles (Okla.), haven't missed a chance to mention the up-from-his-bootstraps story of Estrada, a Honduras native who climbed into the Ivy League and the highest levels of the legal profession.

But the same liberal interest groups that helped defeat Pickering are also readying themselves for this fight, and they see Supreme Court ambitions driving the GOP push for Estrada. Ralph Neas, president of People for the American Way, noted that by August it will have been eight years since there has been a vacancy on the Supreme Court - the longest drought since the Monroe administration in the early 1820s.

The heavy betting among legal observers is that President Bush will want to make history by putting the first Hispanic on the Court, and Estrada is one of the names mentioned as a possibility.

"My guess is it would be a Latino Clarence Thomas,"Neas said, referring to the black Supreme Court justice who had served on the D.C. appellate court for a little more than a year before his nomination.

Another potential candidate is Gonzales, a longtime friend of Bush's who has played a lead role in selecting judicial nominees. Of the two, Estrada - a Federalist Society member who worked with Solicitor General Ted Olson at Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLC - is viewed as more reliably conservative.

Either Estrada or Gonzales would present a difficult political target for Democrats and their allies, who might be hesitant to attack a historic nomination from a key voting bloc. Besides two years on the Texas Supreme Court, Gonzales has never served as a judge, and Estrada has no experience on the bench, providing virtually no paper trail for groups like Neas' or the similarly aligned Alliance for Justice to pick apart as they did with Pickering.

"We don't know that much about him," Marcia Kuntz, the alliance's judicial expert, said of Estrada. While Neas and the Alliance for Justice haven't taken an official stand on Estrada, Kuntz said the groups are very concerned about his "judicial temperament" and what they call a "very rigid, right-wing approach to issues."

Timing could be key. None of the three oldest justices - John Paul Stevens, 81, Chief Justice William Rehnquist, 77, or Sandra Day O'Connor, 71 - has indicated an intention to retire, and legal observers say they have yet to hear the whispers that usually precede a retirement.
Still, one observer noted that it will become clear some time next month, just before the Court's term ends in June, if one of the justices plans to retire.

REV_00142748

If an opening occurs this summer, it would be difficult to envision Bush nominating Estrada, who may or may not have been confirmed to the appellate court by then. Republicans have accused Judiciary Democrats of stonewalling the Estrada nomination in an effort to hurt his chances of getting a Supreme Court nod, something Democrats say is ridiculous.

David Carle, spokesman for Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), noted that Leahy has promised that Estrada and other controversial nominees, including Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen, will get a hearing and eventually a vote, a different tactic than Republicans used against controversial Clinton administration nominees in the 1990s.

"Republicans blocked more than 50 judicial nominees from the federal bench just as surely as Judge Pickering wasn't promoted in this case,"Carle said. "The difference is that Judge Pickering got a hearing and a vote, and so did the 42 judges who have been confirmed in the last eight months."

A Supreme Court nomination would instantly become a national political issue, particularly if it comes this summer with hearings in the fall. With so many key Court decisions coming on 5-4 margins, "it would be a highly dramatic, historic moment,"Neas said.

Even without a Supreme Court vacancy, Republicans feel that the Pickering vote has given them an opening in Senate races in the South. At a fundraiser for Rep. Saxby Chambliss (R-Ga.) on March 27, Bush attacked Chambliss' opponent, Sen. Max Cleland (D), for not publicly supporting the Pickering nomination - and Cleland isn't even on Judiciary.

Last week, with Vice President Cheney at his side in Arkansas, Sen. Tim Hutchinson (R-Ark.), one of the GOP's two most vulnerable incumbents, vowed to support "strict constructionist" nominees from the Bush administration.

Liberal groups, and privately some Democrats, say they will welcome this debate with open arms. "That's the kind of debate we would love to have. That's the kind of debate I would relish having," Neas said.

If the judicial nominees become a campaign issue, Neas said it will provide Democrats a chance to "have the debate that did not occur in 2000," one that deals with the consequences of conservative judges and what that means to abortion rights, civil rights, environmental law and other liberal causes.

"These are all issues that are at stake now," said Kuntz, the Alliance for Justice's director of the Judicial Selection Project.

Because of the Pickering defeat, Republicans say they have developed more respect for and fear of the liberal interest groups that fought him, particularly the NAACP and the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League, which both represent constituencies of millions of voters that can be easily activated on social issues.

REV_00142749

The GOP was able to activate its grassroots on the Pickering vote through talk radio and conservative Christian broadcasts just before the vote, but aides lament that they don't have groups that focus on these issues full-time the way liberal groups do.

The Republicans' most reliable, well-funded backers come from the business community, which almost never gets involved in the federal judicial process the way the NAACP and NARAL do. "That's their bread and butter, while we're better on tax issues," said one senior GOP aide.

And that's not going to change any time soon, according to a prominent GOP lobbyist and fundraiser. He said the business community is primarily concerned about "the immediate effect of legislation on their bottom line."

If asked to devote time or money toward judicial nomination fights, he said the business community would likely tell Republicans that they'd rather spend their resources on reinstating a GOP majority in the Senate, which could then do what it wants with the judiciary.

"The smarter money would be electing a Republican majority in the Senate," he said, "because it'll take care of all your problems."

The War Over the Courts Has Just Begun

Alexandra Starr
Business Week
April 8, 2002 Monday

When Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee scuttled the nomination of conservative jurist Charles W. Pickering, it was not only a slap in the face for Minority Leader Trent Lott, the judge's patron and top booster. It was also a rare setback for the man pushing Pickering from the shadows, Justice Dept. powerhouse Viet D. Dinh.

Dinh, 34, who earned his conservative stripes by working on the Senate Whitewater probe and on the impeachment of former President Bill Clinton, is the Justice Dept.'s point man in vetting and promoting Bush's judicial picks. That makes the little-known official one of the most important players in moving the judiciary rightward after eight years of Democratic nominees. "I firmly believe the proper role of a judge...is to follow the law rather than make the law," Dinh told BusinessWeek. The former Georgetown University law professor doesn't just weigh in on judges. He also signs off on all of Justice's anti-terrorism initiatives, from trying alleged militants in military tribunals to allowing jailers to eavesdrop on conversations between terror suspects and their lawyers. Another controversial Dinh move: prohibiting FBI agents from using a national gun-purchasing database to find out if suspected radicals have bought firearms.

him apart. Born in war-torn Saigon as the youngest of seven children, he spoke almost no English when he arrived in the U.S. as a 10-year-old refugee. To help support the family, Dinh and his siblings worked in a California sweatshop after school, sewing clothes until 11 p.m. Dinh still managed to win admission to Harvard, where he later earned a law degree with honors. He subsequently clerked for Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

While no one questions Dinh's credentials, some Dems have criticized his ideology and operating style. Democratic Hill staffers say he withheld important documents on Pickering and was overly antagonistic in promoting him behind closed doors. "His abrasive approach sometimes hurts more than helps the Administration's agenda," says a Senate aide.

Team Bush realizes it needs to do something to avoid more Pickering-style debacles. While White House Counsel Alberto R. Gonzales says he's pleased with Dinh's work, he also plans to add a senior GOP operative to the White House staff to shepherd Bush's judicial picks full-time. "We're looking at someone who can coordinate between the White House and Justice Dept.," Gonzales says.

The fact that the White House is looking for reinforcements is a sign of how serious the judicial-selection wars have become. On the day of Pickering's defeat, Bush political guru Karl Rove told Christian activists that if Democrats thought they had successfully dissuaded the President from tapping conservatives for the bench, "they sent the wrong message to the wrong guy."

For Dinh and his allies, that means a war of attrition -- at least as long as Democrats control the Senate. Two fortysomething appellate court nominees already are in Democrats' crosshairs: Ohio State University law professor Jeffrey S. Sutton and former Assistant Solicitor General Miguel Estrada. Democrats worry that the very conservative Estrada, Bush's pick for the D.C. Circuit Court, is being groomed to be the first Hispanic Supreme Court justice.

Some judicial watchers speculate that Dinh himself could be named to the high court one day. Whether that lies within the realm of possibility will depend in large part on whether Dinh sees to it that, despite the Pickering setback, Team Bush succeeds in the struggle to shift the federal bench to the right.

More Battles Loom Over Bush's Nominees for Judgeships

Neil Lewis
The New York Times
April 7, 2002, Sunday

Neither the White House nor Senate Democrats are giving any quarter in their battle over what kind of judges should sit on the federal bench, and officials on both sides say they expect more confirmation fights in the months ahead.

REV_00142751

The first confrontation could be over any of several conservative nominees. One possibility, both sides say, is President Bush's declared choice of Priscilla Owen, a conservative justice on the Texas Supreme Court, for a federal appeals court post. Justice Owen is an opponent of abortion rights for minors without their parents' permission. The Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee banded together last month to defeat the nomination of Charles W. Pickering Sr. of Mississippi to a seat on the federal appeals court based in New Orleans, provoking denunciations from Republicans.

Some Democrats were blunt about what they hoped to accomplish. Senator Charles E. Schumer of New York said that in opposing the Pickering nomination they were sending a message to the White House that Mr. Bush should stop trying to stack the courts with conservatives.

"The bottom line is that the administration has made ideology a major factor in their selection of judges," Senator Schumer said in an interview. "I think it's fine that ideology is being debated more openly now."

But he added that the Judiciary Committee would not accept the administration's judicial nominees unless Mr. Bush broadened their ideological range.

The chief lawyer in the White House, however, rejected the idea that Mr. Bush would change his approach to choosing judicial nominees.

"The president has made very clear he has definite ideas about the kind of people he wants to fill the judiciary," Alberto R. Gonzales, the White House counsel, said in an interview this week. "The intention here is to keep sending up people like the ones we have sent up who we believe are qualified and in the mainstream."

On a recent campaign swing through the South, President Bush said he wanted a Republican-controlled Senate so he could put conservatives on the bench.

Mr. Gonzales said the president was naming lawyers to the bench who are chosen for competence, character and a judicial philosophy that respects precedent and believes in judicial restraint.

But Mr. Bush's use of the word conservatives in his campaign appearances was unusually direct.

Republicans have generally shown themselves willing to take casualties in their efforts to shape the federal bench to their liking. Even though Mr. Bush suffered a defeat with the Pickering nomination, the Republican Party is trying to extract some political advantage from the experience.

Mr. Bush has tried to use the issue against Senator Max Cleland of Georgia, who is running for re-election, and a Republican strategist said he expected the Pickering issue to play a role in several races in the South. One Republican Senate candidate, Lamar Alexander of Tennessee, has even broadcast a television advertisement arguing that the treatment of Judge Pickering was unfair to the South.

Democrats on the Judiciary Committee, which holds hearings on all judicial nominees, have also tried to send their message by arranging the order in which they will consider Mr. Bush's nominees, delaying votes on those they consider most conservative. To that end, the Democrats, who control the committee, are generally planning to schedule hearings and votes on those Bush nominees they consider more acceptable, such as James Howard of New Hampshire, who has been nominated for a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, in Boston.

Mr. Howard is considered a moderate and a relatively noncontroversial candidate, Democratic staff aides said. Others whom committee members consider less ideological, and who thus may get early consideration, include Julia Smith Gibbons and John M. Rogers, both nominated for seats on the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, in Cincinnati.

Eventually, the committee will run out of such candidates and will have to deal with some of the more outspokenly conservative nominees.

The committee may soon take up Mr. Bush's nomination of Justice Owen of the Texas Supreme Court to a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, in New Orleans, the same court to which Mr. Pickering was named. Justice Owen is generally viewed as a member of the conservative wing of a conservative State Supreme Court.

In addition to objecting to her views on abortion rights, liberal advocacy groups have raised questions about the relationship of Justice Owen's opinions to donations she received from Texas corporations, including Enron, the Houston energy giant that filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy law.

Justice Owen, who was elected in 1994 with the help of an $8,600 donation from Enron, later wrote a majority opinion that reversed a lower court order, saving the company about $225,000 in taxes.

Senator Patrick J. Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who is chairman of the Judiciary Committee, recently sent a series of questions to the White House asking for comment on the issue of any relationship between the donations and her rulings.

Mr. Gonzales said that he had examined the issue and found nothing improper on Justice Owen's part. He said he would soon write to Mr. Leahy outlining his position.

"Based on our review she's superbly qualified to serve on the Fifth Circuit," he said. "She's extremely bright, extraordinarily dedicated and very principled."

But opponents of Justice Owen are certain to recall a dispute that arose in 2000, when Mr. Gonzales was a fellow justice on the Texas court and Justice Owen was one of three court members who wrote dissents in a case involving a new Texas law regarding parental notification of abortions among minors. At the time, Mr. Gonzales suggested that the narrow reading of the law by the dissenters was "an unconscionable act of judicial activism."

Anne Womack, a spokesman for Mr. Gonzales, minimized the significance of the disagreement. "Judge Gonzales's opinion and Justice Owen's dissent reflect an honest and legitimate difference of how to interpret a difficult and vague statute," Ms. Womack said.

Justice Owen's nomination is likely to bring the abortion debate into play. Kate Michelman, the president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said that abortion rights groups would strongly oppose her. "We regard her as someone who exemplifies the most extreme hostility to reproductive rights of any of the nominees that President Bush has named," Ms. Michelman said.

Other Bush nominees who could become the subject of sharp battles include Miguel Estrada, a strong conservative who has been nominated to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, and D. Brooks Smith, nominated for the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, in Philadelphia.

Mr. Leahy has promised hearings this year to Ms. Owen, Mr. Estrada and Prof. Michael W. McConnell of the University of Utah, nominated to a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit, in Denver. Professor McConnell is considered the least likely to engender opposition of the three because of support for him among academics across the ideological spectrum.

Vice President Speaks at Pickering Benefit

Jason Straziuso
The Commercial Appeal (Memphis, TN)
April 6, 2002 Saturday

Vice President Cheney told a crowd of Rep. Chip Pickering's (R-Miss.) supporters Friday that the United States "must be prepared to go on offense" to ensure the security of the country.

Cheney, speaking at a $1,000-a-plate breakfast, praised Pickering for his commitment to Mississippi and said the 3rd District representative "is the kind of person we need more of in Congress."

"The President and I count on Chip Pickering, and we're counting on all of you to send him back for another term," Cheney said. About 180 people attended the event at a downtown Jackson hotel, where security was extremely tight. About 50 big donors and Pickering campaign workers met with Cheney privately before the speech.

In his 15-minute speech, the Vice President concentrated on the economy and the country's military response to Sept. 11.

Cheney said the country "is still at risk of serious harm" but noted that defenses - such as airport security and intelligence sharing - were on the rise.

"Wars are not won on the defensive," Cheney said. "For the long-term security of our people and our freedom, we must be prepared to go on offense. We must find the enemies of the United States and bring them to justice."

Cheney also told the crowd that the Pickering name brings admiration and respect in Washington, and said the congressman's father, U.S. Dist. Judge Charles Pickering, was treated unfairly by Democrats on the Judiciary Committee who in March voted down the judge's appellate nomination.

Sen. Thad Cochran and Rep. Roger Wicker (both R-Miss.) and state auditor Phil Bryant joined Pickering, Cheney and their two wives on stage.

In attendance were former governor Kirk Fordice, former Republican National Committee chairman Haley Barbour, WorldCom Inc. chief executive Bernie Ebbers and Chief Phillip Martin of the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians.

Cheney is on the last leg of a four-state road trip to help collect campaign cash for GOP House and Senate candidates.

His visit to Mississippi came two days after a $1,000-a-ticket private fund-raiser for Pickering on the Gulf Coast that featured House Speaker Dennis Hastert.

Chip Pickering praised Cheney and Bush for fostering energy, agricultural and other programs "that mean so much to Mississippians."

The congressman also lauded Cheney and Bush for creating an international coalition to protect Americans after Sept. 11.

Pickering said that next up in his congressional campaign against Rep. Ronnie Shows (D-Miss.) was "a lot of hand shaking door-to-door."

Pickering and Shows face off this year in what could be one of the nation's most closely watched congressional races.

The two ended up in the same district after Mississippi lost one of its five U.S. House seats because of slow population growth in the 1990s.

Federal bench pick's Enron links examined; Texas jurist handled dealings appropriately, Bush counsel says

Michelle Mittelstadt
The Dallas Morning News

REV_00142755

April 6, 2002, Saturday

WASHINGTON - The White House offered a spirited defense Friday of Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen's record, hoping to answer Democratic concerns over her nomination to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Nominated by President Bush last May to the appellate court that covers Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana, the conservative jurist has drawn considerable scrutiny from Democrats for what critics charge is a pro-business tilt. Word that she received campaign contributions from Enron during her 1994 campaign for the state Supreme Court sparked a new round of attention. Two years after accepting $ 8,600 in Enron contributions, Justice Owen wrote an opinion in an arcane tax dispute that spared the Houston energy trader $ 225,000 in taxes. Critics suggest the contributions may have affected the ruling. Defenders reject that claim, noting the opinion was unanimous, consistent with other judicial rulings and affected interests other than Enron.

The Senate Judiciary Committee has yet to schedule a hearing for Justice Owen.

The Enron issue "has not been helpful for the nominee," Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said recently. "In fact, I've heard some real concern by both Republican and Democratic senators because of that."

In a letter Friday to Mr. Leahy, White House counsel Al Gonzales said a review of her campaign contributions and decisions in cases involving Enron offered "no basis to question Justice Owen's fitness to serve on the Fifth Circuit."

"As you know, I served with Justice Owen and I am convinced from my work with her that she is a person of exceptional integrity, character and intellect," Mr. Gonzales, a former high court justice, wrote.

The Enron contributions represented less than 1 percent of the $ 1.2 million in contributions she took in during the 1994 campaign, he said, adding that it was "entirely proper" for her campaign to receive contributions and there was "nothing inappropriate" about the sources. Seven of the court's nine justices have taken Enron campaign contributions, he said.

And, Mr. Gonzales said, a White House review of the six cases involving Enron that have come before the court during Justice Owen's tenure found her position could be characterized as favorable to Enron in two cases and adverse in two cases. No position could be characterized in the fifth case, he said, and she did not participate in the sixth because it had been a matter at her former law firm.

"The decisions of the Texas Supreme Court since January 1995 in proceedings involving Enron have been ordinary and raise no questions whatsoever," Mr. Gonzales wrote. Referring specifically to the Enron tax case that has drawn scrutiny, he wrote: "In my judgment, this case raises no legitimate issue with respect to Justice Owen's confirmation."

Leahy spokesman David Carle said the senator "appreciates Judge Gonzales' responsiveness in answering some questions that have been raised about this nomination in several news stories."

"The issue in this instance has not been the nominee's Enron-related contributions but the nominee's actions as a judge," Mr. Carle said. "Judge Gonzales' review of these cases will be a useful addition to the committee's record as it prepares to schedule a hearing on this nomination."

VP Cheney lends hand to GOP congressman in Mississippi

John Porretto
The Associated Press
April 5, 2002, Friday

Vice President Dick Cheney took his fund-raising efforts to Mississippi on Friday, speaking out on behalf of Republican Rep. Chip Pickering at a $1,000-a-plate breakfast.

Cheney praised Pickering for his diligence and commitment to Mississippi and said the 3rd District representative "is the kind of person we need more of in Congress."

"The president and I count on Chip Pickering, and we're counting on you to send him back for another term," Cheney said. Some 150 people attended the event at a downtown Jackson hotel, where security was extremely tight.

The gathering included the state's top Republican leaders, such as U.S. Sen. Thad Cochran and Rep. Roger Wicker of the 1st Congressional District, as well as former Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour, who's considering a run for governor in 2003.

Also showing their support for Pickering were former Gov. Kirk Fordice, Chief Phillip Martin of the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians and WorldCom Inc. chief executive Bernie Ebbers.

Cheney is on the last leg of a four-state road trip to help collect campaign cash for GOP House and Senate candidates.

His visit to Mississippi followed by two days a $1,000-a-ticket private fund raiser for Pickering on the Gulf Coast that featured House Speaker Dennis Hastert.

The vice president touted President Bush's massive tax cut last year and said improving consumer confidence was a clear sign of a recovering economy.

Cheney also had kind words for Pickering's father, U.S. District Judge Charles Pickering of Hattiesburg, whose presidential nomination to a federal appeals court was nixed by a Senate committee last month. Charles Pickering was turkey hunting and did not attend the breakfast but his wife, Margaret Ann, was there.

"Judge Pickering was treated unfairly by the Democrats in the U.S. Senate," the vice president said.

Chip Pickering praised Cheney and Bush for fostering energy, agricultural and other programs "that mean so much to Mississippians of every background and walk of life."

The congressman also lauded Cheney and Bush for creating an international coalition to protect Americans after Sept. 11.

Pickering said it has helped him and his wife, Leisha, reassure their five sons that America is stronger than ever.

"Because of Dick Cheney, because of George Bush, I can tell my children we're safe, we're secure, we're free," he said. "We're all blessed as a nation."

After his brief stop in Jackson, Cheney was heading west to throw out the first pitch at the Texas Rangers baseball home opener.

Pickering and Democratic incumbent Rep. Ronnie Shows face off this year in what could be one of the nation's most closely watched congressional races.

The two ended up in the same district after Mississippi lost one of its five U.S. House seats because of slow population growth in the 1990s.

Cheney plans to headline some three dozen fund-raisers this year.

The vice president's aides said they did not know how much this week's events will bring in for the candidates and the GOP.

US-Justice (Hispanics) White House Seeks Hispanic Nominee's Speedy Confirmation

EXCERPT

Washington, Apr 4 (EFE).- White House Counsel Al Gonzales on Thursday told EFE he expects attorney Miguel Estrada's "excellent qualities and great professional training" to result in the speedy confirmation of the first Hispanic nominated to sit on the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. According to Gonzales, President George W. Bush nominated Estrada to the country's second most important court because of his "great talent and abilities."

REV_00142758

"Estrada's nomination demonstrates the importance the president places on diversity, and he is sending a powerful message to the Hispanic community," Gonzales said in an interview with EFE.

The White House counsel argued that the Senate should give Estrada a "fair hearing" and bring his nomination up for a vote.

Estrada, who was nominated in May 2001 amid certain criticism, has not been granted a hearing by the Democratic-controlled Senate, a delay blasted by Republicans.

According to Democratic leaders, several Hispanic judges nominated by former President Bill Clinton, including Richard Paez, Jorge Rangel and Enrique Moreno, came up against obstacles and delays when Republicans controlled the Senate.

While Paez waited four years for his confirmation hearing, Moreno never received one.

Nonetheless, Gonzales said the Bush administration is not responsible for what happened in the past, adding that now is "the opportune time" for the Senate to act.

Gonzales attributed harsh criticism of Estrada's nomination to "misunderstandings" about his philosophy that judges have a limited role in the government and should simply apply the law, regardless of their personal opinions.

DNC chairman speaks at Freedom Inc.'s 40th birthday celebration

Steve Kraske
The Kansas City Star
April 5, 2002 Friday

The head of the Democratic National Committee helped Freedom Inc. celebrate its 40th birthday Thursday with a blistering attack on President Bush.

In grand partisan style, National Committee Chairman Terry McAuliffe attacked the GOP on an array of issues, from Social Security to health care to public housing.

"The Bush budget is littered with broken promises to the African-American community," he said in prepared remarks to the local political club.

But the energetic McAuliffe was particularly harsh on the Bush team for what he termed "its outright hostility" on civil rights issues. Too many Republicans view racism as a "relic of the American past," he said. "But that's coming from folks who have no trouble getting a cab in a dark city on a rainy night," McAuliffe told the largely Democratic crowd of about 500 at the Hyatt Regency Crown Center hotel. "That's coming from folks who don't get pulled over simply for being behind the wheel of a Mercedes."

REV_00142759

A constellation of Democratic stars was on hand to pay tribute to a club that began four decades ago to help black citizens get elected to political office.

Among the Democrats on hand Thursday were Gov. Bob Holden, Sen. Jean Carnahan, Auditor Claire McCaskill, Rep. Karen McCarthy and Mayor Kay Barnes. Many public officials in the crowd have come to depend on help from Freedom Inc. and the African-American community at election time.

McAuliffe's offensive came on the same day that Vice President Dick Cheney visited Kansas City to raise money for Rep. Sam Graves. Cheney didn't refer to the McAuliffe visit, but McAuliffe tagged Cheney for his refusal to release the names of a task force he appointed to help the administration form its energy policy.

"Stop stonewalling and come clean," McAuliffe said. "The American people have a right to know who was at the table when their energy policy was drafted. Avoiding political embarrassment is not an executive privilege."

McAuliffe, a friend of former President Clinton, was elected national committee chairman in February 2001. Regarded as a fund-raising wizard, he has served as finance director of both the national committee and the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

McAuliffe praised Freedom Inc.'s founders, Leon Jordan and Bruce Watkins, for establishing an organization that paved the way for black leaders such as former Kansas City Mayor Emanuel Cleaver and former U.S. Rep. Alan Wheat of Kansas City.

He noted that no constituency has been more loyal to the Democratic Party than African-Americans. Responding to charges from some that the party sometimes takes that loyalty for granted, McAuliffe said the party's ties to the African-American community are more than a matter of convenience.

"It is a moral imperative," he said. "It is an extension of our values. It is part of our commitment to be the party of opportunity, inclusion, tolerance and diversity."

On civil rights issues, McAuliffe criticized Bush for appointing Gerald Reynolds of Kansas City, a one-time affirmative action opponent, to head the Education Department's Office of Civil Rights. Bush bypassed the Senate confirmation process and used a tactic known as a recess appointment to put Reynolds into office.

In doing so, Bush "made a mockery of the (Senate's) advice and consent principle," McAuliffe said, although Clinton on several occasions used the same maneuver during his presidency.

The chairman derided Republicans for supporting Judge Charles Pickering for the federal appeals court in Mississippi. Pickering had opposed interracial marriage, he said, and once secured a lenient sentence for a cross-burner.

In Washington, some viewed the defeat of Pickering as payback for the years when Republican senators blocked Clinton nominees.

"But the fight over these nominations isn't over," McAuliffe said. "Last week, President Bush vowed to appoint more hard-line conservatives to the federal bench. It's up to us to speak out and fight back."

NOW Fights Judge's Nomination; PA. Chapter Says He Belonged To Biased Gun Club for 11Years After Saying He Would Quit

Ann McFeatters
Pittsburgh Post-Gazette
April 5, 2002 Friday

The embattled nomination of U.S. District Judge D. Brooks Smith for the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals gathered more opposition yesterday, as the Pennsylvania chapter of the National Organization for Women said he should not be confirmed.

Pennsylvania NOW President Kathy Miller said she was speaking on behalf of the group's 27,000 members in saying Smith was "unfit to serve as a federal appellate judge," in part because he continued to belong to a gun club that discriminated against women for 11 years after he promised the Senate that he would either change the club's policy barring women members or resign.

Smith, 50, of Altoona, said in a questionnaire last year that he had joined the men-only Spruce Creek Rod and Gun Club in 1982 largely out of sentiment because his grandfather had taught him to fish there when he was a child. The club, in Huntingdon County, is one of the most prestigious fishing clubs in Pennsylvania, boasting some of the state's best fly fishing, and has hosted presidents, including former President Jimmy Carter, who has written about it and made it his first vacation stop after leaving the White House. Smith described it to the Senate in 1988 as a "rather small and rather informal and non-business-related type of club."

But although Smith told the Senate in 1988 before he was confirmed as a district judge that the code of ethics for judges "would require my resignation from the club" if it did not change its policy against admitting women, he admitted last year that he had not resigned until 1999.

Miller said in an interview, "He violated the judicial code of ethics and turned a blind eye to equality and justice for women."

REV_00142761

The code of ethics for U.S. judges says that when a judge determines that an organization to which he belongs engages in "invidious discrimination," he or she may make an effort to have the organization discontinue such a practice. If the group fails to do that, within two years of the judge's first learning of the discriminatory practices, he or she "should resign immediately from the organization."

In a letter to Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., a key sponsor of Smith for the Circuit Court, Miller wrote: "A significant barrier to the advancement of women in business and professional life is the discriminatory practices of private clubs, where business deals are often made and personal contacts valuable for business purposes, employment and professional advancement are formed. That is why the National Organization for Women has worked tirelessly for over 30 years to open up the memberships of such organizations."

She said her group also was upset that Smith had displayed "open hostility to the federal Violence Against Women Act," which he criticized in 1993 as federal encroachment on states' rights.

She said she hoped to meet with Specter to persuade him to reverse his endorsement of Smith. A Spector spokesman said he hadn't yet seen the letter. In a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing, Specter and Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., were highly complimentary of Smith and brushed aside concerns expressed at that time by environmental and civil rights groups.

Since President Bush nominated Smith last September for the federal appellate court in Philadelphia, a number of Pittsburgh-area lawyers and judges have raced to his defense.

At the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing, a parade of lawyers called him a competent, fair-minded judge who has proved his credentials during 14 years on the federal bench.

A coalition of 27 environmental, civil rights and women's groups has charged that Smith has been too close to captains of industry, has issued a number of anti-environment rulings and has been reversed on appeal more times than is average for a federal judge.

Another criticism is that he twice failed to recuse himself fast enough in a case involving defrauded Pennsylvania school districts and a bank in which his wife was an officer and in which he had substantial funds.

The National Employment Lawyers Association said it opposes Smith's confirmation because he "has a disturbingly defense-oriented decisional record in many areas, including employment and civil rights cases, and interprets the law in ways that deny justice to individuals."

In accord with White House policy, judicial nominees do not discuss their nominations with reporters.

The Senate Judiciary Committee has not indicated when it will hold a vote on Smith. Most recently, the panel rejected by one vote the nomination of Mississippi District Judge Thomas J. Pickering for a seat on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on a strict party-line vote.

At a recent Dallas fund-raiser after Pickering's defeat, Bush vowed, "We've got to get good, conservative judges appointed to the bench and approved by the United States Senate."

Partisanship blocks Bush nominee

Sarasota Herald-Tribune
April 7, 2002 Sunday

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., according to a recent news report, stated that President Bush does not have a mandate to appoint conservative judges to the federal judiciary because of the circumstances surrounding his election. This statement was made with regard to the nomination of Charles Pickering, a highly qualified federal judge, for elevation to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. The truth is that the president has the right to appoint anyone he chooses to the federal courts with the approval of the Senate. The problem is that the Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee will not vote to send the nomination to the Senate floor for a vote because they fear that it will be approved. This seems to me to be the height of obstructionism.

Senate Democrats appear to have no problem with the fact that their one vote majority, given to them by a renegade Republican, hardly represents a mandate to block a fair vote on a nominee.

Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle has further decided that a guarantee of 60 votes is now required for approval of nominees or bills that he doesn't like before he will allow them to come to the floor of the Senate for a vote, even though the Constitution only requires a simple majority. He uses the excuse that these bills or confirmations might produce a filibuster and therefore he does not want to waste the Senate's time.

So much for the bipartisanship that the Democrats are always touting.

The National Organization for Women has opened the liberal assault on U.S. District Judge D. Brooks Smith of Pennsylvania.

The feminist group yesterday in a letter to Republican Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania said that Judge Smith, nominated by President Bush for a spot on the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, is a member of an all-male private club.

According to the Associated Press, Judge Smith remained in the Spruce Creek Rod and Gun Club 11 years after acknowledging to senators in a 1988 confirmation hearing that the federal judge's code of conduct required resignation from all-male clubs.

Kathy Miller, president of Pennsylvania's NOW chapter, inferred sexism from this, telling AP that "it basically says that he's not concerned about discrimination against women."

Judge Smith "did make an active effort to make a change, but the organization was not responsive to his effort, but he did try to make that change more than once," said Tom Murphy, the club's immediate past president. Judge Smith resigned from the club in 1999.

The federal judges' code of conduct exempts clubs with purely social purpose and limited membership from the sex-membership rule, Justice Department officials said.

Judge Smith already has had a confirmation hearing, but no vote has been set by the Democrat-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee.

Hey, we just went back to reconstruct this to see if anything had slipped through the cracks. Here is what we found. After we received your comment below and comments from OHS (as well as comments to Judge from Nick, I believe) on Wed. the 20th, Judge Gonzales sent it to Secretary Card on the night of the 20th for his review. Secretary Card was leaving the morning of the 21st, and there was a strong desire to get it out before he left. Secretary Card reviewed it and signed the letter early on the morning of Thursday the 21st. It was then FAXed that morning. Copies of the final were delivered to Nick's office (to Jill Davie or Mike Conway, I believe), but the final version apparently may not have made its way to you.

I hope we did not cause any unintended confusion in this. But my apologies if we did.

DRAFT
March __, 2002

Dear Senator Stevens and Senator Byrd:

The President received your letter of March 15, 2002, and asked that I reply on his behalf.

The Administration respects the important role played by the Congress in evaluating and funding homeland security efforts, and we are committed to meeting Congress' legitimate need for information. For that reason, senior Administration officials, including members of the President's Cabinet and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, have testified before Congress on these subjects. Governor Ridge and his staff have also provided numerous briefings to many members of Congress and their staffs on homeland security and budgetary matters. The Governor will continue to work closely with Congress, including the relevant Committees, in a manner consistent with this practice. Just as significantly, each of the departments and agencies with operational and budget authority also will continue to work with and testify before the Congress.

As Nick Calio advised you in his letter of March 13, 2002, however, this Administration also will adhere to the same policy that Presidents of both parties have long followed and that Congress has long respected: The President's immediate White House advisers and staff, including officials with responsibilities closely analogous to those of Governor Ridge such as the National Security Adviser, ordinarily do not testify before Congress on policy matters. This is a fundamental principle of separation of powers that protects the confidentiality of the President's relationship with his White House advisors and the President's ability to employ advisors who can devote their attention to assisting and advising the President as he sees fit.

The rare historical exceptions to the rule against testimony by White House staff have generally been in circumstances, unlike those here, involving substantial evidence of personal or official misconduct. For example, your letter cites three World War II examples, but each of those situations involved allegations of personal or official wrongdoing. And even if there were isolated examples of close Presidential advisors testifying on policy matters, that would not alter our fundamental point: For many decades, Presidents of both parties -- and Congress -- have agreed that the President's White House advisors ordinarily do not testify before Congress on policy matters.

I appreciate your continued interest in homeland security issues, and I invite you to meet with me, Governor Ridge, Nick Calio, and Judge Gonzales to work out a satisfactory accommodation that will ensure, consistent with these principles, that you receive the information you need regarding homeland security matters.

Sincerely,

Andrew H. Card, Jr.
Chief of Staff

we continue to get calls, the most recent from Bloomberg, on how much potus pays for political trips. how we calculate costs for air force one, how much the white house pays, who pays, etc. I would like to get a stock answer/process.

i would suggest the rnc say:
1) no taxpayer funds are used to pay for political activities.
2) the rnc receives a deposit for political events prior to the event from a campaign or other host.
3) the rnc refunds the excess amount.
4) the formula for these calculations has been used consistently dating back to president reagan.

all questions on cost of air force one, other details we would refer to the wh. travel or legal offices.

note: the amount of deposit will show up on our financial report, in the case of bloomberg inquiry for the march 1 trip to iowa, in two weeks. should we disclose the amount of deposit? or just, if pressed, tell them it will be on our financial disclosure form?

i assume wh legal and rnc legal will have to sign-off on this approach?

thanks.

DRAFT
April 8, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

Thank you for your April 2 letter to Assistant to the President for Homeland Security Tom Ridge. The President and the Administration respect the important role played by the Congress with respect to homeland security, and appreciate your continued interest in and work on this vital issue.

The Administration is committed to meeting Congress' legitimate needs for information with respect to homeland security. For that reason, senior Administration officials, including members of the President's Cabinet and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, have testified before Congress on these subjects. Governor Ridge and his staff also have provided numerous briefings to many members of Congress and their staffs on homeland security and budgetary matters. The Governor will continue to work closely with Congress, including the relevant Committees, in a manner consistent with this practice. In addition, the departments and agencies with operational and budget authority will continue to work with and testify before the Congress.

Your letter asks for an Administration official to testify on "how to organize the federal government to promote homeland security" and proposed legislation to create a new Department of National Homeland Security. The Administration would be pleased to assist the Committee's consideration, and [name, title] is available to testify to the Administration's position on the proposed legislation.

Your letter specifically asks, in addition, for Governor Ridge to testify. Governor Ridge and his staff have already offered -- and remain available -- to brief you and the Committee on homeland security issues, including this organizational issue. As to formal testimony, however, as Chief of Staff Card and I have informed Senators Byrd and Stevens, this Administration will adhere to the same policy that Presidents of both parties have long followed and that Congress has long respected: The President's immediate White House advisers and staff, such as Governor Ridge, ordinarily do not testify before Congress on policy matters. This principle has long applied to Presidential advisors such as the Chief of Staff, the Counsel, the National Security Advisor, and other immediate advisors of the President such as Governor Ridge. This principle of separation of powers protects the confidentiality of the President's relationship with his White House advisors and the President's ability to employ advisors who can devote their attention to assisting and advising the President as the President sees fit.

Thank you again for your letter and your work on these important issues, and please do not hesitate to contact me with any questions.

Sincerely,

Nicholas E. Calio

Christine or Brett -- Following on to the letter, and apparently as an outcome of this morning's 11:00 meeting with the Chief of Staff, it is my understanding that Mitch Daniels is expected to testify before the Senate Gov't Affairs committee on Thursday to address the Administration's views on Sen. Lieberman's proposal for a new Dept. of Nat'l Homeland Security.
Do you know WHEN a draft of the OMB testimony is expected, and WHO at OMB is coordinating the initial draft? Many thanks -- McNally

DRAFT
April 8, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

Thank you for your April 2 letter to Assistant to the President for Homeland Security Tom Ridge. The President and the Administration respect the important role played by the Congress with respect to homeland security, and appreciate your continued interest in and work on this vital issue.

The Administration is committed to meeting Congress' legitimate needs for information with respect to homeland security. For that reason, senior Administration officials, including members of the President's Cabinet and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, have testified before Congress on these subjects. Governor Ridge and his staff also have provided numerous briefings to many members of Congress and their staffs on homeland security and budgetary matters. The Governor will continue to work closely with Congress, including the relevant Committees, in a manner consistent with this practice. In addition, the departments and agencies with operational and budget authority will continue to work with and testify before the Congress.

Your letter asks for an Administration official to testify on "how to organize the federal government to promote homeland security" and proposed legislation to create a new Department of National Homeland Security. The Administration would be pleased to assist the Committee's consideration, and [name, title] is available to testify to the Administration's position on the proposed legislation.

Your letter specifically asks, in addition, for Governor Ridge to testify. Governor Ridge and his staff have already offered -- and remain available -- to brief you and the Committee on homeland security issues, including this organizational issue. As to formal testimony, however, as Chief of Staff Card and I have informed Senators Byrd and Stevens, this Administration will adhere to the same policy that Presidents of both parties have long followed and that Congress has long respected: The President's immediate White House advisers and staff, such as Governor Ridge, ordinarily do not testify before Congress on policy matters. Thank you again for your letter and your work on these important issues, and please do not hesitate to contact me with any questions.

From The Morning Call

Gardner tapped for federal judge
Specter reveals president will make nomination, ending year of speculation.
By Elliot Grossman
Of The Morning Call

April 9, 2002

President Bush will nominate Lehigh County Judge James Knoll Gardner to serve as a federal judge in Allentown, filling a void created more than three years ago, U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter said Monday.

Specter, R-Pa., made the disclosure to a reporter moments after appearing at an unrelated event in Allentown. He had invited Gardner to the event to inform him about his pending nomination.

U.S. senators rarely, if ever, announce presidential nominations before the president does. Specter said he made an exception with this one because it has been pending for so long. Gardner's name has been in the pipeline more than a year.

''I think it's time the public was informed it's been resolved,'' Specter said. ''It's been a terrible strain on a lot of people, especially Judge Gardner.''

Specter said he had more trouble getting White House approval for Gardner than for almost any other nomination in his 21 years in the Senate. Specter then quoted Shakespeare, ''All's well that ends well.''

''I am extremely grateful, thrilled and excited to hear this news about this position I have sought for a decade,'' Gardner said.

Gardner had long been identified as the leading local candidate for the job. But the White House ''raised objections,'' Specter said, delaying a decision. Specter said a senior White House official told him Thursday evening that Gardner had gotten a green light.

To make room for Gardner, another judge will take senior status.

With Gardner standing beside him Monday, Specter declined to say what had delayed the nomination. Specter wouldn't even say whether it was a political problem or something about Gardner's background.

''I've gone over his background with a fine-tooth comb,'' Specter said. ''He's a good man.''

Gardner, a Republican, also declined to say what had delayed his nomination. ''There is nothing in my background, when fully investigated, that would work as a disqualification for me to be a federal judge,'' Gardner said.

A White House spokesman declined Monday to confirm that Gardner would be nominated to the lifetime job.

To get potential nominees, the White House seeks suggestions from the U.S. senators in the states where the judges will preside. Specter has been particularly influential in getting his favorites appointed to the U.S. District Court for Eastern Pennsylvania, which is based in Philadelphia, Specter's hometown.

Gardner, 61, of Upper Milford Township, said his sitting in Allentown would make federal court more convenient for local lawyers, litigants and witnesses. ''It's going to be great for the people of the Lehigh Valley,'' he said.

Since Judge Edward Cahn retired in December 1998, the $17 million federal courthouse in Allentown has been without a U.S. District judge. That's longer than any other federal courthouse in the country except for two, court officials believe.

Franklin Van Antwerpen of Easton is the only U.S. District judge in eastern Pennsylvania, except for those in Philadelphia. Because of a full caseload, Van Antwerpen cannot handle all of the cases from the northern part of the district, forcing people to travel to Philadelphia for federal justice.

''Needless to say, I am very pleased to hear we will finally be getting someone to sit in Allentown as a U.S. District judge, and I hope the confirmation process will not take too long,'' Van Antwerpen said.

Two weeks ago, Bush nominated a Philadelphia lawyer to the last remaining vacancy in eastern Pennsylvania, a setback to the Lehigh Valley * at least temporarily.

But U.S. District Judge Jan DuBois of Philadelphia said he wrote Monday to President Bush, saying next Monday he will be taking senior status, a semi-retirement role. That means there will be a vacancy for an active judge in eastern Pennsylvania, to which Gardner will be nominated.

DuBois said he would be giving his wife a copy of the letter Monday night to celebrate her birthday. His senior status will free them to do more traveling, he said.

Judicial nominees are reviewed by the Senate Judiciary Committee and require confirmation by the full Senate. Specter is a senior member of the judicial panel.

Gardner, a former Lehigh County president judge, has been on the county bench for more than 20 years. Before that, he was in private practice and served as an assistant Lehigh County district attorney. He graduated from Yale University and Harvard Law School.

U.S. Rep. Pat Toomey, R-15th District, said he's thrilled another Lehigh Valley person will be handling federal cases. ''Someone who understands our culture, our traditions and our values is useful on the federal bench,'' Toomey said. ''He's one of us.''

Specter had asked Gardner to join him for a news conference outside the Allentown police station, where Specter, police officers and city and Lehigh County officials touted a program that has police and juvenile probation officers patrolling together.

Given that this is the Kyl-Feinstein amendment, I would prefer that we handle putting together drafts of what people agree to. I also think it makes more sense to put together a draft when the pending discussions are concluded.

Thanks.

Attached is a new Draft which reflects the discussions we had earlier today.
Any language that was previously redlined in Draft 15/DOJ Suggested Revision,
but that was agreed to by all the parties today, is now in bold typeface.

In the places where we still have outstanding issues to discuss tomorrow,
I have left the redline in and capitalized the phrases. Specifically, no agreement has been reached on: the language in section 2 pertaining to "decisions"; the reprieve/pardon language in section 4; and the entirety of section 5 and whether the ratification language should be in the text of the amendment itself or in the joint resolution.

Feel free to give me a call (202-514-3824) if you have any questions.
Thanks!

Given that this is the Kyl-Feinstein amendment, I would prefer that we handle putting together drafts of what people agree to. I also think it makes more sense to put together a draft when the pending discussions are concluded.
Thanks.

Attached is a new Draft which reflects the discussions we had earlier today.
Any language that was previously redlined in Draft 15/DOJ Suggested Revision, but that was agreed to by all the parties today, is now in bold typeface.

In the places where we still have outstanding issues to discuss tomorrow, I have left the redline in and capitalized the phrases. Specifically, no agreement has been reached on: the language in section 2 pertaining to "decisions"; the reprieve/pardon language in section 4; and the entirety of section 5 and whether the ratification language should be in the text of the amendment itself or in the joint resolution.

Feel free to give me a call (202-514-3824) if you have any questions.
Thanks!

DRAFT -- NOT FOR RELEASE

April 9, 2002
(House)

H.R. 3991 - Taxpayer Protection and IRS Accountability Act of 2002
(Rep. Houghton (R) New York)

The Administration supports House passage of H.R. 3991. The Administration believes that the bill will improve tax fairness, strengthen taxpayers rights and protections, and improve the Internal Revenue Service's (IRS) ability to serve taxpayers. The Administration also supports provisions to strengthen the taxpayer privacy protections provided in the Code.

The Administration is particularly pleased that the bill includes proposals contained in the President's Fiscal Year 2003 Budget, most notably, the 15-day extension for electronically-filed returns and modification of Section 1203 of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the IRS' operations without compromising taxpayer protections. The Administration also supports the amendments to the interest and penalty provisions of the Code that are intended to make it easier for taxpayers to comply with the law and enhance the fairness of these provisions.

The Administration supports full, prompt, and constitutionally permissible disclosure of contributions and expenditures designed to influence the outcome of Federal elections, so voters will have complete and timely information on which to make informed decisions. The Administration recognizes that there are technical flaws in current law regarding coordination with the States, and there is widespread confusion and noncompliance with regard to its application at the State and local levels. This legislation seeks to address those concerns.

Pay-As-You-Go Scoring

Any law that would reduce receipts or increase direct spending is subject to the pay-as-you-go requirements of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act. Accordingly, H.R. 3991, or any substitute amendment in lieu thereof that would reduce revenues or increase direct spending, will be subject to the pay-as-you-go requirement. OMB's scoring estimates are under development. The Administration will work with Congress to ensure that any unintended sequester of spending does not occur under current law or the enactment of any other proposals that meet the President's objectives.

TESTIMONY OF
MITCHELL E. DANIELS, JR.
DIRECTOR
OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET
BEFORE
U.S. SENATE

APRIL 11, 2002

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Thompson, Members of the Committee, I am pleased to be here this morning to discuss homeland security.

Introduction

Our nation learned a terrible lesson on September 11th. The characteristics of American society that we cherish -- our freedom, our openness, our great cities, our modern transportation systems -- make us vulnerable to terrorism of catastrophic proportions. This vulnerability will exist even after we bring justice to those responsible for the events of September 11th. Indeed, the threat of mass-destruction terrorism has become a reality of life in the 21st Century. It is, a permanent condition to which not just America, but the entire world must adjust.

The federal government ~~has an absolute obligation to secure~~ must have as its top priority securing the homeland from future terrorist attacks. This will involve major new programs and significant reforms by the federal government, several of which are described in the FY 2003 Budget. But it will also involve new or expanded efforts by state and local governments, private industry, non-governmental organizations, and ~~ordinary~~ our citizens. The higher priority we all now attach to homeland security has already begun to ripple through the land.

Homeland security is a challenge of monumental scale and complexity. It will not be cheap, easy, or quick. Achieving our homeland security objectives will require vast sums of money, strenuous labor, and many years. Our work has already begun, and it will continue. The American people should have no doubt that ultimately we will succeed in weaving a proper and permanent level of security into the fabric of America.

This President's FY 2003 budget reflects not just our absolute commitment to achieving a much more secure homeland, but also our determination to do so in a manner that preserves liberty and strengthens our economy.

September 11th and Our Immediate Response

The September 11th terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon have presented an unprecedented challenge to our nation. The response has been, and must continue to be, equal to that challenge. In the immediate aftermath of the attacks, Congress swiftly appropriated $40 billion to compensate victims, aid reconstruction, wage war against terrorism, and strengthen our defenses at home. In the seven months since September 11th, the $40 billion dedicated to homeland security purposes has helped to:

REV_00142986

- increase the number of sky marshals on our airlines;
- support the largest criminal investigation in U.S. history;
- acquire enough medicine to treat up to 10 million more people for anthrax or other bacterial infections;
- investigate the sources of terrorist funding, and then freeze the financial assets of more than150 individuals and organizations connected to international terrorism;
- deploy hundreds of Coast Guard cutters, aircraft, and small boats to patrol the approaches to our ports and protect them from internal or external threats;
- acquire equipment for certain major mail sorting facilities to find and destroy anthrax bacteria and other biological agents of terror; and,
- station 8,000 National Guards troops at baggage-screening checkpoints at 420 major airports.

It has also helped to strengthen our intelligence capabilities, with the objective of detecting terrorist threats before they materialize, so that we can prevent terrorist activities.

Homeland Security Strategy

The Administration is now taking the next step. When the President established a new Office of Homeland Security, under the leadership of Governor Tom Ridge, he directed the Office "to develop and coordinate the implementation of a comprehensive national strategy to secure the United States from terrorist threats or attacks." We have been building that strategy on many fronts, and it is our intention to prepare a document this summer that will summarize that strategy.

This strategy will meet four key tests:

- The strategy for homeland security will be comprehensive and will integrate the full range of homeland security activities into a single, mutually supporting plan.
- The strategy will be a national strategy, not a federal government strategy as the threat posed by terrorism does not fall neatly within the jurisdiction of the federal government. To defeat terrorism, the federal government must work with states and localities and the private sector.
- The strategy will outline a long-term plan for the federal government to strengthen homeland security.
- Finally, the strategy will include measures by which we can evaluate progress and allocate resources. These objectives will set the goals for federal departments and agencies. They will also give guidance to state and local governments and the private sector.

At the same time as the Office of Homeland Security crafts a document to summarize the national strategy, the Administration will begin work immediately on four urgent and essential missions for the defense of our homeland: ensuring state and local first responders (firemen, police, and rescue workers) are prepared for terrorism; enhancing our defenses against biological attacks; securing our borders; and, sharing information and using information technology to secure the homeland.

These four missions lead our homeland security agenda -- but they are not the whole of it. We must also finish the job of securing our airways. In 2003, the new Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will strive to meet the tight deadlines and rigorous aviation security requirements set by Congress. In addition, we also propose a robust expansion in domestic law enforcement work. The 2003 Budget requests enhancements to the capabilities of the FBI and other law enforcement/intelligence agencies. The President's Budget for 2003 includes total spending for homeland security that would rise to $38 billion in 2003 -- an $18 billion increase over the total appropriated in 2002, and a virtual doubling of the pre-September 11th levels.

On March 21st the President submitted a $27.1 billion supplemental budget request to Congress to address the War on Terrorism, Homeland Security and Economic Recovery. Funding for items included in this package meet the following criteria: they are true emergencies; they address an immediate and known requirement, and they cannot be met with existing funds. In most cases, the funds would be required to be obligated this fiscal year. Of this amount, $5.2 billion was provided for Homeland Security needs.

Office of Homeland Security

In developing the FY 2003 Budget, there was an unprecedented level of cooperation between OMB and OHS. OMB has dedicated staff and managers working with OHS, and many more are engaged on homeland security on an issue-by-issue basis. This arrangement has been very productive. OHS is focused its review and advice on building the capacities we need to fight terrorism in the most effective and efficient way. OMB adds its programmatic and budgetary knowledge to ensure that we are utilizing the right resources and tools to build that capacity. We expect that this arrangement will continue as OHS develops ~~its National Strategy~~ the national strategy summary, as the Administration works to develop the FY 2004 Budget, and beyond.

While the Office of Homeland Security coordinates ~~and~~ consults with and provides advice to OMB and agencies throughout the government, Governor Ridge does not have operational authority over any federal agency ~~except his own office within the White House~~. The roll-out of the Homeland Security Advisory System is illustrative of how the Governor coordinated with various agencies, but ultimately handed over the operational aspects of the final product to a Department – which, in this case, is the Justice Department.

The Administration recognizes and endorses the legitimate desire of Congress to have full access to the information it needs to ~~make decisions related~~ legislative with regard to the nation's homeland security. Through an extensive variety of means, the Administration will act to provide Congress with responsive answers to its information needs. Governor Ridge has regularly met with Members of Congress to provide extensive information on homeland security. In fact since October 8, Governor Ridge and his staff have held over 100 meetings with Members of Congress and their staff. And he has also offered to meet with the committees of jurisdictions in a non-testimonial format at their convenience.

~~We have an honest difference of opinion about the propriety of those Presidential advisors without statutory office being compelled to testify before Congress. It is only this difference of principle, and not any disagreement about the need for Congress to inform itself, that separates our positions.~~

The President has said from the outset that the initial structure for organizing and overseeing homeland security may evolve over time as we all learn more and circumstances change. It is possible that the ~~National Strategy Review now underway~~ the Administration may recommend an arrangement different from the current one.

Conclusion

In the near term, the Administration is working hard to ensure that all involved in homeland security, including the Congress, are kept fully informed ~~open to all methods of conveying information that protect the confidentiality of Presidential advice~~. Longer term, we are pleased to discuss with Congress alternative ways of organizing for Homeland Security that effectively meet the needs of the American people and their legislative representatives.

The Nation faces new kinds of threats from new kinds of enemies. Defeating those threats will be the great challenge and the great achievement of this generation of Americans.

TESTIMONY OF
MITCHELL E. DANIELS, JR.
DIRECTOR

APRIL 11, 2002

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Thompson, Members of the Committee, I am pleased to be here this morning to discuss homeland security. The bills under review this morning are meant to improve the way the Federal government is structured regarding homeland security needs. Pursuant to the management responsibilities incumbent on me as the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, I am here to comment on the management issues involving a coordinated homeland security effort within the Administration and to ensure they are openly discussed between the Executive Branch and the Congress.

Introduction

Our nation learned a terrible lesson on September 11th. The characteristics of American society that we cherish -- our freedom, our openness, our great cities, our modern transportation systems -- make us vulnerable to terrorism of catastrophic proportions. This vulnerability will exist even after we bring justice to those responsible for the events of September 11th. Indeed, the threat of mass-destruction terrorism has become a reality of life in the 21st Century. It is a permanent condition to which not just America, but the entire world must adjust.

The federal government must have as its top priority securing the homeland from future terrorist attacks. This will involve major new programs and significant reforms by the federal government, several of which are described in the FY 2003 Budget. But it will also involve new or expanded efforts by state and local governments, private industry, non-governmental organizations, and ordinary citizens. The higher priority we all now attach to homeland security has already begun to ripple through the land.

Homeland security is a challenge of monumental scale and complexity. It will not be cheap, easy, or quick. Achieving our homeland security objectives will require vast sums of money, strenuous labor, and many years. Our work has already begun, and it will continue. The American people should have no doubt that ultimately we will succeed in weaving a proper and permanent level of security into the fabric of America.

This President's FY 2003 budget reflects not just our absolute commitment to achieving a much more secure homeland, but also our determination to do so in a manner that preserves liberty and strengthens our economy.

September 11th and Our Immediate Response

REV_00142991

The September 11th terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon have presented an unprecedented challenge to our nation. The response has been, and must continue to be, equal to that challenge. In the immediate aftermath of the attacks, Congress swiftly appropriated $40 billion to compensate victims, aid reconstruction, wage war against terrorism, and strengthen our defenses at home. In the seven months since September 11th, the $40 billion dedicated to homeland security purposes has helped to:

- increase the number of air marshals on our airlines;
- support the largest criminal investigation in U.S. history;
- acquire enough medicine to treat up to 10 million more people for anthrax or other bacterial infections;
- investigate the sources of terrorist funding, and then freeze the financial assets of more than150 individuals and organizations connected to international terrorism;
- deploy hundreds of Coast Guard cutters, aircraft, and small boats to patrol the approaches to our ports and protect them from internal or external threats;
- acquire equipment for certain major mail sorting facilities to find and destroy anthrax bacteria and other biological agents of terror;
- station 8,000 National Guards troops at baggage-screening checkpoints at 420 major airports; and,
- strengthen our intelligence capabilities, with the objective of detecting terrorist threats before they materialize, so that we can prevent terrorist activities.

Homeland Security Strategy

The Administration is now taking the next step. When the President established a new Office of Homeland Security, under the leadership of Governor Tom Ridge, he directed the Office "to develop and coordinate the implementation of a comprehensive national strategy to secure the United States from terrorist threats or attacks." We have been building that strategy on many fronts, and it is our intention to prepare a document this summary that will document that strategy. This strategy will meet four key tests:

- The strategy for homeland security will be comprehensive and will integrate the full range of homeland security activities into a single, mutually supporting plan.
- The strategy will be a national strategy, not a federal government strategy as the threat posed by terrorism does not fall neatly within the jurisdiction of the federal government. To defeat terrorism, the federal government must work with states and localities and the private sector.
- The strategy will outline a long-term plan for the federal government to strengthen homeland security.
- Finally, the strategy will include measures by which we can evaluate progress and allocate resources. These objectives will set the goals for federal departments and agencies. They will also give guidance to state and local governments and the private sector.

At the same time as the Office of Homeland Security crafts a national strategy, the Administration will begin work immediately on four urgent and essential missions for the defense of our homeland: ensuring state and local first responders (firemen, police, and rescue workers) are prepared for terrorism; enhancing our defenses against biological attacks; securing our borders; and, sharing information and using information technology to secure the homeland.

These four missions lead our homeland security agenda -- but they are not the whole of it. We must also finish the job of securing our airways. In 2003, the new Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will strive to meet the tight deadlines and rigorous aviation security requirements set by Congress. In addition, we also propose a robust expansion in domestic law enforcement work. The 2003 Budget requests enhancements to the capabilities of the FBI and other law enforcement/intelligence agencies. The President's Budget for 2003 includes total spending for homeland security that would rise to $38 billion in 2003 -- an $18 billion increase over the total appropriated in 2002, and a virtual doubling of the pre-September 11th levels.

On March 21st the President submitted a $27.1 billion supplemental budget request to Congress to address the War on Terrorism, Homeland Security and Economic Recovery. Funding for items included in this package meet the following criteria: they are true emergencies; they address an immediate and known requirement, and they cannot be met with existing funds. In most cases, the funds would be required to be obligated this fiscal year. Of this amount, $5.2 billion was provided for Homeland Security needs.

Office of Homeland Security

In developing the FY 2003 Budget, there was an extraordinary level of cooperation between OMB and OHS. OMB has dedicated staff and managers working with OHS, and many more are engaged on homeland security on an issue-by-issue basis. This arrangement has been very productive. OHS is focused its review and advice on building the capacities we need to fight terrorism in the most effective and efficient way. OMB adds its programmatic and budgetary knowledge to ensure that we are utilizing the right resources and tools to build that capacity. We expect that this arrangement will continue as OHS develops the national strategy summary, as the Administration works to develop the FY 2004 Budget, and beyond.

While the Office of Homeland Security coordinates, consults with and provides advice to OMB and agencies throughout the government, Governor Ridge does not have operational authority over any federal agency. The roll-out of the Homeland Security Advisory System is illustrative of how the Governor coordinated with various agencies, but ultimately handed over the operational aspects of the final product to a Department – which, in this case, is the Justice Department.

The Administration recognizes and endorses the legitimate desire of Congress to have full access to the information it needs to make legislative decisions with regard to the nation's homeland security. Through an extensive variety of means, the Administration will act to provide Congress with responsive answers to its information needs. Governor Ridge has regularly met with Members of Congress to provide extensive information on homeland security. In fact since October 8, Governor Ridge and his staff have held over 100 meetings with Members of Congress and their staff. He has also offered to meet with the committees of jurisdiction in a non-testimonial format at their convenience and he has personally participated in over thirty-five meetings on Capitol Hill. The Governor will continue to work closely with Congress, including the relevant Committees, in a manner consistent with this practice. In fact, during the next two weeks, he will be participating in a number of Congressional meetings, including one with the House Government Reform Committee and another with the Chairmen and Ranking Members of the House Appropriations Committee and its subcommittees.

As this record demonstrates, the Administration is committed to keeping Congress appropriately informed about homeland security issues. As to formal testimony, this Administration will adhere to the same policy that Presidents of both parties have long followed -- and that Congress has long respected. The President's immediate White House advisors and staff, such as Governor Ridge, ordinarily do not testify before Congress on policy matters. This principle of separation of powers protects the confidentiality of the President's relationship with his White House advisors and the President's ability to employ advisors who can devote their attention to assisting and advising the President as the President sees fit.

The President has said from the outset that the initial structure for organizing and overseeing homeland security may evolve over time as we all learn more and circumstances change. It is possible that the National Strategy Review now underway may recommend an arrangement different from the current one. One possibility might include a structure similar to the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) in size and in scope of task. However, as you know, there could be problems with this approach in the context of homeland security. For instance, many believe the "drug czar" has too much operational authority.

On the other hand, if it is determined that the Director of Homeland Security should have more operational authority, the review could lead to an extensive restructuring proposal for homeland security functions. If the review should ultimately recommend to the President a different Homeland Security structure, there's a chance it may resemble your bill, Senator Lieberman, or any combination of legislation that has been proposed. However, if this is the case, a potential obstacle is the uncertainty that Congress would set aside its jurisdictional territoriality enough to embrace such a far-reaching proposal. As we move forward on options to strengthen homeland security, there is clearly a need to work across traditional jurisdictions, both in the Executive and the Legislative Branches. We appreciate the Committee's willingness to consider options that cut across existing boundaries. In dealing with a challenge of such scope and complexity, leadership will be needed, especially within the Congress, and across Government.

Conclusion

In the near term, the Administration is open to all methods of conveying information that protect the confidentiality of Presidential advice. Longer term, we are pleased to discuss with Congress alternative ways of organizing for Homeland Security that effectively meet the needs of the American people and their legislative representatives.

The Nation faces new kinds of threats from new kinds of enemies. Defeating those threats will be the great challenge and the great achievement of this generation of Americans.

TESTIMONY OF
MITCHELL E. DANIELS, JR.
DIRECTOR

APRIL 11, 2002

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Thompson, Members of the Committee, I am pleased to be here this morning to discuss homeland security. The bills under review this morning are meant to improve the way the Federal government is structured regarding homeland security needs. Pursuant to the management responsibilities inherent in my role as the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, I am here to comment on the organizational issues involving a coordinated homeland security effort within the Administration and to ensure they are openly discussed between the Executive Branch and the Congress.

Introduction

Our nation learned a terrible lesson on September 11th. The characteristics of American society that we cherish -- our freedom, our openness, our great cities, our modern transportation systems -- make us vulnerable to terrorism of catastrophic proportions. This vulnerability will exist even after we bring justice to those responsible for the events of September 11th. Indeed, the threat of mass-destruction terrorism has become a reality of life in the 21st Century. It is a permanent condition to which not just America, but the entire world must adjust.

The federal government must have as its top priority securing the homeland from future terrorist attacks. This will involve major new programs and significant reforms by the federal government, several of which are described in the FY 2003 Budget. But it will also involve new or expanded efforts by state and local governments, private industry, non-governmental organizations, and indeed all Americans. The higher priority we all now attach to homeland security has already begun to ripple through the land.

Homeland security is a challenge of monumental scale and complexity. It will not be cheap, easy, or quick. Achieving our homeland security objectives will require vast sums of money, strenuous labor, and many years. Our work has already begun, and it will continue. The American people should have no doubt that ultimately we will succeed in weaving a proper and permanent level of security into the fabric of America.

This President's FY 2003 budget reflects not just our absolute commitment to achieving a much more secure homeland, but also our determination to do so in a manner that preserves liberty and strengthens our economy.

September 11th and Our Immediate Response

The September 11th terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon have presented an unprecedented challenge to our nation. The response has been, and must continue to be, equal to that challenge. In the immediate aftermath of the attacks, Congress swiftly appropriated $40 billion to compensate victims, aid reconstruction, wage war against terrorism, and strengthen our defenses at home. In the seven months since September 11th, funding provided for homeland security purposes has helped to:

- increase the number of air marshals on our airlines;
- support the largest criminal investigation in U.S. history;
- acquire enough medicine to treat up to 10 million more people for anthrax or other bacterial infections;
- investigate the sources of terrorist funding, and then freeze the financial assets of more than150 individuals and organizations connected to international terrorism;
- deploy hundreds of Coast Guard cutters, aircraft, and small boats to patrol the approaches to our ports and protect them from internal or external threats;
- acquire equipment for certain major mail sorting facilities to find and destroy anthrax bacteria and other biological agents of terror;
- station 8,000 National Guard troops at baggage-screening checkpoints at 420 major airports; and,
- strengthen our intelligence capabilities, with the objective of detecting terrorist threats before they materialize, so that we can prevent terrorist activities.

Homeland Security Strategy

The Administration is now taking the next step. When the President established a new Office of Homeland Security, under the leadership of Governor Tom Ridge, he directed the Office "to develop and coordinate the implementation of a comprehensive national strategy to secure the United States from terrorist threats or attacks." We have been building that strategy on many fronts, and it is our intention to prepare a document this summer that will summarize that strategy in one place. This strategy will meet four key tests:

- The strategy for homeland security will be comprehensive and will integrate the full range of homeland security activities into a single, mutually supporting plan.
- The strategy will be a national strategy, not just a federal government strategy as the threat posed by terrorism does not fall solely within the jurisdiction of the federal government. To defeat terrorism, the federal government must work with states and localities and the private sector.
- The strategy will outline a long-term plan to strengthen homeland security.
- Finally, the strategy will include measures by which we can evaluate progress and allocate resources. These objectives will set the goals for federal departments and agencies. They will also give guidance to state and local governments and the private sector.

At the same time we craft a national strategy, the Administration will begin work immediately on four urgent and essential missions for the defense of our homeland: ensuring state and local first responders (firefighters, police, and rescue workers) are prepared for terrorism; enhancing our defenses against biological attacks; securing our borders; and, sharing information and using information technology to secure the homeland.

These four missions lead our homeland security agenda -- but they are not the whole of it. We must also finish the job of securing our airways. In 2003, the new Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will strive to meet the tight deadlines and rigorous aviation security requirements set by Congress. In addition, we also propose a robust expansion in domestic law enforcement work. The 2003 Budget requests enhancements to the capabilities of the FBI and other law enforcement/intelligence agencies. The President's Budget for 2003 includes total spending for homeland security that would rise to $38 billion in 2003 -- an $18 billion increase over the total for 2002, and a virtual doubling of the pre-September 11th levels.

On March 21st the President submitted a $27.1 billion supplemental budget request to Congress to address the War on Terrorism, Homeland Security and Economic Recovery. Funding for items included in this package meet the following criteria: they are true emergencies; they address an immediate and known requirement, and they cannot be met with existing funds. In most cases, the funds would be required to be obligated this fiscal year. Of this amount, $5.2 billion was provided for additional homeland security needs.

Office of Homeland Security

In developing the FY 2003 Budget, there was an extraordinary level of cooperation between OMB and OHS. OMB has dedicated staff and managers working with OHS, and many more are engaged on homeland security on an issue-by-issue basis. This arrangement has been very productive. OHS is focusing its review and advice on building the capacities we need to fight terrorism in the most effective and efficient way. OMB adds its programmatic and budgetary knowledge to ensure that we are utilizing the right resources and tools to build that capacity. We expect that this arrangement will continue as we develop the national strategy summary, and as the Administration works to develop the FY 2004 Budget, and beyond.

While the Office of Homeland Security coordinates, consults with and provides advice to OMB and agencies throughout the government, Governor Ridge does not have operational authority over any federal agency. The roll-out of the Homeland Security Advisory System is illustrative of how the Governor coordinated with various agencies, but ultimately handed over the operational aspects of the final product to a Department – which, in this case, is the Justice Department.

The Administration recognizes and endorses the legitimate desire of Congress to have full access to the information it needs to make legislative decisions with regard to the nation's homeland security. Through an extensive variety of means, the Administration will act to provide Congress with responsive answers to its information needs. Governor Ridge has regularly met with Members of Congress to provide extensive information on homeland security. In fact, since October 8, Governor Ridge and his staff have held over 100 meetings with Members of Congress and their staff, and they plan to continue these meetings in the weeks ahead. He has also offered to meet with the committees of jurisdiction in a non-testimonial format at their convenience, and he has personally participated in over thirty-five meetings on Capitol Hill. The Governor will continue to work closely with Congress, including the relevant Committees, in a manner consistent with this practice. During the next two weeks, he will be participating in a number of Congressional meetings, including one with the House Government Reform Committee and another with the Chairmen and Ranking Members of the House Appropriations Committee and its subcommittees.

As this record demonstrates, the Administration is committed to keeping Congress appropriately informed about homeland security issues. As to formal testimony, this Administration will adhere to the same policy that Presidents of both parties have long followed -- and that Congress has long respected. As a matter of precedent, the President's immediate White House advisors, such as Governor Ridge, do not testify before Congress.

The President has said from the outset that the structure for organizing and overseeing homeland security may evolve over time as we all learn more and as circumstances change. It is possible that the National Strategy now underway may recommend continuation of the current arrangement; it is also possible that the National Strategy may recommend an arrangement different from the current one. One possibility might include a structure similar to the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP). It is already clear, however, that such a homeland office would be substantially larger in size and scope. Moreover, many believe the "drug czar" model is not well suited for operational authority.

If it is determined that the Director of Homeland Security should have operational authority, the review could lead to a proposal for extensive restructuring of homeland security functions. Should the review ultimately recommend to the President a different homeland security structure, there is a chance it may resemble Senator Lieberman's bill. A potential obstacle in this case is the uncertainty whether either Executive Branch agencies or the Congress would set aside jurisdictional territoriality enough to embrace such a far-reaching proposal. Our experience to date with minor transfers of responsibility illustrates the difficulty of this approach. Should the President opt for such a course, surely we would need leadership from you and your committee to ensure its success.

Conclusion

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, the Administration is committed to securing the homeland and keeping Congress appropriately informed on homeland security matters. We are pleased to discuss with Congress alternative ways of organizing Homeland Security that effectively meet the needs of the American people and their legislative representatives.

The Nation faces new kinds of threats from new kinds of enemies. Defeating those threats will be the great challenge and the great achievement of this generation of Americans.

JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to protect the rights of crime victims.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid for all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, and which shall take effect on the 180th day after ratification of this article:

"ARTICLE —

"SECTION 1. The rights of victims of violent crime, being capable of protection without denying the constitutional rights of those accused of victimizing them, are hereby established and shall not be denied by any State or the United States and may be restricted only as provided in this article.

"SECTION 2. A victim of violent crime shall have the right to reasonable and timely notice of any public proceeding involving the crime and of any release or escape of the accused; the rights not to be excluded from such public proceeding and reasonably to be heard at public release, plea, sentencing, reprieve, and pardon proceedings; and the right to decisions in such public proceeding that duly consider the victim's safety, interest in avoiding unreasonable delay, and just and timely claims to restitution from the offender. These rights shall not be restricted except when and to the degree dictated by a substantial interest in public safety or the administration of criminal justice, or by compelling necessity.

"SECTION 3. Nothing in this article shall be construed to provide grounds for a new trial or to authorize any claim for damages. Only the victim or the victim's lawful representative may assert the rights established by this article, and no person accused of the crime may obtain any form of relief hereunder.

"SECTION 4. Congress shall have power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article. Nothing in this article shall affect the President's authority to grant reprieves or pardons.

"SECTION 5. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission to the States by the Congress."

I think they are not the same. For Presidential travel, Airlift Ops should follow the procedures they have been following since last year. If there is some issue with those procedures, Cathy or Kim, please bring it to my attention. (I remain unsure of what has prompted this discussion other than someone inserting Courtney's name into some draft document, thereby prompting her understandable confusion.)

RE: FEDERAL ROLE IN THE AVIATION TERRORISM INSURANCE MARKET

Background

Aviation Insurance provides three primary types of insurance, under a variety of different circumstances:

1) Insurance for the loss of the airplane, referred to as hull insurance.
2) Insurance for losses suffered by the passengers on that plane.
3) Insurance for losses caused to other people and property.

Broadly speaking, we can define this insurance as being provided under three circumstances:

1) For losses incurred during normal peacetime operations.
2) For losses incurred in times of war.
3) For losses incurred from acts of terrorism.

The private insurance market currently functions well for all three perils during both peace and war. Moreover, during war it imposes important discipline on the carriers by virtue of the fact that the coverage is cancelable on short notice. This allows the insurance to be appropriately re-priced to reflect the higher risk and provides the carriers a limited window during which they can remove their vulnerable assets from the war zone.

The insurance market even operates quite efficiently when the threat is terrorism. Although terrorism can pose a worldwide threat, making it impossible to relocate assets to a safe haven, the market has shown that it can price the risk for hull and passenger losses as these are known risks – maximum loss is limited to the value of the plane and the number of passengers it carries times the average compensation paid those passengers. The problem arises in liability for third party losses from acts of terrorism. The most notable such example is the loss of life in the World Trade Center attack.

Staff recommends that any action we take acknowledge that the insurance market has shown itself well capable of providing coverage for all other perils in all other circumstances and should be allowed to operate as it historically has. Thus, the only open issue is how to deal with third party losses resulting from an act of terrorism.

The policy question before the Administration is what role, if any, the federal government should continue to play in the market for aviation insurance against terrorist events.

Current State of the Market

Prior to the attacks of 9/11, airlines were paying approximately 5 cents a passenger to secure $1.5 billion of insurance coverage against all perils. That cost has since risen to $1.25 per passenger, with a limitation of $50 million in third party losses.

Immediately after the terrorist attacks of 9/11, private insurers invoked cancellation clauses in their policies, leaving airlines without coverage. The Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act authorized the federal government to provide insurance coverage. The Act capped third party liability at $100 million, and the FAA agreed to provide coverage above the first $50 million of losses for a charge of $7.50 per takeoff, approximately 8 cents per passenger. While the liability cap expired on March 20, the Secretary of Transportation extended the FAA insurance element for 60 days.

A private insurance consortium, headed by AIG, has expressed strong interest in providing this insurance coverage to the airline industry. This would provide $1b in third party coverage. The price initially quoted was $1.85 per passenger, although market pressures may, over time, serve to attenuate that price. This offer of coverage, like the coverage which was offered prior to 9/11, would be cancelable at the discretion of the insurer, possibly forcing us to again revisit this issue in the future should another event occur.

At the same time, the airline industry is advancing a concept they refer to as Equitime. This would be a risk retention group that would provide insurance services to the industry. Starting this venture would require a medium term commitment to provide reinsurance through the federal government. Equitime is intended to provide coverage not just for the third party losses from terrorism but for all the industry's insurance needs.

It is important to note that neither the private insurance market nor the Equitime solution will cover all losses from a large event. Private aviation insurance from the 9/11 attack was approximately $6-8 billion. The Stabilization Act directly spent $40 billion in addition to establishing an open-ended Victim's Compensation Fund that could cost another $5-6 billion. A federal financial role will clearly exist in the wake of another incident.

Recommendation From Principals

A consensus was reached at the first Principals meeting that the appropriate solution was to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism. This was accompanied by the recognition that only legislative action could achieve this goal and that such action was unlikely in the current session of Congress. This requires that decisions be made on how to meet insurance needs of the industry in the medium term.

Decisions Required by Principals

1) Should we seek legislative action in the next Congress to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism?

Discussion: This decision may be premature and it may be desirable to await the conclusion of congressional action on the broader terrorism insurance bill. Note that the coverage limits in the bill under discussion in the Congress call for private insurance coverage of the first $10 billion of an event and that this far exceeds the coverage the airlines formerly carried or feel they could afford to carry today. Thus direct action on the aviation insurance question may still be necessary even with the passage of a broader terrorism bill.

2) On March 20th, The Department of Transportation extended for 60 days the third party liability insurance it offers through the FAA. Upon expiration of those 60 days should we:

- Exit market immediately and let airlines obtain private coverage.
- Keep existing FAA program in place but gradually transition out of the market by raising premiums and/or increasing the "deductible."
- Keep existing FAA program in place "as is" for a period of time.
- Explicitly back the airline industry Equitime proposal.

Discussion: This is the most difficult and contentious issue. The arguments fall into three camps summarized below:
Costs of Terrorism are a social cost: If one subscribes to the view that the costs of terrorist acts should be borne by society as a whole then that goal can be met by continuing to provide the insurance through the FAA and providing it a below market rates while we attempt to limit liability.

Market Failure: If the goal is to ensure that insurance is available and one does not believe the private insurance market will or can properly price the product, then the case can be made for either advancing alternate vehicles (e.g., Equitime) or providing the insurance through the Federal Government and attempting to price it at the "appropriate" rate. A market failure position is also consistent with a continuation of the existing FAA insurance program with the cost of that insurance increased either in response to market conditions or in a pre-defined phased-in path to increase market performance.

Private Markets as the Optimal Solution: If the goal is to foster market participation then we should promptly announce our intention to exit the direct provision of insurance and make clear that we will not subsidize Equitime.

4) If an endorsement is made of the Equitime proposal should that endorsement, with its attendant federal role as a reinsurer, should that endorsement be:
   - As a reinsurer to the full Equitime proposal
   - Limited so as not to subsidize competition for that portion of the insurance market which is functioning properly—i.e., provide support only for third party losses from acts of terrorism.
   - Only provide reinsurance to Equitime if we provide reinsurance on these same terms to other private parties.

Discussion: Equitime is a very major intrusion into the operation of private insurance markets. It would provide one entity preferred status in the market by virtue of its federal support and it would provide federal subsidies for the replacement of a private market in those parts of the insurance market which are working well. The staff recommendation is that any Equitime endorsement be limited to the third party liability issue and be conditioned on providing comparable reinsurance to all parties seeking to compete against Equitime.

The insurance market even operates quite efficiently when the threat is terrorism. Although terrorism can pose a worldwide threat, making it impossible to relocate assets to a safe haven, the market has shown that it can price the risk for hull and passenger losses as these are known risks – maximum loss is limited to the value of the plane and the number of passengers it carries times the average compensation paid those passengers. Staff recommends that any action we take acknowledge that the insurance market has shown itself well capable of providing coverage for all other perils in all other circumstances and should be allowed to operate as it historically has. Thus, the only open issue is how to deal with third party losses resulting from an act of terrorism.

The policy question before the Administration is what role, if any, the federal government should continue to play in the market for aviation insurance against terrorist events.

Current State of the Market

Prior to the attacks of 9/11, airlines were paying approximately 5 cents a passenger to secure $1.5 billion of insurance coverage against all perils. (This 5 cents number makes me nervous – this is Delta's estimate, right? Can we get any independent verification of pre 9/11 costs. My take is that TOTAL insurance costs rose 2-3 times, not 25-fold has this would imply). That cost has since risen to $1.25 per passenger, with a limitation of $50 million in third party losses.

Immediately after the terrorist attacks of 9/11, private insurers invoked cancellation clauses in their policies, leaving airlines without coverage. The Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act authorized the federal government to provide insurance coverage. The Act capped third party liability at $100 million, and the FAA agreed to provide coverage above the first $50 million of losses for a charge of $7.50 per takeoff, approximately 8 cents per passenger. While the liability cap expired on March 20, the Secretary of Transportation extended the FAA insurance element for 60 days.

A private insurance consortium, headed by AIG, has expressed strong interest in providing this insurance coverage to the airline industry. This would provide $1b in third party coverage. The price initially quoted was $1.85 per passenger, although market pressures may, over time, serve to attenuate that price. This offer of coverage, like the coverage which was offered prior to 9/11, would be cancelable at the discretion of the insurer, possibly forcing us to again revisit this issue in the future should another event occur. It is important to note that it is difficult to assess the actual premium costs that would arise in a private market, as the presence of the FAA in this market has limited the ability of the private market to provide accurate price quotes. Based on international experience, however, it is reasonable to assume that AIG would be willing to provide third party coverage at a rate substantially less than $1.85. In the UK, AIG has agreed to provide such coverage for only 75 cents per passenger, subject to a maximum industry exposure of $2 billion.

At the same time, the airline industry is advancing a captive insurer concept they refer to as Equitime. This would be a risk retention group that would provide insurance services to the industry. The airlines believe that ~~S~~starting this venture would require a medium term commitment for the federal government to ~~to~~ provide excess-of-loss coverage~~reinsurance through the federal government~~. Equitime is intended to provide coverage not just for the third party losses from terrorism but for all the industry's insurance needs.

~~It is important to note that neither the private insurance market nor the Equitime solution will cover all losses from a large event. Private aviation insurance from the 9/11 attack was approximately $6-8 billion. The Stabilization Act directly spent $40 billion in addition to establishing an open-ended Victim's Compensation Fund that could cost another $5-6 billion. A federal financial role will clearly exist in the wake of another incident.~~ (This paragraph does not seem needed. It seems to confuse aviation versus other forms of insurance, etc.)

Recommendation From Principals
A consensus was reached at the first Principals meeting that the appropriate solution was to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism. This was accompanied by the recognition that only legislative action could achieve this goal and that such action was unlikely in the current session of Congress. This requires that decisions be made on how to meet insurance needs of the industry in the medium term.

Decisions Required by Principals

1) Should we seek legislative action in the next Congress to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism?

Discussion: This decision may be premature and it may be desirable to await the conclusion of congressional action on the broader terrorism insurance bill. Note that the coverage limits in the bill under discussion in the Congress cover all property and casualty losses (not just those for aviation) and call for private insurance coverage of the first $10 billion of an event. ~~and that t~~This far exceeds the coverage the airlines formerly carried or feel they could afford to carry today. It is an open question whether~~Thus~~ direct action on the aviation insurance question may still be necessary even with the passage of a broader terrorism bill.

2) On March 20th, The Department of Transportation extended for 60 days the third party liability insurance it offers through the FAA. Upon expiration of those 60 days should we:

- Exit market immediately and let airlines obtain private coverage.
- Keep existing FAA program in place but gradually transition out of the market by raising premiums and/or increasing the "deductible."
- Keep existing FAA program in place "as is"~~ for a period of time~~while pursuing liability limitations.
- Explicitly back the airline industry Equitime proposal.

Discussion: This is the most difficult and contentious issue. The ~~arguments fall into three camps~~ are summarized below: (This discussion should be in the same order as the options listed above. And the "camps" should map to the four options. Currently, a government phase-out is linked to Equitime, but it could also be linked to phase to private markets.)

Immediate Private Market Solution: If the goal is to provide appropriate incentives for the private sector to mitigate the risk and cost of future terrorist attacks, then a well-functioning private insurance market is best able to do this. Thus, we should announce our intention to exit the direct provision of insurance and make clear that we will not subsidize Equitime.

Gradually phase to a private market solution: Keep existing FAA program in place but gradually transition out of the market by raising premiums and/or increasing the "deductible." This approach seeks to strike a balance between the desire for private sector risk mitigation incentives, and the recognition that, in the short-run, private insurers may not be able to provide coverage above $1 billion.

Formatted

Costs of Terrorism are a social cost: If one subscribes to the view that the costs of terrorist acts should be borne by society as a whole then that goal can be met by continuing to provide the insurance through the FAA and providing it a below market rates while we attempt to limit liability.

Equitime: If the goal is to ensure that insurance is available, and one does not believe the private insurance market will or can properly price the product, then the case can be made for either advancing alternate vehicles such as Equitime.

~~Market Failure: If the goal is to ensure that insurance is available and one does not believe the private insurance market will or can properly price the product, then the case can be made for either advancing alternate vehicles (e.g., Equitime) or providing the insurance through the Federal Government and attempting to price it at the "appropriate" rate. Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to protect the rights of crime victims.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, and which shall take effect on the 180th day after ratification of this article:

"ARTICLE —

"SECTION 1. The rights of victims of violent crime, being capable of protection without denying the constitutional rights of those accused of victimizing them, are hereby established and shall not be denied by any State or the United States and may be restricted only as provided in this article.

"SECTION 2. A victim of violent crime shall have the right to reasonable and timely notice of any public proceeding involving the crime and of any release or escape of the accused; the rights not to be excluded from such public proceeding and reasonably to be heard at public release, plea, sentencing, reprieve, and pardon proceedings; and the right to adjudicative decisions that duly consider the victim's safety, interest in avoiding unreasonable delay, and just and timely claims to restitution from the offender. These rights shall not be restricted except when and to the degree dictated by a substantial interest in public safety or the administration of criminal justice, or by compelling necessity.

"SECTION 3. Nothing in this article shall be construed to provide grounds for a new trial or to authorize any claim for damages. Only the victim or the victim's lawful representative may assert the rights established by this article, and no person accused of the crime may obtain any form of relief hereunder.

"SECTION 4. Congress shall have power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article. Nothing in this article shall affect the President's authority to grant reprieves or pardons.

"SECTION 5. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission to the States by the Congress.".

RE: FEDERAL ROLE IN THE AVIATION TERRORISM INSURANCE MARKET

Background

Aviation Insurance provides three primary types of insurance, under a variety of different circumstances:

1) Insurance for the loss of the airplane, referred to as hull insurance.
2) Insurance for losses suffered by the passengers on that plane.
3) Insurance for losses caused to other people and property.

Broadly speaking, we can define this insurance as being provided under three circumstances:

1) For losses incurred during normal peacetime operations.
2) For losses incurred in times of war.
3) For losses incurred from acts of terrorism.

The private insurance market currently functions well for all three perils during both peace and war. Moreover, during war it imposes important discipline on the carriers by virtue of the fact that the coverage is cancelable on short notice. This allows the insurance to be appropriately re-priced to reflect the higher risk and provides the carriers a limited window during which they can remove their vulnerable assets from the war zone.

The insurance market even operates quite efficiently when the threat is terrorism. Although terrorism can pose a worldwide threat, making it impossible to relocate assets to a safe haven, the market has shown that it can price the risk for hull and passenger losses as these are known risks – maximum loss is limited to the value of the plane and the number of passengers it carries times the average compensation paid those passengers. The problem arises in liability for third party losses from acts of terrorism. The most notable such example is the loss of life in the World Trade Center attack.

Staff recommends that any action we take acknowledge that the insurance market has shown itself well capable of providing coverage for all other perils in all other circumstances and should be allowed to operate as it historically has. Thus, the only open issue is how to deal with third party losses resulting from an act of terrorism.

The policy question before the Administration is what role, if any, the federal government should continue to play in the market for aviation insurance against terrorist events.

Current State of the Market

Prior to the attacks of 9/11, airlines were paying approximately 5 cents a passenger to secure $1.5 billion of insurance coverage against all perils. (This 5 cents number makes me nervous – this is Delta's estimate, right? Can we get any independent verification of pre 9/11 costs. My take is that TOTAL insurance costs rose 2-3 times, not 25-fold has this would imply). That cost has since risen to $1.25 per passenger, with a limitation of $50 million in third party losses.

Immediately after the terrorist attacks of 9/11, private insurers invoked cancellation clauses in their policies, leaving airlines without coverage. The Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act authorized the federal government to provide insurance coverage. The Act capped third party liability at $100 million, and the FAA agreed to provide coverage above the first $50 million of losses for a charge of $7.50 per takeoff, approximately 8 cents per passenger. While the liability cap expired on March 20, the Secretary of Transportation extended the FAA insurance element for 60 days.

A private insurance consortium, headed by AIG, has expressed strong interest in providing this insurance coverage to the airline industry. This would provide $1b in third party coverage. The price initially quoted was $1.85 per passenger, although market pressures may, over time, serve to attenuate that price. This offer of coverage, like the coverage which was offered prior to 9/11, would be cancelable at the discretion of the insurer, possibly forcing us to again revisit this issue in the future should another event occur. It is important to note that it is difficult to assess the actual premium costs that would arise in a private market, as the presence of the FAA in this market has limited the ability of the private market to provide accurate price quotes. Based on international experience, however, it is reasonable to assume that AIG would be willing to provide third party coverage at a rate substantially less than $1.85. In the UK, AIG has agreed to provide such coverage for only 75 cents per passenger, subject to a maximum industry exposure of $2 billion.

At the same time, the airline industry is advancing a captive insurer concept they refer to as Equitime. This would be a risk retention group that would provide insurance services to the industry. The airlines believe that starting this venture would require a medium term commitment for the federal government to provide excess-of-loss coverage. Equitime is intended to provide coverage not just for the third party losses from terrorism but for all the industry's insurance needs.

(This paragraph does not seem needed. It seems to confuse aviation versus other forms of insurance, etc.)

Recommendation From Principals

A consensus was reached at the first Principals meeting that the appropriate solution was to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism. This was accompanied by the recognition that only legislative action could achieve this goal and that such action was unlikely in the current session of Congress. This requires that decisions be made on how to meet insurance needs of the industry in the medium term.

Decisions Required by Principals

1) Should we seek legislative action in the next Congress to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism?

Discussion: This decision may be premature and it may be desirable to await the conclusion of congressional action on the broader terrorism insurance bill. Note that the coverage limits in the bill under discussion in the Congress cover all property and casualty losses (not just those for aviation) and call for private insurance coverage of the first $10 billion of an event. This far exceeds the coverage the airlines formerly carried or feel they could afford to carry today. It is an open question whether direct action on the aviation insurance question may still be necessary even with the passage of a broader terrorism bill.

2) On March 20th, The Department of Transportation extended for 60 days the third party liability insurance it offers through the FAA. Upon expiration of those 60 days should we:

- Exit market immediately and let airlines obtain private coverage.
- Keep existing FAA program in place but gradually transition out of the market by raising premiums and/or increasing the "deductible."
- Keep existing FAA program in place "as is"while pursuing liability limitations.
- Explicitly back the airline industry Equitime proposal.

Discussion: This is the most difficult and contentious issue. The are summarized below: (This discussion should be in the same order as the options listed above. And the "camps" should map to the four options. Currently, a government phase-out is linked to Equitime, but it could also be linked to phase to private markets.)

Immediate Private Market Solution: If the goal is to provide appropriate incentives for the private sector to mitigate the risk and cost of future terrorist attacks, then a well-functioning private insurance market is best able to do this. Thus, we should announce our intention to exit the direct provision of insurance and make clear that we will not subsidize Equitime.

Gradually phase to a private market solution: Keep existing FAA program in place but gradually transition out of the market by raising premiums and/or increasing the "deductible." This approach seeks to strike a balance between the desire for private sector risk mitigation incentives, and the recognition that, in the short-run, private insurers may not be able to provide coverage above $1 billion.

Costs of Terrorism are a social cost: If one subscribes to the view that the costs of terrorist acts should be borne by society as a whole then that goal can be met by continuing to provide the insurance through the FAA and providing it a below market rates while we attempt to limit liability.

Equitime: If the goal is to ensure that insurance is available, and one does not believe the private insurance market will or can properly price the product, then the case can be made for either advancing alternate vehicles such as Equitime.

4) If an endorsement is made of the Equitime proposal, with its attendant federal role as a reinsurer, should that endorsement be:
   - As a reinsurer to the full Equitime proposal
   - Limited so as not to subsidize competition for that portion of the insurance market which is functioning properly—i.e., provide support only for third party losses from acts of terrorism.
   - Only provide reinsurance to Equitime if we provide reinsurance on these same terms to other private insurers.

Discussion: Equitime is a very major intrusion into the operation of private insurance markets. It would provide one entity preferred status in the market by virtue of its federal support and it would provide federal subsidies for the replacement of a private market in those parts of the insurance market which are working well. The staff recommendation is that any Equitime endorsement be limited to the third party liability issue and be conditioned on providing comparable reinsurance to all parties seeking to compete against Equitime.

Starting this venture would require a medium term commitment to provide reinsurance through the federal government. Equitime is intended to provide coverage not just for the third party losses from terrorism but for all the industry's insurance needs.

It is important to note that neither the private insurance market nor the Equitime solution will cover all losses from a large event. Private aviation insurance from the 9/11 attack was approximately $6-8 billion. The Stabilization Act directly spent $40 billion in addition to establishing an open-ended Victim's Compensation Fund that could cost another $5-6 billion. A federal financial role will clearly exist in the wake of another incident.

Recommendation From Principals

A consensus was reached at the first Principals meeting that the appropriate solution was to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism. This was accompanied by the recognition that only legislative action could achieve this goal and that such action was unlikely in the current session of Congress. Costs of Terrorism are a social cost: If one subscribes to the view that the costs of terrorist acts should be borne by society as a whole then that goal can be met by continuing to provide the insurance through the FAA and providing it a below market rates while we attempt to limit liability.

Market Failure: If the goal is to ensure that insurance is available and one does not believe the private insurance market will or can properly price the product, then the case can be made for either advancing alternate vehicles (e.g., Equitime) or providing the insurance through the Federal Government and attempting to price it at the "appropriate" rate. A market failure position is also consistent with a continuation of the existing FAA insurance program with the cost of that insurance increased either in response to market conditions or in a pre-defined phased-in path to increase market performance.

Private Markets as the Optimal Solution: If the goal is to foster market participation then we should promptly announce our intention to exit the direct provision of insurance and make clear that we will not subsidize Equitime.

4) If an endorsement is made of the Equitime proposal should that endorsement, with its attendant federal role as a reinsurer, should that endorsement be:
   - As a reinsurer to the full Equitime proposal

Broadly speaking, we can define this insurance as being provided under three circumstances:

1) For losses incurred during normal peacetime operations.
2) For losses incurred in times of war.
3) For losses incurred from acts of terrorism.

The private insurance market currently functions well for all three perils during both peace and war. Moreover, during war it imposes important discipline on the carriers by virtue of the fact that the coverage is cancelable on short notice. This allows the insurance to be appropriately re-priced to reflect the higher risk and provides the carriers a limited window during which they can remove their vulnerable assets from the war zone.

The insurance market even operates quite efficiently when the threat is terrorism. Although terrorism can pose a worldwide threat, making it impossible to relocate assets to a safe haven, the market has shown that it can price the risk for hull and passenger losses as these are known risks – maximum loss is limited to the value of the plane and the number of passengers it carries times the average compensation paid those passengers. The problem arises in liability for third party losses from acts of terrorism. The most notable such example is the loss of life in the World Trade Center attack.

Staff recommends that any action we take acknowledge that the insurance market has shown itself well capable of providing coverage for all other perils in all other circumstances and should be allowed to operate as it historically has. Thus, the only open issue is how to deal with third party losses resulting from an act of terrorism.

The policy question before the Administration is what role, if any, the federal government should continue to play in the market for aviation insurance against terrorist events.

Current State of the Market

Prior to the attacks of 9/11, airlines were paying approximately 5 cents a passenger to secure $1.5 billion of insurance coverage against all perils. (This 5 cents number makes me nervous – this is Delta's estimate, right? Can we get any independent verification of pre 9/11 costs. My take is that TOTAL insurance costs rose 2-3 times, not 25-fold has this would imply). That cost has since risen to $1.25 per passenger, with a limitation of $50 million in third party losses.

Immediately after the terrorist attacks of 9/11, private insurers invoked cancellation clauses in their policies, leaving airlines without coverage. The Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act authorized the federal government to provide insurance coverage. The Act capped third party liability at $100 million, and the FAA agreed to provide coverage above the first $50 million of losses for a charge of $7.50 per takeoff, approximately 8 cents per passenger. While the liability cap expired on March 20, the Secretary of Transportation extended the FAA insurance element for 60 days.

A private insurance consortium, headed by AIG, has expressed strong interest in providing ~~this insurance coverage to the airline industry. This would provide~~ $1b in third party coverage. The price initially quoted was $1.85 per passenger, although market pressures may, over time, serve to ~~attenuate~~ lower that price. This offer of coverage, like the coverage which was offered prior to 9/11, would be cancelable at the discretion of the insurer, possibly forcing us to again revisit this issue in the future should another event occur. It is important to note that it is difficult to assess the actual premium costs that would arise in a private market, as the presence of the FAA in this market has limited the ability of the private market to provide accurate price quotes. Based on international experience, however, it is reasonable to assume that AIG would be willing to provide third party coverage at a rate substantially less than $1.85. In the UK, AIG has agreed to provide such coverage for only 75 cents per passenger, subject to a maximum industry exposure of $2 billion.

At the same time, the airline industry is advancing a captive insurer concept they refer to as Equitime. This would be a risk retention group that would provide insurance services to the industry. The airlines believe that ~~S~~starting this venture would require a medium term commitment for the federal government to ~~to~~ provide excess-of-loss coverage~~reinsurance through the federal government~~. Equitime is intended to provide coverage not just for the third party losses from terrorism but for all the industry's insurance needs.

~~It is important to note that neither the private insurance market nor the Equitime solution will cover all losses from a large event. Private aviation insurance from the 9/11 attack was approximately $6-8 billion. The Stabilization Act directly spent $40 billion in addition to establishing an open-ended Victim's Compensation Fund that could cost~~

~~another $5-6 billion. A federal financial role will clearly exist in the wake of another incident.~~ (This paragraph does not seem needed. It seems to confuse aviation versus other forms of insurance, etc.)

Recommendation From Principals

A consensus was reached at the first Principals meeting that the appropriate solution was to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism. This was accompanied by the recognition that only legislative action could achieve this goal and that such action was unlikely in the current session of Congress. This requires that decisions be made on how to meet insurance needs of the industry in the medium term.

Decisions Required by Principals

1) Should we seek legislative action in the next Congress to limit third party liability from acts of terrorism? [why is this question on the table? Can the principles make this decision now? Won't it depend on lots of intervening events like a) whether we get another event; b) whether we keep the House or win back the Senate; c) whether we get a risk insurance bill. KS]

Discussion: This decision may be premature and it may be desirable to await the conclusion of congressional action on the broader terrorism insurance bill. Note that the coverage limits in the bill under discussion in the Congress cover all property and casualty losses (not just those for aviation) and call for private insurance coverage of the first $10 billion of an event. ~~and that t~~This far exceeds the coverage the airlines formerly carried or feel they could afford to carry today. [I don't understand this pt. In the broader risk insurance bill, the $10b industry retention was for all P&C carriers. Airline insurers would be entitled to a pro rata payment depending on their share of the $10b. If the ratios of airline insurance losses to other industry losses was the same as for the WTC, the airline industry retention would be less than $2b. Am I missing something? KS]. It is an open question whether~~Thus~~ direct action on the aviation insurance question may still be necessary even with the passage of a broader terrorism bill.

2) On March 20th, The Department of Transportation extended for 60 days the third party liability insurance it offers through the FAA. Upon expiration of those 60 days should we:

- Exit market immediately and let airlines obtain private coverage.
- Keep existing FAA program in place but gradually transition out of the market by raising premiums and/or increasing the "deductible."
- Keep existing FAA program in place "as is"~~ for a period of time~~while pursuing liability limitations.
- Explicitly back the airline industry Equitime proposal.

Discussion: This is the most difficult and contentious issue. The ~~arguments fall into three camps~~ are summarized below: (This discussion should be in the same order as the options listed above. And the "camps" should map to the four options. Currently, a government phase-out is linked to Equitime, but it could also be linked to phase to private markets.)

Immediate Private Market Solution: If the goal is to provide appropriate incentives for the private sector to mitigate the risk and cost of future terrorist attacks, then a well-functioning private insurance market is best able to do this. Thus, we should announce our intention to exit the direct provision of insurance and make clear that we will not subsidize Equitime.

Gradually phase to a private market solution: Keep existing FAA program in place but gradually transition out of the market by raising premiums and/or increasing the "deductible." This approach seeks to strike a balance between the desire for private sector risk mitigation incentives, and the recognition that, in the short-run, private insurers may not be able to provide coverage above $1 billion.

Formatted

Costs of Terrorism are a social cost: If one subscribes to the view that the costs of terrorist acts should be borne by society as a whole then that goal can be met by continuing to provide the insurance through the FAA and providing it a below market rates while we attempt to limit liability.

Equitime: If the goal is to ensure that insurance is available, and one does not believe the private insurance market will or can properly price the product, then the case can be made for either advancing alternate vehicles such as Equitime.

Formatted

~~Market Failure: If the goal is to ensure that insurance is available and one does not believe the private insurance market will or can properly price the product, then the case can be made for either advancing alternate vehicles (e.g., Equitime) or providing the insurance through the Federal Government and attempting to price it at the "appropriate" rate. A market failure position is also consistent with a continuation of the existing FAA insurance program with the cost of that insurance increased either in response to market conditions or in a pre-defined phased-in path to increase market performance.~~

~~Private Markets as the Optimal Solution: If the goal is to foster market participation then we should promptly announce our intention to exit the direct provision of insurance and make clear that we will not subsidize Equitime.~~

4) If an endorsement is made of the Equitime proposal, ~~should that endorsement,~~ with its attendant federal role as a reinsurer, should that endorsement be:
   - As a reinsurer to the full Equitime proposal
   - Limited so as not to subsidize competition for that portion of the insurance market which is functioning properly—i.e., provide support only for third party losses from acts of terrorism.
   - Only provide reinsurance to Equitime if we provide reinsurance on these same terms to other private insurers~~parties~~.

Discussion: Equitime is a very major intrusion into the operation of private insurance markets. It would provide one entity preferred status in the market by virtue of its federal support and it would provide federal subsidies for the replacement of a private market in those parts of the insurance market which are working well. The staff recommendation is that any Equitime endorsement be limited to the third party liability issue and be conditioned on providing comparable reinsurance to all parties seeking to compete against Equitime.

Assuming the the solicitations are against a n existing GOP database, can they cross-reference names against the list when people show up to get tickets?
Or does this mean anyone can show up at the distribution site(s) and get tickets?

A head's up on some imminent action from DOJ. Justice Kennedy just handed down a 5-4 decision in this case striking down on First Amendment grounds, including overbreadth, several aspects of the federal child pornography statute. While analysis of the opinion is still ongoing, it appears to be the broadest of all the possible free speech outcomes that could have been anticipated. DOJ is scrambling to put together a legislative proposal to amend the statute in a constitutional manner in response to the holding, perhaps as soon as this afternoon.

Subject: Arlington National Cemetery - Waivers

Jay:

Last Thursday Dan Keniry from Leg Affairs and I met with staff from the House Armed Services Committee and Veterans Affairs Committee to talk about possible legislation involving burials at Arlington National Cemetery (ANC). I agreed to go since I am now the Veterans Affairs policy person, although I quickly discovered that ANC is the one military cemetery actually administered by the Secretary of the Army and not Veterans Affairs.

You may recall that a few years ago President Clinton was criticized for granting waivers so that political supporters could be buried at ANC. The most egregious example was of the late ambassador Larry Lawrence, who it was discovered had lied about his military record (subsequently his remains were exhumed) . These waivers are granted by the Secretary of the Army and are waivers of regulations, not statutes. According to our discussion with Hill staff, the prevailing legal position (and practice) of the White House has always been that the President inherently has whatever waiver authority the Secretary of the Army has to grant waivers. The Congressional Research Service in a memorandum is of the opinon that the President does not have legal authority to grant these waivers -- only the Secretary of the Army does.

The issue is important because Armed Services and veterans Affairs Committee staff want some signal from the White House as to whether we would support legislation codifying this waiver process. Legislation sponsored by Chairman Stump passed in the House -- both in the 105th and 106th Congress -- doing just that, but it never made it out of Committee in the Senate (the legislation does not provide for burial of House Members or Senators unless they were veterans, and Ted Kennedy apparently wants to be buried at ANC with the other Kennedys --this according to Hill staff).

Rather than engage again in a futile exercise, Hill staff wanted to get from the White House some indication as to whether we would be supportive of this legislation, perhaps if they added some limited waiver authority for the President. Veterans groups of course would be supportive -- the only real opposition appears to be from Senators who woudl exercise holds.

The threshold issue I raised with Dan is the following: if through practice and precedent, the White House position is that the President does have the legal authority to grant waivers, then by supporting this legislation we would be limiting the current powers of the Office of the President. This is something that White House Counsel would need to look at very carefully before we agree to even vet the idea with Defense or VA, in my opinion. We left it with Committee staff that we were going to go back and run the traps on the issue and give them guidance. You may want to forward this e-mail to Tim Flanigan in White House Counsel's office to see what his reaction is -- he may want to begin staffing it out.

Let me know your thoughts on how we proceed.

THE PRESIDENTIAL RECORDS ACT AMENDMENTS OF 2002
SUMMARY

The bill establishes statutory procedures to govern the assertion of executive privilege claims by a former or incumbent President over records covered by the Presidential Records Act. It preserves the constitutional right of a former or incumbent President to assert privilege claims, but in a way that complies with the framework and intent of the Presidential Records Act. It supersedes the procedures established in Executive Order 13233 and rescinds that Executive Order.

The bill requires the Archivist to provide advance notice of 20 working days to the former and incumbent Presidents before releasing any records that are restricted under the provisions of the Act. The Archivist would release the records upon the expiration of this 20-day period, except any records for which the former or incumbent President asserts a claim of privilege.

The Archivist could extend the 20-day period for an additional 20 days if the former or incumbent President demonstrated a need for additional time to review the records. Additional time should rarely if ever be needed. The former and incumbent Presidents have access to the records at any time and could conduct their reviews well before the time records are ready for public release. The Archivist also would have thoroughly categorized and screened the records before the notice is issued, which should greatly facilitate reviews by the former and incumbent Presidents.

The bill requires that any claim of privilege be in writing and signed by the former or incumbent President, specify the records to which it applies, and state the nature and grounds of the privilege claim. Notices of the proposed release of records, as well as any privilege claims, would be made public.

If the former President submitted a privilege claim, the Archivist would withhold release of the records covered by that claim for another 20 working days. This would permit the former President to seek judicial enforcement of his privilege claim, as already provided for in the Presidential Records Act. After expiration of this 20-day period, the Archivist would release the records unless a court ordered their continued withholding. This approach places the burden of establishing a privilege claim on the former President. Privilege claims should be extremely rare, given the protections already built into the Act and the age of the records. Any claims that are asserted probably would be based on novel or untested legal theories that a court should initially consider.

If the incumbent President submitted a privilege claim, the Archivist would withhold the records unless and until the incumbent President withdrew the claim or there was a final, non-appealable court order directing the Archivist to release the records. This approach recognizes the legal and practical reality that the Archivist must honor a privilege claim by an incumbent President.

The bill would apply similar procedures to requests for access to records by Congress and the courts. The time periods, however, would be modified to ensure compliance with deadlines imposed by subpoenas. Also, the bill does not specify an outcome if the incumbent President invoked privilege in response to a congressional or judicial access request. Disputes between the incumbent president and either the Congress or the courts would be left for resolution on a case-by-case-basis.

The bill makes several clarifying and conforming changes to existing provisions of the Presidential Records Act as follows:

It makes explicit that all the time lines and procedures under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) apply to public requests for access to records under the Presidential Records Act. This is consistent with the current language and intent of the Act, but is not entirely clear whether the Executive Branch agrees that FOIA time limits apply to requests for records under the Presidential Records Act.

It clarifies that authority to claim executive privilege is personal to a former or incumbent President and cannot be delegated to their representatives. This is consistent with the current legal theory and practice concerning executive privilege.

It clarifies that a former or incumbent Vice President cannot claim presidential privileges.

Finally, the draft bill explicitly rescinds Executive Order 13233.

REV_00143372

INTRODUCTION OF THE PRESIDENTIAL RECORDS ACT AMENDMENTS OF 2002

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing the Presidential Records Act Amendments Act of 2002. Prompt enactment of this bill will fix a serious, but in my view readily solvable, problem that has developed in the implementation of the Presidential Records Act of 1978. I am pleased that a number of my colleagues from both sides of the aisle have joined me as co-sponsors of the bill.

The Presidential Records Act of 1978 was a landmark law. It declared for the first time that the official records of a former President belong to the American people. It gave custody of a former President's records to the Archivist of the United States and imposed upon the Archivist "an affirmative duty to make such records available to the public as rapidly and completely as possible consistent with the provisions of this Act."

The Act built in safeguards over the disclosure of presidential records. It allowed former Presidents to restrict disclosure of certain confidential records for up to 12 years after they leave office. The authors of the Act considered this 12-year embargo sufficient to prevent a "chilling effect" on a President's ability to get candid and confidential advice. In this regard, they were mindful of the Supreme Court's observation in Nixon v. Administrator of General Services, 433 U.S. 425 (1977), that the expectation of confidentiality in presidential communications "has always been limited and subject to erosion over time after an administration leaves office." The Act also permanently shielded from public release records containing military and diplomatic secrets or other categories of information whose disclosure would not be in the national interest.

The Act first applied to the records of former President Ronald Reagan. Therefore, records that former President Reagan restricted for 12 years should have become publicly available in February 2001. Unfortunately, it took one full year after the release date envisioned by the Act for just a relatively small portion of those records to be made public. One reason for this is that the records have undergone lengthy reviews to determine whether the former or incumbent President should attempt to prevent their release by claiming "executive privilege"

For much of last year, release of the Reagan records was delayed while the current Administration repeatedly extended the deadline for making executive privilege decisions under an Executive Order that President Reagan had issued before he left office. On November 1, 2001, President Bush issued a new, and much more restrictive, Executive Order to govern the review of a former President's records for possible executive privilege claims.

The new Executive Order No. 13233 starts with a "background" section that asserts an extremely expansive view of the scope of executive privilege. It requires the Archivist to notify both the former and incumbent Presidents of requests for access to presidential records. It then prohibits the Archivist from releasing the records "unless and until" both the former President and incumbent President agree to authorize access, or unless the Archivist is directed to release the records by a final and non-appealable court order. The Executive Order makes any claim of executive privilege by either the former or incumbent President binding on the Archivist. Indeed, the Archivist must comply with a privilege claim by a former President even if the incumbent President does not believe the claim is well founded. The Order sets a target date of 90 days for the review of records. However, under the terms of the Order, the review periods available to the former and incumbent Presidents are essentially open-ended. A former or incumbent President can indefinitely postpone public disclosure of records simply by withholding approval for their release, without ever needing to claim executive privilege.

Last November, the Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management and Intergovernmental Relations, which I chair, held a hearing on implementation of the Presidential Records Act. At that hearing, lawyers, historians, and other experts criticized the Executive Order on legal and policy grounds. Members of Congress from both sides of the aisle voiced similar criticisms. Following the hearing, a host of archivists, historians and others contacted me to express their concerns over the Executive Order. Finally, several groups have filed a lawsuit to overturn the Executive Order.

I agree that the Executive Order violates the letter and spirit of the Presidential Records Act. However, I do not think we should wait perhaps years for the lawsuit to run its course. We need to act now in order to get implementation of the Act back on track. I believe we can solve the problem in a way that protects the constitutional prerogatives of former and incumbent Presidents while preserving the Act's intent of publicly disclosing presidential records as promptly and completely as possible. That is what my bill seeks to do.

Like the Executive Order, my bill establishes a process for the consideration of executive privilege claims. Like the Executive Order, it requires advance notice to the former and incumbent Presidents before presidential records are released. This permits them to review the records in order to decide whether to claim privilege. Also like the Executive Order, my bill requires the Archivist to withhold records (or parts of records) for which the incumbent President claims privilege. In this event, a requester would have the burden of challenging a privilege claim in court.

However, my bill differs from the Executive Order in several ways. The bill does not attempt to define the scope of executive privilege. It leaves this to the courts. The bill limits the amount of time the former and incumbent President can take to review records and claim privilege. The basic review period is 20 working days, which is the same limit imposed on agencies under the Freedom of Information Act. This period may be extended for not more than another 20 working days if the Archivist determines that an extension is necessary to permit adequate review. If there is no claim of privilege within the applicable review period, the Archivist must release the records.

The other key difference between my bill and the Executive Order concerns what happens if a former President claims privilege. As noted previously, the Executive Order forces the Archivist to withhold records any time a former President claims privilege. The requester then has the burden of going to court to challenge the privilege claim. This is the feature of the Executive Order most clearly at odds with the Presidential Records Act. The bill reverses this burden. If a former President claims privilege, the Archivist will withhold the records for an additional 20 days in order to give the former President time to file suit to enforce his privilege claim. However, the Archivist will then release the records absent a court order to the contrary.

I believe this is a reasonable approach, and one that is consistent with the intent of the Presidential Records Act. The Act already provides for lawsuits by a former President to vindicate his rights and privileges. Furthermore, the Act already protects from disclosure those categories of information that would ordinarily be subject to executive privilege claims. Thus, any privilege claim a former President might assert probably would be based on novel and untested legal grounds that should be initially considered by a court.

The bill also includes several provisions that are not in the Executive Order. Most of these provisions are intended to ensure more transparency and public accountability with respect to possible executive privilege claims. For example, a claim of privilege would be in a written public document signed by the incumbent or former President, as the case may be. This is consistent with the settled principle that the right to claim executive privilege is personal to the incumbent or former President and cannot be delegated to their assistants, relatives, or descendants.

Mr. Speaker, I request that a summary of the Presidential Records Act Amendments of 2002 be placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 2204(d) of title 44, United States Code, is amended by inserting ", except section 2208," after "chapter".

(2) Section 2207 of title 44, United States Code, is amended in the second sentence by inserting ", except section 2208," after "chapter".

"(E) CIVIL RIGHTS AND FAIR HOUSING REQUIREMENTS.—Regardless of location, if the dwelling units proposed to be provided assistance under this paragraph are assisted with a grant or loan under a Federal program pursuant to which the Secretary (or a designee of the Secretary) has determined, in accordance with the regulations of the Secretary, that the site location meets applicable civil rights and fair housing requirements, the Secretary shall consider the attachment of assistance under this paragraph to the structure to comply with all applicable civil rights and fair housing requirements.

"(H) RENT CALCULATION.—

A public housing agency shall require an owner to demonstrate that the unit operating cost for units assisted under this paragraph does not exceed the operating cost of other units in the property of similar size that are not assisted under paragraph (13) and shall establish policies to ensure that expenses included in unit operating cost that are paid to the owner or a related entity are reasonable and consistent with prevailing costs in the community. The agency shall be responsible for determining whether an owner has sufficiently demonstrated such unit operating cost.

"(iii) ANNUAL ADJUSTMENT.—The public housing agency shall annually make an appropriate adjustment in contract rents, based on documented changes in unit operating costs.

"(iv) LIMITATIONS.—A public housing agency shall not approve a rent for a dwelling unit assisted under this paragraph that exceeds 75 percent of the agency's payment standard for a dwelling unit of the same size or the applicable fair market rental, whichever is higher. Among families applying at the equivalent time and date with otherwise equivalent preference under the public housing agency plan for the agency approved under section 5A, the agency shall give preference for occupancy in dwelling units assisted under this paragraph to families on its tenant-based waiting list.

"(II) Each agency shall notify extremely low-income families requesting to apply for tenant-based assistance of the opportunity to be listed on any separate waiting lists for dwelling units assisted under this paragraph.

"(iii) OWNER WAITING LISTS.—

"(I) A public housing agency may, at the option of the agency, allow an owner of a property assisted under a contract under this paragraph to maintain the waiting list for such assisted units. The owner's waiting list shall be considered to be a waiting list maintained by the agency under this subsection for purposes of requirements applicable to the agency's waiting list.

"(II) Any family denied a dwelling unit by an owner that maintains the waiting list for units assisted under this paragraph shall have the same rights to informal review by the agency as a family denied tenant-based assistance by the agency. The agency shall perform such review expeditiously so as not to impede the timely rental of units. The owner's waiting list policy and any applicable preferences or selection criteria shall be included in the public housing agency plan for the agency approved under section 5A.

"(III) Each agency shall notify extremely low-income families requesting to apply for tenant-based assistance of the opportunity to be listed on the owner's waiting list, shall establish a mechanism to transmit applications submitted at its office to the owner for placement on the waiting list, and shall monitor at reasonable intervals the compliance by the owner with laws applicable to tenant selection and waiting lists, including civil rights laws and certifications required under such laws.

"(IV) The agency's contract with the owner shall require the owner to—

"(aa) provide notice of the opening of the waiting list and provide preference to families on the agency's tenant-based waiting list in the same manner required of the agency if the agency maintained the waiting list (unless the agency agrees to provide such notice for the owner);

REV_00143459

"(bb) place on its waiting list families that apply at an office of the agency that accepts applications for tenant-based assistance;

"(cc) cooperate with the agency's requests for information concerning the waiting list and the owner's tenant selection decisions; and

"(dd) submit to the agency for approval written tenant selection policies and criteria and make the policies and criteria available to the public.

"(J) USE OF ASSISTANCE IN CONJUNCTION WITH PUBLIC HOUSING CAPITAL FUNDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, a public housing agency may attach assistance under this paragraph to a unit that receives amounts allocated to the agency under the Capital Fund established by section 9(d) or under section 24. Any such unit receiving assistance under this paragraph shall not be eligible for assistance under the Operating Fund established by section 9(e).

"(K) RENEWAL OF ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall increase the adjusted allocation baseline for renewal of funding under subsection (d) for public housing agencies that attach assistance to a structure under this paragraph. "(ii) QUALIFIED PUBLIC HOUSING AGENCIES.—Subject to the allocation as provided in clause (i) and any additional criteria that the Secretary may establish, the Secretary shall award such incremental assistance only to public housing agencies that administer a program of tenant-based assistance under this subsection and that administer funds for the construction or substantial rehabilitation of rental housing other than public housing. A public housing agency may qualify to receive incremental assistance for use under this paragraph if the agency has an agreement with an agency that administers funds for the construction or substantial rehabilitation of rental housing that will enable a prospective developer of such housing to submit a single application for both types of funds.

"(iii) TREATMENT OF PERCENTAGE LIMITATION.—Incremental assistance restricted for use under this paragraph shall not be considered in determining an agency's compliance with the limitation in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (13).

"(iv) INSUFFICIENT FUNDS FOR FORMULA ALLOCATION.—If the Secretary determines that the amounts appropriated for incremental assistance for use under this paragraph are not sufficient to allocate to each State or to each eligible jurisdiction in accordance with the formula referred to in clause (i), the Secretary may award such funds to qualified public housing agencies through a national competition.

"(M) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the following definitions shall apply:

"(i) EXTREMELY LOW-INCOME FAMILIES.—The term 'extremely low-income families' means families (as such term is defined in section 3(b)) whose incomes do not exceed the higher of—increase the cost or reduce the supply of housing or land for residential development; and

(4) an identification, to the extent practicable, of all relevant Federal rules which may duplicate, overlap, or conflict with the proposed rule.

SEC. 805. FINAL HOUSING IMPACT ANALYSIS.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—Whenever an agency promulgates a final rule after publication of a general notice of proposed rulemaking, unless the agency has made the certification under section 801, the agency shall prepare a final housing impact analysis.

(b) CONTENTS.—Each final housing impact analysis shall contain—

(1) a succinct statement of the need for, and objectives of, the rule;

(2) a summary of the significant issues, analyses, and alternatives to the proposed rule raised during the public comment period in response to the proposed rule and initial housing impact analysis, a summary of the assessment of the agency of such issues, analyses, and alternatives, and a statement of any changes made in the proposed rule as a result of such comments; and

(c) AVAILABILITY.—The agency shall make copies of the final housing impact analysis available to members of the public and shall publish in the Federal Register such analysis or a summary thereof.

SEC. 806. AVOIDANCE OF DUPLICATIVE OR UNNECESSARY ANALYSES.

(b) JOINDER.—In order to avoid duplicative action, an agency may consider a series of closely related rules as one rule for the purposes of sections 804 and 805.

SEC. 807. PREPARATION OF ANALYSES.

In complying with the provisions of sections 804 and 805, an agency may provide either a quantifiable or numerical description of the effects of a proposed rule or alternatives to the proposed rule, or more general descriptive statements if quantification is not practicable or reliable.

SEC. 808. EFFECT ON OTHER LAW.

The requirements of sections 804 and 805 do not alter in any manner standards otherwise applicable by law to agency action.

(a) INITIAL HOUSING IMPACT ANALYSIS.—An agency head may waive or delay the completion of some or all of the requirements of section 804 by publishing in the Federal Register, not later than the date of publication of the final rule, a written finding, with reasons therefor, that the final rule is being promulgated in response to an emergency that makes compliance or timely compliance with the provisions of section 801 impracticable.

(b) FINAL HOUSING IMPACT ANALYSIS.—An agency head may not waive the requirements of section 805. An agency head may delay the completion of the requirements of section 805 for a period of not more than 180 days after the date of publication in the Federal Register of a final rule by publishing in the Federal Register, not later than such date of publication, a written finding, with reasons therefor, that the final rule is being promulgated in response to an emergency that makes timely compliance with the provisions of section 805 impracticable. If the agency has not prepared a final housing impact analysis pursuant to section 805 within 180 days from the date of publication of the final rule, such rule shall lapse and have no force or effect. Such rule shall not be repromulgated until a final housing impact analysis has been completed by the agency.

Apart from my preference for option 2 on the new paragraph (rather than option 1, which appears in this draft), the few attached nits are my only comments.

I consulted this morning with the Republican committee staff. They like and approve of both the tone and content of the letter. They suggest that we cc: Senator Thompson on it. They predict that the letter will anger the committee staff (they advise that anger and outrage are the default responses by the staff in any event) but that it will establish a good foundation on which to base further discussions down the road with Leiberman.

4/18
7:00 P.M.

April __, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

Thank you for your letter to Secretary Card and for subsequently discussing the letter with me. As we had discussed, members of my staff later met with members of your staff to review the Committee's letter request for information from the White House.

At the outset, I want to emphasize our respect for you and the Committee, as well as our appreciation for the congressional inquiries into the causes and consequences of the collapse of Enron. Please be assured that the President shares your concern about this matter, including the consequences for Enron employees and shareholders. Indeed, the President and the Administration have responded rapidly to the issue by proposing important policy changes to address the problems. In addition, the Department of Justice and other federal agencies are conducting intensive official investigations of Enron and related entities and individuals. In short, the Administration is committed to appropriate investigative, law enforcement, and policy actions relating to the Enron bankruptcy.

I also want to emphasize that, as the Committee seeks to investigate Enron-related issues, we intend to ensure to the extent possible that the Committee receives appropriate information critical to its inquiry. We understand that the Committee is conducting an extensive investigation of Enron, which may well continue for many more months, and we want to be as helpful as we can, consistent with both the Committee's legitimate needs and the Executive Branch's traditional responsibilities and prerogatives.

With respect specifically to the ~~your~~ letter request for information, we discussed with your staff two ~~expressed~~ concerns. First, at this point, the request appears overbroad and not well-defined. For example, the letter does not identify any particular regulatory matters or subject matters in which the Committee is interested. Nor does the letter identify~~ied~~ particular offices or individuals within the White House, or particular individuals affiliated with Enron, in whose communications the Committee is interested. Rather, the request on its face covers potential communications (about undefined subjects) between tens of thousands of individuals, the vast majority of whom are not known to us or you, such as all of Enron's "officers, directors, employees, and representatives, including anyone purporting to act on their behalf; and each of their affiliates, subsidiaries, partnerships, special purpose entities, joint ventures, trusts or any other entity in which [Enron] is or was a shareholder, partner, investor, trustee, or member."

~~T~~The letter also seeks certain information that appears somewhat removed from the purposes of the Committee's ~~legitimate~~ inquiry into the collapse of Enron. For example, the letter seeks information about the deliberations and communications of the National Energy Policy Development Group. It is not clear, however, how the activities of this group, and its report, have anything to do with what your letter identifies as the focus of the Committee's investigation -- namely, "whether the various federal agencies charged with overseeing or regulating part of Enron's business could have done something to detect or prevent the problems that led to the company's downfall and the losses of thousands of jobs and billions of investors' and employees' dollars."

Moreover, as I am sure you can appreciate, our concern about the letter request is especially heightened with respect to certain specific areas where the request would intrude deeply into ~~sensitive areas involving~~ the President's core constitutional responsibilities: for example, the President's power of nomination and appointment. The power of nomination under the Constitution belongs solely to the President, and congressional oversight in this area, at least absent a compelling predicate, threatens important Executive Branch prerogatives, as well as important privacy interests of candidates and others involved in the process. The letter request does not indicate~~, however, which~~any particular appointments that are of interest to the Committee.

Second, and more broadly, the letter request ~~Committee respectfully appears to have~~ invert~~ed~~ the traditional process of congressional inquiry to the White House. The Committee is seeking information from the White House without first gathering and assessing information from other entities (including federal departments) that may indicate whether there is, indeed, any real predicate for seeking information from the White House. Your staff stated in our meeting that the Committee's investigation has not as yet proceeded as far as we had thought, and the Committee therefore has not developed information -- either from Enron, Enron officials or representatives, or federal departments and agencies -- that would establish a basis for seeking information from the White House. Given the sensitivity and separation of powers concerns that arise from congressional requests for information from the White House, ~~however,~~ congressional committees traditionally avail themselves of alternative means to obtain information before submitting an information request to the White House.

In that regard, we think Senator Thompson put it well when he explained why he did not join in this request. He explained that the Committee's initial "focus was going to be on the external controls and watchdogs, and the federal agencies and laws, and ask why in this case they couldn't better protect the thousands of employees and investors who have suffered from Enron's untimely and unnatural demise." Senator Thompson further explained that he would be willing to follow up with the White House if "any of our other subpoenas or requests for information to Enron, Arthur Andersen or the regulatory agencies produced evidence of White House involvement." We respectfully believe that Senator Thompson has correctly outlined the traditional and appropriate congressional approach to inquiries to the White House.

To be sure, we are aware that some congressional inquiries in the past have sought information directly from the White House before or at the same time ~~as seeking~~they sought information from other departments and entities. But in those instances, there generally was a specific allegation or evidence of wrongdoing by White House officials. In this instance, there is none.

For those reasons, we share the overall concern reflected in Senator Thompson's statement: "While I have supported several other requests for information in this matter, I cannot support the chairman's letter. . . . There are obvious separation of powers issues here which are bound to lead to controversy, and I believe that before Congress intrudes upon the private communications of the President of the United States, the inquiry should be focused on an appropriate legislative purpose or there should be some indication of improper or illegal White House activity."

The concerns that we and Senator Thompson have identified about the predicate for, timing of, and scope of the letter request may well justify, at this juncture, resisting the Committee's inquiry until it actually gathered information from other entities demonstrating a specific need predicate for a request to the White House, and reasonably focused the request in light of that need~~any such predicate~~.

But we do not seek controversy or conflict with you or the Committee. We therefore intend to assist the Committee by taking substantial and reasonable steps now to gather certain information of interest to the Committee.

First, the Administration already has provided certain information to the House of Representatives relevant to your inquiry: letters from the Chief of Staff, Director of the National Economic Council, and Director of the Office of Management and Budget. We think this information is quite useful, and we have enclosed that documentation in order to assist the Committee. Second, we will take appropriate steps to gather substantial additional information from appropriate White House officials. Third, we will then ~~would intend to~~ provide to the Committee information about the results of our efforts. Fourth, we then would hope to meet with Committee staff to assess the results of our efforts in the overall context of the Committee's inquiry.

Thank you again for your letter. We hope to continue a cooperative relationship with the Committee, recognizing of course that the two Branches inevitably may have somewhat different perspectives on certain sensitive issues. That difference in perspective is, however, both healthy to our constitutional government and not at all inconsistent with the productive and cooperative relationship we have begun. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions.

Sincerely yours,

Alberto R. Gonzales

107TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

H. R. 4231

To improve small business advocacy, and for other purposes.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

APRIL 16, 2002

Mr. MANZULLO (for himself and Ms. VELÁZQUEZ) introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Small Business

---

A BILL

To improve small business advocacy, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Small Business Advocacy Improvement Act of 2002".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Excessive regulations continue to burden the Nation's small businesses.

(2) Federal agencies continue to propose regulations that impose disproportionate burdens on small businesses.

REV_00143657

(3) An independent office of small business advocacy will help to ensure that Federal agencies are responsive to small businesses and that those agencies comply with their statutory obligations with respect to small businesses.

(4) The independence of an office that acts as an advocate for small businesses is essential to ensure that it can serve as an effective advocate without being restricted by the views or policies of the Small Business Administration or any other Federal executive branch agency.

(5) To be effective an office that acts as an advocate for small businesses needs sufficient resources to conduct creditable economic studies and research which are necessary for the maintenance of small business databases and for the accurate assessment of the impact of regulations on small businesses, the role of small business in the Nation's economy, and the barriers to the growth of small businesses.

(6) The research, information, and expertise provided by an independent office of small business advocacy will be a valuable source of information and advice for Congress and Federal agencies with which the office will work on behalf of small businesses.

AMEND MODERATE REHABILITATION RENEWALS TEST TO DROP FAIR MARKET RENT RESTRICTION

SEC. ____. Section 524(b)(3) of the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 is amended by striking subparagraph (B) and redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (B).

VOUCHER UTILIZATION: CHANGE LIMITATION ON FAMILY PAYMENTS OF RENT FROM 40 PERCENT OF ADJUSTED MONTHLY INCOME TO 40 PERCENT OF MONTHLY INCOME

SEC. ____. Section 8(o)(3) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by striking "adjusted".

SEC. ___. Section 204(h)(2) of the National Housing Act is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking "Any" and inserting "Except as provided in subparagraph (D), any"; and

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) INFEASIBLE REHABILITATION; OPEN SPACE.— Regardless of whether or not a property was at any time considered an `eligible asset' under this subsection, if at any time the estimated cost of acquisition and rehabilitation for any property described in subparagraph (A) would exceed the estimated market value of the property after such rehabilitation or if the Secretary determines at any time that rehabilitation of a property described in subparagraph (A) is otherwise infeasible or that the best use of such property is as open space (including park land), the Secretary may exclude such property from disposition under this subsection. Properties excluded by the Secretary under this subparagraph shall not be considered `eligible assets' for purposes of this subsection.".

TECHNICAL CORRECTION TO NATIONAL HOUSING ACT AMENDMENT

SEC. ____. (a) TECHNICAL CORRECTION.--Section 207(a)(1) of the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 2002 is amended to read as follows:

April 2002
Five Legislative Proposals – Section-by-Section Analysis

REDUCTION IN MINIMUM RENT; ELIMINATION OF HARDSHIP EXEMPTION FOR NON-ELDERLY, NON-DISABLED FAMILIES THAT WOULD BE EVICTED

Section ____ would amend section 3(a)(3) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to eliminate the eviction-related hardship exemption for those families that are not elderly families or disabled families, and also to lower the maximum minimum rent from $50 to $25.

AMEND MODERATE REHABILITATION RENEWALS TEST TO DROP FAIR MARKET RENT RESTRICTION

Section ____ would amend section 524(b)(3) of the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 to provide that renewal rents for moderate rehabilitation projects are set at the lesser of current rents plus an operating adjustment for inflation, or comparable market rents for the market area. Under current law, they are set at the lesser of current rents plus an operating adjustment for inflation, fair market rents, or comparable market rents for the market area.

Section ____ would amend section 8(o)(3) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to change the reference to "monthly adjusted income" to instead reference "monthly income" by striking the word "adjusted". The effect of this change would be to increase the total rent that a family initially receiving tenant-based section 8 assistance with respect to any dwelling unit may be allowed to pay from 40% of the monthly adjusted income of the family to 40% of the monthly income of the family.

A basic compromise in the 1998 merger of the voucher and certificate programs was that families could choose to pay more than 30% of adjusted income to rent better apartments, but could not pay more than 40% of adjusted income. This 40% cap helps to ensure that families entering the voucher program do not assume untenably high rent burdens that might undermine the stability of their housing. However, the limit has prevented some families from obtaining housing of their choice, and caused problems such as preventing a family previously in the voucher program and paying more than 40% of adjusted income from moving to a less expensive apartment that still costs more than 40% of adjusted income. This section would help to ease the potentially adverse effects of the limitation by raising the 40% of adjusted monthly income rent burden limitation to 40% of monthly income.

INCREASED FLEXIBILITY FOR SALE OF PROPERTIES UNDER ASSET CONTROL AREA AGREEMENTS

Section ____ would amend section 204(h)(2) of the National Housing Act to allow HUD to establish an exception to the definition of "eligible asset" for those properties for which rehabilitation is or becomes infeasible, or for which the best use is determined to be as open land or park space, effectively excluding those properties from the requirements of that section. Section 204(h) sets forth special procedures for FHA single family property disposition, and currently provides that HUD must dispose of all "eligible assets" in accordance with the terms of that section, including the terms of paragraph (5)(A)(iii) and paragraph (5)(B)(ii), which provide that properties acquired under an Asset Control Area ("ACA") agreement must be rehabilitated into livable homes. The changes made by this proposal would relieve the ACA partners from having to manage rehabilitation of properties where that use is not the best use and/or where rehabilitation is not feasible.

TECHNICAL CORRECTION TO NATIONAL HOUSING ACT AMENDMENT

Section 207 of HUD's FY 2002 appropriations Act amended section 203(c) of the National Housing Act to allow a change in premium for FHA single family programs insured under sections 203(k) and 234 of the National Housing Act. Section 207(a)(1) contained some technical drafting errors in its amendment to section 203(c)(1). Section ___ would amend section 207(a)(1) to correct these errors and would deem the amendment to be effective on November 26, 2001 (the date of enactment of HUD's FY 2002 appropriations Act).

That is exactly what I was seeking clarification on last week. We are submitting scheduling paper for a Members meeting on the 9th (not event). But it's very important that we have a judges message on law day if we're not doing so on the 9th. Dan, can you confirm the law day issue?

Since Ari is going to be the keynote speaker at the Westchester County Association's Spring Dinner Meeting -- I assume it's official, even though they have offered to pay. He will fly from White Plains to West Point to hook up with the President for the commencement. He will fly from West Point to Burlington, Vermont for his Middlebury class reunion. Does this help?

Doug Kmiec was head of OLC at the time of the Reagan order on Presidential Records. You will see that he argues that President Bush's order is constitutionally sound -- and makes more sense in terms of constitutional law and appropriate policy than the Reagan order he reviewed in 1988. This letter is a nice development.

In addition, Todd Gaziano of Heritage will testify at the hearing.

Re: H.R. 4187

Dear Congressman Horn

Thank you for inviting me to participate in the hearing on H.R. 4187, the Presidential Records Act Amendments of 2002.

I regret that a prior commitment to participate in a program out of state makes it impossible for me to attend your deliberations on the 24th of April, but I wanted to share a few thoughts by letter in the event they are helpful.

First, I want to commend you and the committee for seeking the proper balance between the prerogatives of the Presidency and public disclosure. History depends upon an accurate accounting of public decision, and history can only be well written if the relevant materials are available. Of course, our nation does not only live in the past, it has an obligation to the present, so there is a corresponding duty to ensure that the office of the Presidency can function both in these times of war, as well as in times of peace.

While I believe your proposal is well-intended, in my judgment, it strikes an incorrect balance. The Presidential Records Act of 1978 was, in itself, a dramatic step toward the opening of public documents. Prior to the act, presidents owned their papers outright. This was something well accepted by our founders. It was Justice Storey, after all, who opined that George Washington owned his presidential papers and could bequeath them to his estate or grant a copyright in them to others.

In the wake of Watergate, and its unfortunate and inexcusable abuse of public power, Congress reset that balance. In doing so, Congress was careful not to undermine the constitutional responsibilities of the presidency, both by allowing the restriction of access to executive documents for up to 12 years, and by explicitly providing that "nothing in the Act shall be construed to confirm, limit, or expand any constitutionally-based privilege which may be available to an incumbent or former president."

Without those carefully stated words, the 1978 Act would have been open to serious constitutional doubt. While President Nixon's particular privilege claim was not sustained, United States v. Nixon recognized the unmistakable constitutional origin of executive privilege claims and that the need "to protect military, diplomatic, or sensitive national security secrets" might even trump the need for presidential materials in a criminal trial. More generally, the Court specified that "there is a legitimate governmental interest in the confidentiality of communications between high Government officials, e. g., those who advise the President, and that '(h)uman experience teaches that those who expect public dissemination of their remarks may well temper candor with a concern for appearances and for their own interests to the detriment of the decisionmaking process.' 418 U.S., at 705. Indeed, the opinion noted that Government confidentiality has been a concern from the time of the Constitutional Convention in 1787, the meetings of which were conducted in private, 1 M. Farrand, The Records of the Federal Convention of 1787, pp. xi-xxv (1911), and the records of which were sealed for more than 30 years after the Convention. See 3 Stat. 475, 15th Cong., 1st Sess., Res. 8 (1818). See generally Charles Warren, The Making of the Constitution 134-139 (1937).

Subsequently the Court decided in Nixon v. Administrator of General Services, 433 U.S. 425 (1977), that executive privilege extends to both incumbent and former presidents. Unless the President can give his advisers some assurance of confidentiality, a President could not expect to receive the full and frank submissions of facts and opinions upon which effective discharge of his duties depends. Said the Court adopting the words of the Solicitor General; "The confidentiality necessary to this exchange cannot be measured by the few months or years between the submission of the information and the end of the President's tenure; the privilege is not for the benefit of the President as an individual, but for the benefit of the Republic. Therefore the privilege survives the individual President's tenure."

As Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legal Counsel to President Reagan, it was my privilege to review for form and legality, Executive Order 12667. That executive order implemented the 1978 Act by directing the Archivist to fully honor an incumbent President's assertion of privilege, but left to the Archivist's discretion, subject to court order, whether or not to honor a claim of a former president. It was not clear to me why the White House in 1989 preferred this differentiation of incumbent and former president privilege claims, as it certainly was not mandated by the 1978 Act or judicial precedent, but it could be argued that so long the Archivist would not disclose documents for a time sufficient to allow the former president to litigate the privilege, no constitutional problem would arise.

A more prudent course would be to treat the privilege claims of incumbent and former presidents as equivalent. Such equivalency better recognizes that the privilege is not a personal one, but one intended within the constitutional design to protect the Office of the Presidency, especially as it relates to state secrets, open law enforcement files, and the deliberative process of the President, which of course, extends to communications with the Vice-President, the cabinet, and other high ranking advisors. This more prudent course was adopted by President George W. Bush in Executive Order 13233 signed on November 1, 2001. Under the Bush executive order, a claim of privilege by either the incumbent or a former president preserves the confidentiality of the material unless the parties seeking disclosure receive a final court order confirming some "demonstrated need" for the document's release.

While it is possible to construe the Bush executive order as more restrictive, in fact, it provides an incumbent concession that "absent compelling circumstances, the incumbent President will concur in the privilege decision of the former President." In essence, the Bush order can be reasonably read as creating a presumption of disclosure of former presidential documents, unless there is compelling reason – from the vantage point of the incumbent and the present exigencies of the Office – to withhold materials. This presumption of disclosure in the Bush order was not present in that signed by President Reagan. Perhaps, it is in exchange for this deference to public release, that when a former president does assert a privilege under the Bush order, "the incumbent President will support that privilege claim in any forum in which the privilege claim is challenged." This is constitutionally sensible, equitable, and responsive to the needs of a presidency that at the moment faces unparalleled challenges to maintaining the safety and security of the Nation.

Regrettably, I do not find the same sense of constitutional prudence in H.R. 4187. First, it would seem that rather than striving for balance, the proposed amendment is designed to weaken the Presidential office without deference to the constitutional importance of maintaining the integrity of privileged material. For example, the proposal resurrects the unwarranted differentiation of privilege claims asserted by the former or incumbent president. In this regard, a former president is once again put in the awkward position of suing his successor, unless his successor incumbent concurs in the nonrelease. Even more troubling, the assertion of privilege claims by either an incumbent or former president is made subject to predicate requirements that require the identification of the specific record, the specific grounds of the claim, and the circulation of this information to members of Congress, the person seeking the record, and the general public. While it might be theoretically possible to write such claims obliquely without disclosing privileged material, in some cases, especially as they relate to military and law enforcement matters, that would be impossible. It would also appear that some of the time periods for review of material have been narrowed from the 1978 Act, and given the differential volume of some disclosure claims, this in itself would likely prove constitutionally troublesome. Finally, the above changes aggravate some of the lingering constitutional doubts related to the 1978 Act – specifically, the fact that the proposed amendment effectively denies the validity of a constitutionally based privilege, whether made by an incumbent or former president, when the information is sought pursuant to 44 U.S.C. 2205(2) (A) (criminal matters) or (C) (committee requests).

We know this is a delicate moment in our Nation's history. Our Constitution and its separation of powers has served us well. Respectfully, I do not believe the H.R. 4187 fully observes that important constitutional doctrine, and I would urge the committee not to pursue the changes it proposes.

Sincerely,

Douglas W. Kmiec

I think Jay Bybee (AAG) and Ed Whelan (Deputy AAG) in the Office of Legal Counsel at the Department of Justice may be useful. Another alternative is to have Tim Flanigan (as former head of OLC) speak on background on specific issues.

Mr. DEMINT (for himself, Mr. BAIRD, Mr. CRANE, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. MANZULLO, Ms. VELÁZQUEZ, Mr. TOOMEY, Mr. PASCRELL, Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky, and Ms. HART) introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means

A BILL

To amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow certain small businesses to defer payment of tax.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Business Retained Income During Growth and Expansion Act of 2001" or the "BRIDGE Act of 2001".

REV_00143734

SEC. 2. DEFERRED PAYMENT OF TAX BY CERTAIN SMALL BUSINESSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter B of chapter 62 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to extensions of time for payment of tax) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

REV_00143735

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'eligible small business' means, with respect to any taxable year, any person if—

"(A) such person meets the active business requirements of section 1202(e) throughout such taxable year,

"(B) the taxpayer has gross receipts of $10,000,000 or less for the taxable year,

"(C) the gross receipts of the taxpayer for such taxable year are at least 10 percent greater than the average annual gross receipts of the taxpayer (or any predecessor) for the 2 prior taxable years, and

"(D) the taxpayer uses an accrual method of accounting.

"(2) CERTAIN RULES TO APPLY.—Rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 448(c) shall apply for purposes of this subsection.

"(d) DATE FOR PAYMENT OF INSTALLMENTS; TIME FOR PAYMENT OF INTEREST.—

"(1) DATE FOR PAYMENT OF INSTALLMENTS.—

"(B) DUE DATE FOR FIRST INSTALLMENT.—The due date for the first installment for a taxable year shall be whichever of the following is the earliest:

"(i) The date selected by the taxpayer.

"(ii) The date which is 2 years after the date prescribed by section 6151(a) for payment of the tax for such taxable year.

"(C) INTEREST IN THE CASE OF CERTAIN DEFICIENCIES.—In the case of a deficiency to which subsection (e)(3) applies for a taxable year which is assessed after the due date for the first installment for such year, interest attributable to the period before such due date, and interest assigned under subparagraph (B) to any installment the date for payment of which has arrived on or before the date of the assessment of the deficiency, shall be paid upon notice and demand from the Secretary.

"(e) SPECIAL RULES.—

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL PERSONNEL IN [list WHO/EOP units]

FROM: ALBERTO R. GONZALES
COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

SUBJECT: SENATE GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS COMMITTEE REQUEST REGARDING ENRON

As you may know, the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs, Joseph Lieberman, has sent the White House a letter requesting certain information relating to Enron Corporation. The White House is cooperating with the Committee, and to the extent possible we intend to provide the Committee with appropriate information critical to its inquiry.

Accordingly, we ask that you complete the attached Questionnaire and return it to my office (West Wing, Second Floor) no later than May 17, 2002.

It is important that you read the Questionnaire carefully and make a good faith effort to answer each question to the best of your knowledge and recollection. If in answering any question it would help you to review notes, documents, or e-mail to which you have reasonable access, you are expected to do so. We are not asking you to provide copies of such materials to Counsel's Office at this time.

Doug Kmiec was head of OLC at the time of the Reagan order on Presidential Records. You will see that he argues that President Bush's order is constitutionally sound -- and makes more sense in terms of constitutional law and appropriate policy than the Reagan order he reviewed in 1988. This letter is a nice development.

In addition, Todd Gaziano of Heritage will testify at the hearing.

Re: H.R. 4187

Dear Congressman Horn

Thank you for inviting me to participate in the hearing on H.R. 4187, the Presidential Records Act Amendments of 2002.

I regret that a prior commitment to participate in a program out of state makes it impossible for me to attend your deliberations on the 24th of April, but I wanted to share a few thoughts by letter in the event they are helpful.

First, I want to commend you and the committee for seeking the proper balance between the prerogatives of the Presidency and public disclosure. History depends upon an accurate accounting of public decision, and history can only be well written if the relevant materials are available. Of course, our nation does not only live in the past, it has an obligation to the present, so there is a corresponding duty to ensure that the office of the Presidency can function both in these times of war, as well as in times of peace.

While I believe your proposal is well-intended, in my judgment, it strikes an incorrect balance. The Presidential Records Act of 1978 was, in itself, a dramatic step toward the opening of public documents. Prior to the act, presidents owned their papers outright. This was something well accepted by our founders. It was Justice Storey, after all, who opined that George Washington owned his presidential papers and could bequeath them to his estate or grant a copyright in them to others.

In the wake of Watergate, and its unfortunate and inexcusable abuse of public power, Congress reset that balance. In doing so, Congress was careful not to undermine the constitutional responsibilities of the presidency, both by allowing the restriction of access to executive documents for up to 12 years, and by explicitly providing that "nothing in the Act shall be construed to confirm, limit, or expand any constitutionally-based privilege which may be available to an incumbent or former president."

Without those carefully stated words, the 1978 Act would have been open to serious constitutional doubt. While President Nixon's particular privilege claim was not sustained, United States v. Nixon recognized the unmistakable constitutional origin of executive privilege claims and that the need "to protect military, diplomatic, or sensitive national security secrets" might even trump the need for presidential materials in a criminal trial. More generally, the Court specified that "there is a legitimate governmental interest in the confidentiality of communications between high Government officials, e. g., those who advise the President, and that '(h)uman experience teaches that those who expect public dissemination of their remarks may well temper candor with a concern for appearances and for their own interests to the detriment of the decisionmaking process.' 418 U.S., at 705. Indeed, the opinion noted that Government confidentiality has been a concern from the time of the Constitutional Convention in 1787, the meetings of which were conducted in private, 1 M. Farrand, The Records of the Federal Convention of 1787, pp. xi-xxv (1911), and the records of which were sealed for more than 30 years after the Convention. See 3 Stat. 475, 15th Cong., 1st Sess., Res. 8 (1818). See generally Charles Warren, The Making of the Constitution 134-139 (1937).

Subsequently the Court decided in Nixon v. Administrator of General Services, 433 U.S. 425 (1977), that executive privilege extends to both incumbent and former presidents. Unless the President can give his advisers some assurance of confidentiality, a President could not expect to receive the full and frank submissions of facts and opinions upon which effective discharge of his duties depends. Said the Court adopting the words of the Solicitor General; "The confidentiality necessary to this exchange cannot be measured by the few months or years between the submission of the information and the end of the President's tenure; the privilege is not for the benefit of the President as an individual, but for the benefit of the Republic. Therefore the privilege survives the individual President's tenure."

As Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legal Counsel to President Reagan, it was my privilege to review for form and legality, Executive Order 12667. That executive order implemented the 1978 Act by directing the Archivist to fully honor an incumbent President's assertion of privilege, but left to the Archivist's discretion, subject to court order, whether or not to honor a claim of a former president. It was not clear to me why the White House in 1989 preferred this differentiation of incumbent and former president privilege claims, as it certainly was not mandated by the 1978 Act or judicial precedent, but it could be argued that so long the Archivist would not disclose documents for a time sufficient to allow the former president to litigate the privilege, no constitutional problem would arise.

A more prudent course would be to treat the privilege claims of incumbent and former presidents as equivalent. Such equivalency better recognizes that the privilege is not a personal one, but one intended within the constitutional design to protect the Office of the Presidency, especially as it relates to state secrets, open law enforcement files, and the deliberative process of the President, which of course, extends to communications with the Vice-President, the cabinet, and other high ranking advisors. This more prudent course was adopted by President George W. Bush in Executive Order 13233 signed on November 1, 2001. Under the Bush executive order, a claim of privilege by either the incumbent or a former president preserves the confidentiality of the material unless the parties seeking disclosure receive a final court order confirming some "demonstrated need" for the document's release.

While it is possible to construe the Bush executive order as more restrictive, in fact, it provides an incumbent concession that "absent compelling circumstances, the incumbent President will concur in the privilege decision of the former President." In essence, the Bush order can be reasonably read as creating a presumption of disclosure of former presidential documents, unless there is compelling reason – from the vantage point of the incumbent and the present exigencies of the Office – to withhold materials. This presumption of disclosure in the Bush order was not present in that signed by President Reagan. Perhaps, it is in exchange for this deference to public release, that when a former president does assert a privilege under the Bush order, "the incumbent President will support that privilege claim in any forum in which the privilege claim is challenged." This is constitutionally sensible, equitable, and responsive to the needs of a presidency that at the moment faces unparalleled challenges to maintaining the safety and security of the Nation.

Regrettably, I do not find the same sense of constitutional prudence in H.R. 4187. First, it would seem that rather than striving for balance, the proposed amendment is designed to weaken the Presidential office without deference to the constitutional importance of maintaining the integrity of privileged material. For example, the proposal resurrects the unwarranted differentiation of privilege claims asserted by the former or incumbent president. In this regard, a former president is once again put in the awkward position of suing his successor, unless his successor incumbent concurs in the nonrelease. Even more troubling, the assertion of privilege claims by either an incumbent or former president is made subject to predicate requirements that require the identification of the specific record, the specific grounds of the claim, and the circulation of this information to members of Congress, the person seeking the record, and the general public. While it might be theoretically possible to write such claims obliquely without disclosing privileged material, in some cases, especially as they relate to military and law enforcement matters, that would be impossible. It would also appear that some of the time periods for review of material have been narrowed from the 1978 Act, and given the differential volume of some disclosure claims, this in itself would likely prove constitutionally troublesome. Finally, the above changes aggravate some of the lingering constitutional doubts related to the 1978 Act – specifically, the fact that the proposed amendment effectively denies the validity of a constitutionally based privilege, whether made by an incumbent or former president, when the information is sought pursuant to 44 U.S.C. 2205(2) (A) (criminal matters) or (C) (committee requests).

We know this is a delicate moment in our Nation's history. Our Constitution and its separation of powers has served us well. Respectfully, I do not believe the H.R. 4187 fully observes that important constitutional doctrine, and I would urge the committee not to pursue the changes it proposes.

Sincerely,

Douglas W. Kmiec

What I know:

He's doing an event/speech on May 3 in Room 450 that will be a Law Day event. (For what it is worth, the Montgomery County Law Day event is May 3, so we have some cover. I am sure there are others that do not occur on May 1 itself.) And to reference Law Day, he can just begin by noting that "This week, we have celebrated ___." But the speech will largely be about judges, as I understand it. John McConnell et al are apparently in charge of the drafting, as I understand it.

Also, he is having Senate Judiciary Committee Republicans to White House on May 9. There will be open press at top and he will make remarks on the 1-year anniversary.

I need the latest info on Law Day plans. I've been working on the Proclamation with DOJ but there is apparently confusion over scheduling and what, if anything, we want DOJ or the AG to do. May 1 is Law Day by statute, so if POTUS does an event May 3, it can't technically be a Law Day event. Please fill me in on where things are with this. There are a couple folks in OLP who really need guidance.

Somehow I'm not surprised that the printer needs repairs. What I'm wondering here is whether we have over 100 boxes of responsive material, or whether a computer "phenomenon" did something like translate certain attachments into a bunch of incomprehensible code that prints one character per page. Given the specificity of the search and the brief time period, I am surprised by this volume. Any idea?

Adam;

It is very difficult to give an estimate that has any accuracy to it because the quantity of print depends on the formatting of each record and that is impossible to predict.

We currently have 95 boxes of paper in the EOPDC and the printing is probably 75% complete.

The printing is currently stopped because the printer is down for repairs.

I would like to start the delivery process

STATEMENT OF ROY A. BERNARDI

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR COMMUNITY PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

April 24, 2002

REV_00143800

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on the Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. Madame Chairwoman, the efforts you and others have made to bring the need for affordable housing to the attention of Congress through legislation such as HR 3995 are very much appreciated. I would like to thank you for your demonstrated leadership, resolute voice, and compassion for the less fortunate among us. Your contributions will be sorely missed when your career in Congress draws to a close.

HR 3995 proposes some significant changes to many programs in the Office of Community Planning and Development, and to the HOME Investments Partnerships program in particular. I will address those related to HOME first.

HOME Investment Partnerships Program

The HOME Program has a demonstrated record of success in developing "deep-targeted" affordable housing with over 40 percent of all HOME-assisted rental units produced serving extremely low-income families. We believe that reforms to the HOME Program should build on the notable success the program has already achieved. We are concerned that the proposed Production and Preservation Program, as currently structured, and the other significant changes proposed for the HOME Program itself, particularly in regard to rent level determinations, would not help to achieve the worthy objectives of HR 3995, that of providing affordable housing for extremely low-income families. We believe that some of the bill's provisions would have unintended consequences.

The creation of a new Production and Preservation Program within HOME that has different requirements in such areas as rent determination, tenant contribution to rent, match, income targeting, commitment of funds, and even in the definition of who is low- or very low-income, could create significant compatibility issues with the basic HOME program and with other Federal programs, resulting in serious implementation problems. Unless these conflicting requirements are reconciled, the implementation problems will remain and projects will be delayed or found infeasible if the new program is made part of HOME or potentially if it is developed as a separate, stand-alone program.

We would urge the Committee to reconsider its proposed changes to the way in which HOME Program rents are determined. The effort made in HR 3995 to remedy lagging housing development "in certain rural counties" is understandable. However, these changes - abandoning the Fair Market Rent (FMR) standard and adopting the greater of the State or area median income as a floor for determining rents – could actually increase rents generally across the country while not ensuring that those who are the targeted beneficiaries of the legislation, extremely low- and very low-income families, will be able to afford those higher rents. For example:

- 86% of the population of metro areas and 100% of all non-metropolitan areas will have rent increases;
- Average increase in rents will be 32% (or $200) for the country as a whole;

- 63% of the rent increases will be more than 20%;
- 37% of the rent increases will be more than 40%;
- The largest rent increases will be in areas with the least housing affordability needs if the current rent-to-income ratio is used as the measurement indicator;

Some specific local examples of rent increases are contained in the following table:

Metro Area/County	2-Bedrm FY2002 FMR	Current High HOME Rent (Monthly)	Proposed High HOME Rent (Monthly)	Monthly Rent Increase
Modoc County, CA	503	503	867	364
Gilpin County, CO	678	678	1,173	495
Stamford-Norwalk, CT	1,384	1,202	1,667	465
Cedar Rapids, IA	520	520	959	439
Adams County, IL	395	395	951	556
Decatur, IL	475	475	951	476
Duluth-Superior, MN-WI	487	487	921	434
Utica-Rome, NY	495	495	882	387
Kendall County, TX	473	473	911	438
Roanoke, VA	500	500	913	413
Washington, DC-MD-VA	943	943	1,316	373

At the other end of the spectrum, high HOME rents would fall in areas with exceptionally high rent-to-income ratios where FMRs are currently used to adjust the income limits used to calculate rents. For example, San Francisco's current high HOME rent of $1,467 would decrease by $230 under the proposed rent rules, making an already difficult environment even less attractive to developers in San Francisco.

Finally, abandoning the FMR standard would make it more difficult to use housing vouchers in HOME-assisted projects and would place many HOME units out of reach of voucher holders. At the same time, the HOME program could become less attractive to developers in areas with the most affordability problems (i.e., high rent to income ratio areas), and more attractive in areas with the least affordability problems (i.e., low rent to income ratio areas) and high vacancy rates. For the U.S. as a whole:

- Approximately 39 percent of the rental stock is located in markets where the FMR currently sets the maximum limit for HOME rents. Prevailing rents are quite low relative to income in these areas and the rental vacancy rate is 12 percent;
- In markets where rents are high relative to incomes and the FMR does not now act as a cap on HOME rents, the vacancy rate is 5 percent.

HUD is eager to work with this Committee to build on its efforts and those of the Millennial Housing Commission whose report is due out in May, to expand affordable housing opportunities. We are also confident that solutions to identified impediments to affordable housing development in certain rural counties can be addressed with specific adjustments to the existing HOME Program rent structure.

Many changes have already been made over the ten years that the HOME Program has been in operation in an effort to streamline the program and improve its effectiveness. The production results and the ongoing feedback we receive from housing providers would indicate that this effort has been largely successful. Indeed, one of the hallmarks of this program and an important reason for its success has been the close and continuing communication between the administrators at HUD and recipients of HOME funds and their representatives and associations. We are receptive to further improvements to the program.

Homeless Assistance Programs

Madame Chairwoman, I'd now like to address the provisions of the bill dealing with HUD's McKinney-Vento Act homeless assistance programs. On an overall basis, the homeless assistance provisions of the bill are carefully crafted and correctly recognize both the important elements of current law that should be retained and the provisions that need modification.

Specifically, we support the reauthorization provisions for the Supportive Housing, Shelter Plus Care, Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation SRO and the Emergency Shelter Grants programs. The Department will be proposing a consolidation of these programs into one that is needs-based and performance-driven. This consolidation will ensure community-level planning and decision-making. And, it will retain the fundamental components of our Continuum of Care strategy to address homelessness. We further support the provisions of the bill reauthorizing the Interagency Council on the Homeless and the Emergency Food and Shelter Program, currently housed at FEMA but proposed for transfer to HUD in the President's budget request.

The Department fully supports Section 604 of the bill that continues the current requirement that at least 30 percent of appropriated funds be targeted for permanent housing projects. Similarly, we support the removal of the unrealistic caps on the use of Supportive Housing Program funding for acquisition, rehabilitation and new construction. These caps have increasingly worked to restrain our grantees' ability to generate new and rehabilitated permanent housing units for homeless individuals and families.

The Department notes bill language proposing the transfer of the costs of renewing expiring Shelter Plus Care projects and projects funded under the Permanent Housing component of the Supportive Housing Program to the Housing Certificate Fund (HCF). The Department looked at these renewals in the 2003 budget process and determined that it is preferable to address them as part of consolidated homeless funding.

Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS

HUD supports Section 904 of the Bill that would reauthorize the Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS (HOPWA) program. HOPWA is the only Federal program solely dedicated to providing housing assistance to persons with HIV/AIDS and their families. Housing provided under this program provides a basis for helping people at the lowest income levels access appropriate care and acts as a base to help maintain difficult therapies and medical regimens.

Community Development Block Grant

I would like to make several other comments on provisions of HR 3995 that would affect HUD's basic Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program.

Section 902 on Housing Counseling programs would require the Secretary to designate a single office within the Department to "establish, coordinate, and administrate all requirements, standards, and performance measures under programs and laws administered by the Department that relate to housing counseling, homeownership, counseling . . ." This section also specifies that the CDBG eligible activity under section 105(a)(20) of the HCD Act of 1974 be covered by this provision. Section 105(a)(20) of the HCD Act authorizes grantees to use CDBG funds to carry out housing services, such as housing counseling. Housing counseling is an important component of the Department's rental housing and homeownership programs. However, we would caution against adopting a "one size fits all" approach that would take away the local discretion of program design and implementation from CDBG grantees, which is the cornerstone of the CDBG program. Recently, FHA revised the standards and performance measures related to the 1400 HUD-approved housing counseling agencies participating in this program. We see no need for another office within the Department to repeat this process. As you know, the Administration has requested $35 million for a new categorical counseling program, nearly doubling the current level of funding and removing the program from the HOME block grant. We urge you to support that proposal, and we believe it will be easier and quicker to provide the funds to counseling agencies if we can operate the new program on the basis of the standards we have recently established.

Section 905 concerns the funding eligibility for secular activities carried out by religious organizations. HUD supports the involvement of faith-based organizations in our programs, consistent with Constitutional principles of Church and State.

Section 906 would add a new eligibility category to the CDBG program to authorize the construction of tornado or storm-safe shelters in manufactured housing parks. This addition would expand this otherwise eligible public facility to serve residents of private manufactured housing parks and HUD supports it. However, subparagraph (b) of Section 906 would authorize a set-aside from the CDBG program for fiscal year 2002 for this purpose. The Department does not support further set-asides within the CDBG appropriation.

HUD supports Section 907 of the bill that would amend Section 105(a)(13) of the HCD Act to allow the use of CDBG funds to administer renewal communities. HUD believes that such support of the Renewal Communities program will foster needed job creation and revitalization in distressed communities.

Self-Help Homeownership Opportunities Program

HUD supports the reauthorization of the Self-Help Homeownership Opportunities Program (SHOP), which has been instrumental in helping many low-income families become homeowners. The President's request to triple funding to $65 million for SHOP in FY 2003 reflects this program's popularity and success.

Thank you again for this opportunity, and I would be happy to answer any questions that you may have.

STATEMENT OF MICHAEL LIU

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00143806

I am Michael Liu, Assistant Secretary for Public and Indian Housing at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. In that position I have responsibility for administration of the public housing, voucher and Native American housing programs. Accordingly, I will limit my testimony to Titles IV, V and VI of the bill, which concern those programs.

First, Congresswoman Roukema, thank you and your cosponsors for developing and introducing the Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. The bill contains many proposals that will allow us to do our jobs better, of providing the most effective low-income housing assistance possible with the funds available. The reauthorizations for two of our critical programs, HOPE VI and Native American Block Grants, are critical measures in themselves. The bill contains several measures to achieve our common goal of assuring that the voucher funds Congress appropriates can be fully used. The bill also contains the Administration's Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative, which holds great promise as a means of improving the Nation's public housing communities.

Title IV, Section 8 Rental Housing Assistance Program

Section 401 of the bill proposes a new thrifty production voucher program. This program is patterned after the current project-based voucher program, but assumes that the capital for production will be found from other programs or sources and provides for a reduced subsidy designed to cover only operating costs.

HUD generally supports additional tools that may help public housing authorities (PHAs) meet their communities' housing needs, and in that context will work with the Committee to develop a means of offering vouchers that can be combined easily with capital subsidies. The current proposal seems rather complex and differs from the project-based voucher program in ways that may not be necessary, such as waiting list administration, development location requirements and several others. I look forward to further discussions on this matter.

The bill contains several initiatives designed directly or indirectly to increase the successful use of appropriated voucher program funds, including an increase in the amount families can expend as their share of rent when initially leasing any unit (section 402), authorization for PHAs to use up to five percent of program monthly assistance payment funds (as opposed to administrative fees) for efforts to help families obtain and remain in suitable housing (section 403) and an authorization to provide increased administrative fees for high-performing PHAs in the voucher program (section 405). These proposals would augment steps HUD and Congress already have taken or are taking to accomplish this goal, including increased flexibility for PHAs to set payment standards; increased fair market rents to the 50th percentile of rentals for units in satisfactory condition some areas; initiation of the Section 8 Management Assessment Program (SEMAP), a management report card with consequences; training of PHA staff; award of new incremental vouchers only to PHAs with high usage of current resources; and reallocation of vouchers from PHAs that have not been able to use them to PHAs that need and can use them.

HUD supports the direction of these new proposals, but has suggestions. HUD supports the increase in allowable family rent to forty percent of gross income, but believes PHAs also need flexibility to address compelling situations—for example, where a family already in the program would like to move to a significantly less expensive unit, but cannot do so because the family still would be paying more than the limit.

HUD would allow the use of some program funds to help increase voucher utilization for PHAs that already are using their administrative fees solely for the Section 8 program, but believes that the authorization should be substantially narrower to address competing concerns regarding diversion of program funds. With respect to administrative fees, HUD recommends that it be given broader authority not just to provide a bonus for high performers, but also to restructure the fees to promote performance in general and the accomplishment of specific program priorities, such as families' movement to self-sufficiency and homeownership.

The bill contains several provisions regarding enhanced vouchers. HUD supports clarification of the obligation of owners to take enhanced vouchers in projects where tenants are eligible for them (section 406). With respect to the same section's protections for overhoused families, HUD recommends that such families be treated in the same manner as overhoused families are treated now in the voucher program (basically, the enhanced voucher families could choose to stay in the oversized unit, but would be subsidized at the level they would receive if they were in a unit of appropriate size at the property).

The bill also contains a provision to provide for higher contract rents upon the renewal of moderate rehabilitation contracts (section 408). HUD agrees that the current-law restriction of such rents to the lower of comparable rents, current rents plus an operating cost adjustment or fair market rents is unnecessarily restrictive. The bill's proposed solution, however, will pose administrative challenges for PHAs not accustomed to evaluating budget-based rents and may go further than is needed to preserve assisted units.

You asked me to discuss the future impact of Section 8 contract renewals on the HUD budget. Renewals for both tenant-based and project-based Section 8 rose from $14.3 billion in fiscal 2001 to a requested $16.9 billion for fiscal 2003, and are projected to increase to over $20 billion in several more years. This is a result of the program serving more families, some program changes that have increased per-unit costs, such as increases in fair market rents, and conversion over time of all contracts to one-year contracts, so that all contracts must have new budget authority each year.

Title V, Public Housing

I am excited that Title V contains the Administration's Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative (section 505), because that initiative can provide a new and effective means of improving public housing. Recent HUD studies indicate that the backlog of public housing capital needs is in the $20 billion range and that new needs accrue at about two billion dollars annually. Strides have been made in recent years in public housing communities, but appropriations for the Capital Fund at two to three billion dollars annually will allow only slow progress. The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative provides a means of addressing this problem sooner with the dollars available.

The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative allows PHAs that choose to participate to trade their public housing subsidies for project-based vouchers on a property-by-property basis. PHAs then could borrow money for capital improvements on the same individual property basis now used for Section 8 developments and multifamily housing generally. In addition to leveraging private capital, this action is likely to lead to more accountable property and financial management because management must be done at the individual property level. Tenants generally would be protected in the same manner as in public housing. PHAs could use the project-based vouchers on current sites, or on replacement sites where appropriate.

The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative can be a powerful tool for the prompt rehabilitation of housing that otherwise would languish for years. For example, a development's capital needs of four million dollars that otherwise would be impossible to address from available Capital Fund moneys can be addressed with debt service payments on a seven percent, thirty-year loan of about $335,000 per year. PHAs could undertake individual transactions as long as the monthly expenses for operations, debt service and a capital replacement reserve did not exceed the lower of market rents or the applicable Section 8 payment standard. If the approvable rent levels were too low to finance all the necessary capital work—for example, if the PHA only could raise $20,000 per unit at approvable rent levels but the development needed $30,000 per unit in capital work—the PHA could choose to supplement the project-based vouchers with an up-front contribution from the Capital Fund or other sources.

The bill contains a proposal to suspend the PHA Plan requirement for three years for the smallest PHAs up to 100 units (section 504). Current law requires annual PHA Plans with eighteen listed elements, but also allows HUD to streamline PHA Plans for small, high-performing and Section 8-only PHAs. The extent to which the PHA Plan requirement has resulted in useful strategic planning has varied greatly from locality to locality. In many localities, the Resident Advisory Board participation requirement has resulted in better access for public housing residents and Section 8 families to make their views known to PHA decision-makers.

The usefulness of the PHA Plan relative to the PHAs' ability to carry it out with limited staff resources, however, appears to drop dramatically for small PHAs. HUD has provided some streamling of PHA Plan requirements for these PHAs, but I believe we need to go further and HUD is developing a regulation that will accomplish this. The bill's proposal is certainly along these lines, although we may be able to accomplish the necessary streamlining through regulation without disturbing the current resident and public process to the same extent. I want to note Congressman Bereuter's leadership on this issue and thank him for that leadership.

While HUD has differentiated between small and larger PHAs in PHA Plan processing, it has not done this to enough of an extent in its other programs. Small PHAs with 250 or fewer units constitute 75 percent of all PHAs, but operate only fifteen percent of the units. From a risk management standpoint, it is unnecessary to impose the same regulatory burdens on these PHAs as on larger ones. The new regulation I have mentioned will recognize that in several program areas.

The bill would require HUD to develop and test a third-party system for public housing performance evaluation, through an outside contractor (section 503). This year, HUD has implemented a binding public housing management assessment that contains an independent inspection of physical conditions. However, experience with the Public Housing Assessment System (PHAS) during its extended advisory period raised so many questions regarding the adequacy of its physical inspection and finance components that HUD substantially simplified and in some respects had to pare back these components prior to implementation. HUD is committed to working with public housing groups toward how best to revise the system. It may be that a third-party system could accomplish the same tasks better and provide a broader assessment that would be more readily recognized and accepted as appropriate by all parties concerned. The work being done by others such as public housing industry groups and private companies to develop such systems is promising, and HUD may be able to take account of this work and the views of resident representatives and others to develop an improved and possibly third-party system expeditiously.

Section 501 of the bill would allow HUD to waive the requirement that PHAs have a resident on the board of commissioners in particular States, where reasonable efforts are being made to take the necessary legislative or regulatory action so that this can occur. Congress has recognized problems in the implementation of the resident on the board requirement in several States, has exempted housing authorities in three States from the requirement for fiscal 2002 and has required HUD to provide a report by May 30, 2002 regarding the impediments to its implementation and related matters. Thus, further legislative action seems appropriate. The proposed legislation, however, would allow for permanent waivers and would not result in having residents on boards of commissioners promptly in the affected States. A better solution may be to provide for appointment by the chief executive officer of the PHA's jurisdiction of an additional board member to fulfill the resident on the board requirement, for a temporary period such as three years. This would give the noncompliant States more time to complete any necessary actions so that residents could be appointed to PHA boards as federal law requires, but the relief would be temporary and promptly would result in residents serving on boards of commissioners.

The bill provides for a two-year reauthorization of HOPE VI and for measures to ensure that a broader group of communities in terms of size and location have a realistic possibility of receiving a HOPE VI award. HUD supports both reauthorization and the general effort to promote broad program participation. More discussion of concepts in regard to reauthorization of HOPE VI will be constructive. A report on HOPE VI lessons learned is due to Congress on June 15, 2002.

Title VII, Native American Housing

Title VII reauthorizes both the Native American Block Grant Program and its related loan guarantee program. HUD believes that these programs continue to hold much promise and supports the reauthorization of both programs.

I look forward to working closely with the Committee as you continue to develop this important legislation for the improvement of the voucher, public housing and Native American housing programs. Please call on me and my staff for any assistance we can provide.

STATEMENT OF JOHN C. WEICHER

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR HOUSING/FHA COMMISSIONER

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00143812

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on behalf of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Office of Housing-Federal Housing Administration (FHA), concerning the "Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002". The bill covers a very wide range of programs and activities across the Department, including many different programs within the Office of Housing. We have carefully reviewed each provision contained in the bill, and I am grateful for this opportunity to provide you with our thoughts on the sections of this important piece of legislation. Because you have also addressed a number of specific questions about FHA programs in your letter of invitation, I will combine my answers to those questions with comments on the corresponding sections of the bill. I have organized my comments by program area.

FHA Single-Family Insurance Programs

To begin with FHA's basic Section 203(b) home mortgage insurance program and the Mutual Mortgage Insurance (MMI) Fund: as you know, the President and the Secretary have made promoting homeownership, especially for minority households, a cornerstone of domestic policy. We are very proud of FHA's success in promoting homeownership. About 80 percent of our home purchase mortgages serve first-time homebuyers and about 35 percent serve minority households. The national homeownership rate, and the minority homeownership rate, both set new records last year.

The MMI Fund was determined to have an economic value of $18.5 billion at the end of FY2001, with a capital ratio of 3.75%. FHA's volume of business this year is running substantially in excess of expectations. Indeed, through the first six months of the year we have insured over $81 billion of single-family mortgages. We are assessing the need to seek an increase in our current commitment limitation of $160 billion for the MMI Fund for the current fiscal year. Having been personally involved in developing the legislation that put FHA on an actuarially sound basis some 12 years ago – as was Chairwoman Roukema and ranking member Frank - I am very pleased to report this information to you.

Of course, the MMI Fund net worth, which estimates future receipts, liabilities, and cash on hand, has attracted a number of proposals to spend the reserves, for example to divert funds into a new "National Housing Trust Fund" for purposes well beyond the homeownership goals of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund. We think these proposals are ill-advised, and they misconstrue the nature of the MMI Fund.

The creation of the MMI capital reserve was a fundamental goal of the Cranston - Gonzales National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 which was intended to forestall any taxpayer bailout of the FHA, as had just been required for the savings and loan industry. While all Federal credit programs are required to budget for anticipated losses, under the Credit Reform Act of 1990, the MMI Fund was specifically required to generate additional revenue to be held as a special reserve against potential losses. The Cranston-Gonzales legislation created a kind of "lock-box" for funds that would be available to meet any contingency, so that general revenues in the Treasury would never be needed to meet FHA obligations. To generate the funds needed for this capital reserve, FHA suspended the payment of distributive shares to borrowers and raised insurance premiums substantially.

Since 1990, FHA has gradually built up its reserves year by year. This annual surplus has been counted in the overall Federal budget as an offsetting receipt, and has helped reduce the deficit. Because this revenue was previously counted as a receipt, any legislation that proposes to expend it will be counted as new spending, just as if funds were being appropriated directly out of the Treasury. There is no budgetary magic to raiding this "lock box"; instead there is a budgetary outlay. Moreover, using the MMI Fund reserves will vitiate FHA's ability to meet the basic goal of the Cranston-Gonzales Act of making the MMI Fund actuarially sound.

FHA was able to reduce single-family premiums substantially last year, and make homeownership more affordable for more families, in line with our fundamental public policy purpose. We have also been looking at the possibility of reinstituting the payment of distributive shares. However, it is clear that any such policy will be procedurally complex, and we are not proposing it at this time.

The Housing Affordability for Americans Act of 2002 contains several provisions that would improve FHA's ability to operate our core single-family home mortgage insurance programs. Section 221 would make permanent a pilot designed to streamline and simplify the FHA downpayment program. Secretary Martinez supported this proposal during his testimony before the House Appropriations Subcommittee last month. This downpayment simplification calculation has proven to be a successful program modification. The procedure reduces the number of steps involved in the calculation of the FHA single-family mortgage amounts, and thereby has eliminated the confusion experienced by many buyers, brokers, and lenders. Further, this existing statutory authority has reduced the costs associated with closing an FHA insured mortgage. Ultimately, the simplification has increased homeownership opportunities for low- and moderate-income families.

Similarly, Section 227 should facilitate the Department's ability to effectuate another legislative priority. During the FY2002 budget process, the Department requested and received authority to insure hybrid Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARMs). Our work to implement that authority is continuing. The Department's position is that FHA's hybrid ARM should approximate the conventional hybrid ARM and its benefits as closely as possible subject to preserving sound underwriting policies and protections for FHA borrowers and the MMI Fund. Section 227 supports that end by allowing the Department greater flexibility in the design of regulations that will govern the initial rate adjustment at the end of the fixed rate period. The Department appreciates the efforts by Rep. Bob Ney and other Members of this Committee in supporting the permanent extension of this provision.

Sections 229-231 are consistent with recent Department actions to strengthen our Section 203(k) rehabilitation mortgage insurance program and our nonprofit partnerships. In 1996, the Office of Housing issued Mortgagee Letter 96-59, placing a moratorium on investor participation in the 203(k) program. Investors have not been allowed to participate in the program since the issuance of this Mortgagee Letter. The moratorium still stands. We have no plans to modify the Letter and have no objection to Section 229.

Similarly, Section 230 regarding rehabilitation loan advances is also consistent with Departmental action. FHA Mortgagee Letter 00-25 states, "mortgagees are fully responsible for authorizing draw inspections, managing the rehabilitation escrow account, and approving the associated draws for the account." The Letter also requires consultants to be chosen from the FHA 203(k) Consultant Roster and permits consultants to perform the inspections on the mortgagee's behalf. The Department has a number of technical questions regarding this provision and looks forward to working with the Committee to ensure that mortgagees are held appropriately responsible.

Section 231 would require nonprofits to be approved 501(c)(3) organizations and certify annually to the Department its understanding of HUD guidelines. In January 2002, the Office of Housing issued Mortgagee Letter 02-01, establishing new requirements for nonprofits seeking FHA-approval. Nonprofits must now have, among other requirements, two years 501(c)(3) IRS tax-exempt status and a minimum of two consecutive years – within the last 5 years – of housing development experience. Approved nonprofits have until September 30, 2002 to demonstrate their compliance with the new requirements. The Office of Housing supports Section 231 to strengthen its existing guidance. It will help us prevent a recurrence of the 1998-1999 Section 203(k) fraud problem in New York City, where a number of nonprofits purchased small multi-unit buildings in Harlem and Brooklyn intending to have them rehabilitated for owner-occupancy. The knowledgeable and experienced Commissioner of New York City's Department of Housing Preservation and Development said that she had never heard of 25 of the nonprofits that bought these homes; she had only heard of two. This fraud will cost the taxpayers some $268 million, and will cost the citizens of New York City another $125 million.

Sections 222-224 contain proposals to provide special opportunities for teachers and public safety officers. Section 223 would give the Secretary authority to discount HUD-owned, single-family properties by 50% to qualified teachers and public safety officers. The Department certainly does not object to such a program; indeed, the Secretary already has this authority and has exercised it. The Department's Officer/Teacher Next Door Program currently allows teachers and police officers to purchase homes at a 50% discount in designated revitalization areas, subject to a three-year owner occupancy requirement. During a Fiscal Year 2001 audit of the program, the Office of the Inspector General uncovered a significant number of violations of the program rules by officer participants. In May 2001, the Department temporarily suspended sales under the program and instituted enhanced management controls. A recent IG audit of sales closed after the program resumed in August 2001 did not identify any new program violations. The Department is currently working on a proposed rule to include these program controls.

Sections 222 and 224 both aim to reduce downpayment requirements for public safety officers, while Section 222 also includes teachers among those who will benefit. In regard to both provisions, it is important to note that the Office of Housing has recently made significant changes to its programs to reduce downpayment costs substantially for all buyers of FHA insured properties. These changes include the reduction of insurance premium rates by 33 percent, along with the Downpayment Simplification previously mentioned. One observation the Department would make with regard to these provisions is that a number of other occupational groups have expressed a similar interest in reduced downpayments.

In addition, it may be more appropriate to pursue these initiatives within the American Dream Downpayment Fund, as proposed by the President and funded by Congress last year. The American Dream Downpayment Fund will reduce the barrier that downpayments frequently pose to homeownership, for all low- and moderate-income families. On behalf of the Administration, I want to thank Rep. Mike Rogers and other Members of Congress for introducing H.R. 4446 to authorize this program.

I would also mention that the Department's Office of Policy Development and Research is in the process of studying the impact of this type of program, as required by Congress. We believe that it would be prudent to wait until the results of this study are available before making any commitment to such an initiative.

Section 228, which would establish a uniform national loan limit for Home Equity Conversion Mortgages (HECMs), also concerns an issue that is currently part of an internal analysis by the Office of Policy Development and Research. As mandated by the American Homeownership and Economic Opportunity Act of 2000, the Department is conducting an actuarial analysis on the impact of this provision. We will provide the Subcommittee with comments and recommendations when this study has been finalized.

FHA Single-Family REO

The bill also contains several provisions concerning FHA's single-family inventory of foreclosed homes, and the Committee has asked about our REO activities. Since the introduction of the Management and Marketing contracts in March of 1999, the Department has greatly improved its REO disposition. As of March 2002, the inventory of HUD-owned homes is at its lowest level since 1996 - 28,270, compared to a March 1999 inventory of 41,747. Moreover, the inventory has been stable during the recession, instead of rising as has been typical in the past. Currently, properties remain in inventory an average of 183 days, compared to 221 days in March 1999, and losses per claim have been reduced from 39 cents to 29 cents on the dollar. The loss rate is at its lowest point in at least 20 years.

FHA sold 66,415 single-family homes during FY 2001. About 60 percent of these sales were to owner-occupants, helping serve FHA's basic purpose of promoting homeownership. Another 30 percent are sales to investors, and the remainder – slightly less than 10 percent - goes to local governments and nonprofit organizations.

FHA currently offers discounts to HUD-approved nonprofit organizations on the purchase of REO. Properties newly acquired by HUD are initially offered to nonprofit organizations on a limited competitive basis, which excludes investors and owner occupants, for up to 10 business days. FHA offers properties to nonprofits for an additional five days of limited competition that does include owner occupants but excludes investors. After these periods, FHA opens bids on properties to the general public, but nonprofit groups may bid and still receive sales discounts. These discounts are factored into a sale after the highest bids are calculated.

HUD properties are appraised and initially listed for sale on the Internet and through multiple listing services at the "as-is" value established by the appraiser. Properties sold to a nonprofit are discounted by 10%, unless the property is located in a FHA-designated "revitalization area".

FHA has two primary initiatives underway associated with its property disposition program. We have begun a major review of our Asset Control Area (ACA) program, following a report of program deficiencies by the HUD Office of Inspector General in a recent audit. We are planning to build stronger controls into the ACA program. During that review, which will take 4-6 months, we will let current ACA agreements expire. Our ACA partners can, however, continue to rehabilitate and sell the properties they have already acquired from HUD, and we believe that most if not all ACA partners have an inventory of properties that will not be exhausted during the review. This program, with proper controls in place, can provide an effective role for nonprofit groups, and local governments, in HUD's property disposition.

A second initiative is HUD's Accelerated Claims Demonstration Program. This program, announced in a Federal Register Notice on February 5th, utilizes current statutory authority for HUD to buy seriously defaulted loans that cannot be addressed through FHA's loss mitigation program, and sell these loans to the private sector for disposition. This program is expected to begin in the fourth quarter of this fiscal year. Considering both of these initiatives, it does not appear that additional statutory authority related to property disposition is required at this time.

Partly for these reasons, we see no need for Section 225 of this bill, which would require HUD to use the Department of Agriculture's Rural Housing Services Center as an additional resource for servicing single-family, HUD-held mortgages. We believe that this requirement is unnecessary and indeed would be counterproductive. Presently, HUD's National Servicing Center (NSC) in Oklahoma services four types of secretary-held loans, each with unique characteristics and servicing requirements. In particular, NSC services 963 reverse equity (HECM) loans. For this loan type, the Department makes monthly payments to the borrowers rather than receiving income from them. The daily payment process is complex and time sensitive. Additionally, NSC services second mortgages generated through loss mitigation advances, and discounted sales to officers and teachers in HUD's Officer Next Door/Teacher Next Door programs. Because these mortgages carry no interest and require no monthly payments, servicing activity is generally limited to processing subordinations and payoffs. All of these mortgage types are unique to HUD. The Rural Housing Service has no similar programs and no experience in servicing such loans. NSC is doing an excellent job managing their unique mortgage servicing requirements. It is unclear that there is a benefit or need to outsource the servicing of these loans.

FHA Multifamily Insurance Programs

As the members of this Subcommittee know, FHA's basic multifamily insurance program is Section 221(d)(4). This program has required a credit subsidy since Credit Reform was enacted in 1990. Three times in the last eight years, the program was closed down because the available credit subsidy was exhausted. To prevent further closures and place the program on a break-even basis, the Department raised the premium from 50 basis points to 80 basis points for FY 2002. Many in the industry, and some Members of Congress, were concerned that the program would be hamstrung by this increase. That has not happened. In the first six months of the fiscal year, FHA has insured almost $1.5 billion worth of Section 221(d)(4) projects, compared to less than $1.1 billion during the same period a year ago. Moreover, with the 25 percent increase in mortgage limits that was proposed by the Secretary and enacted by Congress, we are seeing applications from high-cost metropolitan area that have not participated in the program in years – the Twin Cities, Philadelphia, Newark, Baltimore, here in Washington, and Austin.

In addition, we have conducted the first systematic re-analysis of the premium and credit subsidy since Credit Reform was enacted. We have concluded that Section 221(d)(4) can be operated on a break-even basis at a much lower premium – 57 basis points. The President's Budget contains an announcement of this premium reduction, effective in October, at the beginning of FY 2003. We are also reducing either the premium or the credit subsidy for nearly every other multifamily program.

This summary of FHA's multifamily mortgage insurance programs provides background for your consideration of Sections 201 and 202 in the legislation. They address the question of who should be served by the programs. FHA generally serves moderate-income renters. Most of the projects that FHA insures are affordable to families in the lower half of the income distribution, and almost half are in underserved areas. These are important markets; these families and these communities need FHA.

Section 201 proposes to index the FHA multifamily mortgage limits. As members of this Subcommittee certainly know, Congress approved indexing the mortgage limits in the Section 203(b) single-family mortgage insurance program several years ago. This provision has enabled FHA to keep pace with inflation and changing economic conditions as it serves young, first-time homebuyers. Indexing the multifamily limits should likewise prove to be more responsive to market conditions and to the needs of families seeking moderately priced rental housing. Clearly, annual adjustments provide a better way to compensate for increased costs than by providing periodic dollar increases. When Congress raised the limits last year by 25 percent, at the request of Secretary Martinez, this was the first increase since 1992, and represented a delayed catch-up for the inflation that occurred between 1992 and 2001; during those years, FHA was progressively less able to serve moderate-income renters.

Section 202 proposes to increase the maximum mortgage limits in areas with very high housing costs by 30 percent above the amounts allowed under current law. It also proposes to increase the amount by which the Secretary, on a case-by-case basis, may increase the maximum mortgage amount. The Department would prefer to analyze the data resulting from our experience with the new limits that Congress enacted last year and the future effects of the indexing contained in Section 201 before proceeding with any additional high housing cost authority beyond that which already exists.

FHA Insurance for Nursing Homes and Hospitals

The Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002 contains several provisions relating to FHA's insurance programs for nursing homes and hospitals. Section 206 seeks to provide a more flexible procedure with respect to the Certificate of Need (CON) for hospitals, which is somewhat similar to an Administration proposal that was not enacted last year. There is a technical problem with the language of Section 206 as drafted. The Section states that HUD should work "in conjunction with" the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). HUD currently has a contractual agreement with HHS with respect to Section 242, the hospital mortgage insurance program. Under this agreement, both HHS salaries and expenses are paid from the FHA General Insurance Fund. This agreement has worked well for several years. Because of the agreement, the language should be modified to read "in consultation with," to avoid any contractual disputes between HUD and HHS in the future. There is no similar agreement between HUD and HHS with respect to the Section 232 nursing homes mortgage insurance program, and we do not believe that the language is necessary or desirable for that program. HUD operates the nursing home program effectively without formal participation by HHS.

Sections 203-205 amend the definition of the FHA health care and assisted living programs so as to take FHA into new lines of business. Sections 203 and 204 change the definitions in Section 232 and Section 242, respectively, to include community health centers, medical practice facilities, and group practice facilities, and Section 205 permits insurance to refinance these facilities. These provisions raise a number of questions and require additional analysis before the Department can provide a definitive position. The language creates an overlap between Section 232 and Section 242, as well as Title XI, so that these new lines of business can be insured under either program. The programs are now managed separately within the Office of Housing, and the overlap could possibly complicate our ability to run both programs. More fundamentally, these proposals would appear to require FHA to undertake new insurance activities on unfamiliar products, beyond our current expertise and capacity. FHA primarily insures financing for housing. To expand our portfolio to include businesses that provide no shelter could have long-term consequences to the FHA GI Fund. We are now experiencing an increasing number of claims in the Section 232 nursing home program, and just last week had the first default in the Section 242 hospital program in three years. It is particularly relevant that the expansion of nursing homes into new business activities during the 1990s led to a significant number of defaults and bankruptcies.

Programs for the Elderly and Disabled

Section 301 addresses part of a well-known policy concern. It would authorize the use of uncommitted, unobligated Assisted Living Conversion Program funds in the Section 202 program for use in a modernization demonstration program for Section 236 elderly housing. The Section 236 elderly housing portfolio is a fraction of the Section 236 program - about 90,000 units, less than one-third of the units in the entire Section 236 portfolio of over 330,000 units nationwide. The elderly housing projects are generally in good physical condition; only 25 projects out of 556 have REAC physical inspection scores of less than 60, less than 5 percent of the inventory. No projects have REAC scores less than 30. We certainly recognize that there is some need for capital improvements among the entire older insured subsidized FHA multifamily portfolio. We have been working with the multifamily industry over the last two years, in an effort to modernize and restructure the Section 236 housing portfolio. The work is being conducted within the framework of preserving these projects for continued use within the affordable multifamily housing stock. The general restructuring technique involves a sale of the project to a new owner who physically modernizes the project and maintains its affordability for the term of the mortgage plus five years, generally a total of 15 years. In most cases, the financing technique utilizes new mortgages supported by the continuation of Section 8 rental assistance and the remaining Section 236 interest reduction payments. The owner's capital is provided through the Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC). To date, we have succeeded in restructuring over 100 of these projects. We do not believe that Section 301 is necessary for this effort. We also are concerned that the Section 202 Assisted Living Conversion program might be adversely affected. The program has not yet reached the scale envisioned in past appropriations, and the unexpended funds have been carried forward. But it is our experience that new programs do take time to get underway, and we do not believe it is prudent to anticipate that Section 202 Assisted Living Conversion funds would be available.

With regard to Section 303, as you know, the President and the Secretary are strongly committed to ensuring that religious organizations have the same opportunities as any other participant in the Section 202/811 programs, which are our largest programs in terms of participation by faith-based organizations. These organizations now can be sponsors of these projects, and certainly religious organizations have been very active in the Section 202 program since its creation in 1959. In recent years, they have accounted for approximately 40% of the funding that Congress appropriates for these programs. While we applaud the purpose of Section 303, the Department will need to thoroughly consider the issues relative to direct ownership of projects by religious organizations. Our practice for both religious and secular sponsors has been that ownership is vested in a single-purpose non-religious entity and established by the sponsor, not the sponsoring organization.

Other Provisions

The Housing Impact Analysis proposed in Title VIII was proposed by President Bush during the campaign two years ago. It is an effort to create a system to monitor the aggregate effects of all rules on the cost and availability of housing. We believe that it is in the interest of consumers, especially moderate-income families seeking to become homeowners or to find decent affordable rental housing, to ensure that regulations are demonstrably required to protect health and safety, and that the consequences of regulation for affordable housing are recognized and balanced against other important public purposes.

Section 902 establishes a single office within the Department to coordinate counseling activities. This sounds desirable, but may be counterproductive, in our judgment. It might undermine the ability of the various offices to establish requirements, standards, and performance measures that meet the unique needs of their programs and clients. HUD's various program areas each provide counseling, generally for different purposes and typically to different clienteles. Recently, FHA revised the standards and performance measures related to the 1400 HUD-approved housing counseling agencies participating in this program. We see no need for another office within the Department to repeat this process. As you know, the Administration has requested $35 million for a new categorical counseling program, nearly doubling the current level of funding and removing the program from the HOME block grant. We urge you to support that proposal, and we believe it will be easier and quicker to provide the funds to counseling agencies if we can operate the new program on the basis of the standards we have recently established.

Finally, the Administration supports Section 907 to simplify current law pertaining to subsidy layering. The provision permits housing credit agencies to certify to compliance with the Department's subsidy layering requirements concerning the combination of HUD and other governmental assistance with the Low Income Housing Tax Credit. The housing credit agency will simply certify that it has made the subsidy layering determination already required by Section 42 of the Tax Code. This provision is consistent with the Secretary's efforts to streamline the delivery of HUD's programs and support the production of affordable housing through the use of FHA mortgage insurance and the Low Income Housing Tax Credit Program.

Conclusion

Thank you again for the opportunity to testify on The Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. I would be happy to answer any questions that the Subcommittee may have.

Karen Hughes resigning as White House counselor

WASHINGTON (AP) * White House counselor Karen Hughes said Tuesday
she's resigning from the White House to return to Texas, but will continue advising President Bush from afar.

Hughes has worked for Bush since his days as Texas governor and is one of his closest confidants.

"Later this summer, I'm going to be changing the way in which I serve the president. My husband and I have made a difficult but we think right decision to move our family home back to Texas," Hughes said in a surprise announcement in the White House briefing room
```

"Our roots are there," she said. "I guess we're a little homesick."

Hughes and political aide Karl Rove were critical to Bush's rise from a two-term Texas governor to the presidency.

Hughes said she plans to advise the White House from Texas on big-picture communication strategies, but will likely leave the federal payroll in the summer.

She made the decision now, Hughes said, because of a May 1 deadline to decide whether her son, Robert, would remain in Washington schools. She has a daughter in Austin. Her son traveled with Hughes aboard the campaign plane.

She said Bush was not surprised by the move. "He accepted my decision and respected it," she said.

"The is a family friendly White House," she said. "And this is a family-friendly decision."

STATEMENT OF ROY A. BERNARDI

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR COMMUNITY PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00143896

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on the Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. Madame Chairwoman, the efforts you and others have made to bring the need for affordable housing to the attention of Congress through legislation such as HR 3995 are very much appreciated. I would like to thank you for your demonstrated leadership, resolute voice, and compassion for the less fortunate among us. Your contributions will be sorely missed when your career in Congress draws to a close.

HR 3995 proposes some significant changes to many programs in the Office of Community Planning and Development, and to the HOME Investments Partnerships program in particular. I will address those related to HOME first.

HOME Investment Partnerships Program

The HOME Program has a demonstrated record of success in developing "deep-targeted" affordable housing with over 40 percent of all HOME-assisted rental units produced serving extremely low-income families. We believe that reforms to the HOME Program should build on the notable success the program has already achieved. We are concerned that the proposed Production and Preservation Program, as currently structured, and the other significant changes proposed for the HOME Program itself, particularly in regard to rent level determinations, would not help to achieve the worthy objectives of HR 3995, that of providing affordable housing for extremely low-income families. We believe that some of the bill's provisions would have unintended consequences.

The creation of a new Production and Preservation Program within HOME that has different requirements in such areas as rent determination, tenant contribution to rent, match, income targeting, commitment of funds, and even in the definition of who is low- or very low-income, could create significant compatibility issues with the basic HOME program and with other Federal programs, resulting in serious implementation problems. Unless these conflicting requirements are reconciled, the implementation problems will remain and projects will be delayed or found infeasible if the new program is made part of HOME or potentially if it is developed as a separate, stand-alone program.

We would urge the Committee to reconsider its proposed changes to the way in which HOME Program rents are determined. The effort made in HR 3995 to remedy lagging housing development "in certain rural counties" is understandable. However, these changes - abandoning the Fair Market Rent (FMR) standard and adopting the greater of the State or area median income as a floor for determining rents – could actually increase rents generally across the country while not ensuring that those who are the targeted beneficiaries of the legislation, extremely low- and very low-income families, will be able to afford those higher rents. For example:

- 86% of the population of metro areas and 100% of all non-metropolitan areas will have rent increases;
- Average increase in rents will be 32% (or $200) for the country as a whole;

REV_00143897

- 63% of the rent increases will be more than 20%;
- 37% of the rent increases will be more than 40%;
- The largest rent increases will be in areas with the least housing affordability needs if the current rent-to-income ratio is used as the measurement indicator;

Some specific local examples of rent increases are contained in the following table:

Metro Area/County	2-Bedrm FY2002 FMR	Current High HOME Rent (Monthly)	Proposed High HOME Rent (Monthly)	Monthly Rent Increase
Modoc County, CA	503	503	867	364
Gilpin County, CO	678	678	1,173	495
Stamford-Norwalk, CT	1,384	1,202	1,667	465
Cedar Rapids, IA	520	520	959	439
Adams County, IL	395	395	951	556
Decatur, IL	475	475	951	476
Duluth-Superior, MN-WI	487	487	921	434
Utica-Rome, NY	495	495	882	387
Kendall County, TX	473	473	911	438
Roanoke, VA	500	500	913	413
Washington, DC-MD-VA	943	943	1,316	373

At the other end of the spectrum, high HOME rents would fall in areas with exceptionally high rent-to-income ratios where FMRs are currently used to adjust the income limits used to calculate rents. For example, San Francisco's current high HOME rent of $1,467 would decrease by $230 under the proposed rent rules, making an already difficult environment even less attractive to developers in San Francisco.

Finally, abandoning the FMR standard would make it more difficult to use housing vouchers in HOME-assisted projects and would place many HOME units out of reach of voucher holders. At the same time, the HOME program could become less attractive to developers in areas with the most affordability problems (i.e., high rent to income ratio areas), and more attractive in areas with the least affordability problems (i.e., low rent to income ratio areas) and high vacancy rates. For the U.S. as a whole:

- Approximately 39 percent of the rental stock is located in markets where the FMR currently sets the maximum limit for HOME rents. Prevailing rents are quite low relative to income in these areas and the rental vacancy rate is 12 percent;
- In markets where rents are high relative to incomes and the FMR does not now act as a cap on HOME rents, the vacancy rate is 5 percent.

HUD is eager to work with this Committee to build on its efforts and those of the Millennial Housing Commission whose report is due out in May, to expand affordable housing opportunities. We are also confident that solutions to identified impediments to affordable housing development in certain rural counties can be addressed with specific adjustments to the existing HOME Program rent structure.

Many changes have already been made over the ten years that the HOME Program has been in operation in an effort to streamline the program and improve its effectiveness. The production results and the ongoing feedback we receive from housing providers would indicate that this effort has been largely successful. Indeed, one of the hallmarks of this program and an important reason for its success has been the close and continuing communication between the administrators at HUD and recipients of HOME funds and their representatives and associations. We are receptive to further improvements to the program.

Homeless Assistance Programs

Madame Chairwoman, I'd now like to address the provisions of the bill dealing with HUD's McKinney-Vento Act homeless assistance programs. On an overall basis, the homeless assistance provisions of the bill are carefully crafted and correctly recognize both the important elements of current law that should be retained and the provisions that need modification.

Specifically, we support the reauthorization provisions for the Supportive Housing, Shelter Plus Care, Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation SRO and the Emergency Shelter Grants programs. The Department will be proposing a consolidation of these programs into one that is needs-based and performance-driven. This consolidation will ensure community-level planning and decision-making. And, it will retain the fundamental components of our Continuum of Care strategy to address homelessness. We further support the provisions of the bill reauthorizing the Interagency Council on the Homeless and the Emergency Food and Shelter Program, currently housed at FEMA but proposed for transfer to HUD in the President's budget request.

The Department fully supports Section 604 of the bill that continues the current requirement that at least 30 percent of appropriated funds be targeted for permanent housing projects. Similarly, we support the removal of the unrealistic caps on the use of Supportive Housing Program funding for acquisition, rehabilitation and new construction. These caps have increasingly worked to restrain our grantees' ability to generate new and rehabilitated permanent housing units for homeless individuals and families.

The Department notes bill language proposing the transfer of the costs of renewing expiring Shelter Plus Care projects and projects funded under the Permanent Housing component of the Supportive Housing Program to the Housing Certificate Fund (HCF). The Department looked at these renewals in the 2003 budget process and determined that it is preferable to address them as part of consolidated homeless funding.

REV_00143899

Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS

HUD supports Section 904 of the Bill that would reauthorize the Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS (HOPWA) program. HOPWA is the only Federal program solely dedicated to providing housing assistance to persons with HIV/AIDS and their families. Housing provided under this program provides a basis for helping people at the lowest income levels access appropriate care and acts as a base to help maintain difficult therapies and medical regimens.

Community Development Block Grant

I would like to make several other comments on provisions of HR 3995 that would affect HUD's basic Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program.

Section 902 on Housing Counseling programs would require the Secretary to designate a single office within the Department to "establish, coordinate, and administrate all requirements, standards, and performance measures under programs and laws administered by the Department that relate to housing counseling, homeownership, counseling . . ." This section also specifies that the CDBG eligible activity under section 105(a)(20) of the HCD Act of 1974 be covered by this provision. Section 105(a)(20) of the HCD Act authorizes grantees to use CDBG funds to carry out housing services, such as housing counseling. Housing counseling is an important component of the Department's rental housing and homeownership programs. However, we would caution against adopting a "one size fits all" approach that would take away the local discretion of program design and implementation from CDBG grantees, which is the cornerstone of the CDBG program. Recently, FHA revised the standards and performance measures related to the 1400 HUD-approved housing counseling agencies participating in this program. We see no need for another office within the Department to repeat this process. As you know, the Administration has requested $35 million for a new categorical counseling program, nearly doubling the current level of funding and removing the program from the HOME block grant. We urge you to support that proposal, and we believe it will be easier and quicker to provide the funds to counseling agencies if we can operate the new program on the basis of the standards we have recently established.

Section 905 concerns the funding eligibility for secular activities carried out by religious organizations. HUD supports the involvement of faith-based organizations in our programs, consistent with Constitutional principles of Church and State.

Section 906 would add a new eligibility category to the CDBG program to authorize the construction of tornado or storm-safe shelters in manufactured housing parks. This addition would expand this otherwise eligible public facility to serve residents of private manufactured housing parks and HUD supports it. However, subparagraph (b) of Section 906 would authorize a set-aside from the CDBG program for fiscal year 2002 for this purpose. The Department does not support further set-asides within the CDBG appropriation.

HUD supports Section 907 of the bill that would amend Section 105(a)(13) of the HCD Act to allow the use of CDBG funds to administer renewal communities. HUD believes that such support of the Renewal Communities program will foster needed job creation and revitalization in distressed communities.

Self-Help Homeownership Opportunities Program

HUD supports the reauthorization of the Self-Help Homeownership Opportunities Program (SHOP), which has been instrumental in helping many low-income families become homeowners. The President's request to triple funding to $65 million for SHOP in FY 2003 reflects this program's popularity and success.

Thank you again for this opportunity, and I would be happy to answer any questions that you may have.

STATEMENT OF MICHAEL LIU

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00143902

I am Michael Liu, Assistant Secretary for Public and Indian Housing at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. In that position I have responsibility for administration of the public housing, voucher and Native American housing programs. Accordingly, I will limit my testimony to Titles IV, V and VI of the bill, which concern those programs.

First, Congresswoman Roukema, thank you and your cosponsors for developing and introducing the Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. The bill contains many proposals that will allow us to do our jobs better, of providing the most effective low-income housing assistance possible with the funds available. The reauthorizations for two of our critical programs, HOPE VI and Native American Block Grants, are critical measures in themselves. The bill contains several measures to achieve our common goal of assuring that the voucher funds Congress appropriates can be fully used. The bill also contains the Administration's Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative, which holds great promise as a means of improving the Nation's public housing communities.

Section 401 of the bill proposes a new thrifty production voucher program. This program is patterned after the current project-based voucher program, but assumes that the capital for production will be found from other programs or sources and provides for a reduced subsidy designed to cover only operating costs.

HUD generally supports additional tools that may help public housing authorities (PHAs) meet their communities' housing needs, and in that context will work with the Committee to develop a means of offering vouchers that can be combined easily with capital subsidies. The current proposal seems rather complex and differs from the project-based voucher program in ways that may not be necessary, such as waiting list administration, development location requirements and several others. I look forward to further discussions on this matter.

The bill contains several initiatives designed directly or indirectly to increase the successful use of appropriated voucher program funds, including an increase in the amount families can expend as their share of rent when initially leasing any unit (section 402), authorization for PHAs to use up to five percent of program monthly assistance payment funds (as opposed to administrative fees) for efforts to help families obtain and remain in suitable housing (section 403) and an authorization to provide increased administrative fees for high-performing PHAs in the voucher program (section 405). These proposals would augment steps HUD and Congress already have taken or are taking to accomplish this goal, including increased flexibility for PHAs to set payment standards; increased fair market rents to the 50th percentile of rentals for units in satisfactory condition some areas; initiation of the Section 8 Management Assessment Program (SEMAP), a management report card with consequences; training of PHA staff; award of new incremental vouchers only to PHAs with high usage of current resources; and reallocation of vouchers from PHAs that have not been able to use them to PHAs that need and can use them.

HUD supports the direction of these new proposals, but has suggestions. HUD supports the increase in allowable family rent to forty percent of gross income, but believes PHAs also need flexibility to address compelling situations—for example, where a family already in the program would like to move to a significantly less expensive unit, but cannot do so because the family still would be paying more than the limit.

HUD would allow the use of some program funds to help increase voucher utilization for PHAs that already are using their administrative fees solely for the Section 8 program, but believes that the authorization should be substantially narrower to address competing concerns regarding diversion of program funds. With respect to administrative fees, HUD recommends that it be given broader authority not just to provide a bonus for high performers, but also to restructure the fees to promote performance in general and the accomplishment of specific program priorities, such as families' movement to self-sufficiency and homeownership.

The bill contains several provisions regarding enhanced vouchers. HUD supports clarification of the obligation of owners to take enhanced vouchers in projects where tenants are eligible for them (section 406). With respect to the same section's protections for overhoused families, HUD recommends that such families be treated in the same manner as overhoused families are treated now in the voucher program (basically, the enhanced voucher families could choose to stay in the oversized unit, but would be subsidized at the level they would receive if they were in a unit of appropriate size at the property).

The bill also contains a provision to provide for higher contract rents upon the renewal of moderate rehabilitation contracts (section 408). HUD agrees that the current-law restriction of such rents to the lower of comparable rents, current rents plus an operating cost adjustment or fair market rents is unnecessarily restrictive. The bill's proposed solution, however, will pose administrative challenges for PHAs not accustomed to evaluating budget-based rents and may go further than is needed to preserve assisted units.

You asked me to discuss the future impact of Section 8 contract renewals on the HUD budget. Renewals for both tenant-based and project-based Section 8 rose from $14.3 billion in fiscal 2001 to a requested $16.9 billion for fiscal 2003, and are projected to increase to over $20 billion in several more years. This is a result of the program serving more families, some program changes that have increased per-unit costs, such as increases in fair market rents, and conversion over time of all contracts to one-year contracts, so that all contracts must have new budget authority each year.

Title V, Public Housing

I am excited that Title V contains the Administration's Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative (section 505), because that initiative can provide a new and effective means of improving public housing. Recent HUD studies indicate that the backlog of public housing capital needs is in the $20 billion range and that new needs accrue at about two billion dollars annually. Strides have been made in recent years in public housing communities, but appropriations for the Capital Fund at two to three billion dollars annually will allow only slow progress. The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative provides a means of addressing this problem sooner with the dollars available.

The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative allows PHAs that choose to participate to trade their public housing subsidies for project-based vouchers on a property-by-property basis. PHAs then could borrow money for capital improvements on the same individual property basis now used for Section 8 developments and multifamily housing generally. In addition to leveraging private capital, this action is likely to lead to more accountable property and financial management because management must be done at the individual property level. Tenants generally would be protected in the same manner as in public housing. PHAs could use the project-based vouchers on current sites, or on replacement sites where appropriate.

The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative can be a powerful tool for the prompt rehabilitation of housing that otherwise would languish for years. For example, a development's capital needs of four million dollars that otherwise would be impossible to address from available Capital Fund moneys can be addressed with debt service payments on a seven percent, thirty-year loan of about $335,000 per year. PHAs could undertake individual transactions as long as the monthly expenses for operations, debt service and a capital replacement reserve did not exceed the lower of market rents or the applicable Section 8 payment standard. If the approvable rent levels were too low to finance all the necessary capital work—for example, if the PHA only could raise $20,000 per unit at approvable rent levels but the development needed $30,000 per unit in capital work—the PHA could choose to supplement the project-based vouchers with an up-front contribution from the Capital Fund or other sources.

The bill contains a proposal to suspend the PHA Plan requirement for three years for the smallest PHAs up to 100 units (section 504). Current law requires annual PHA Plans with eighteen listed elements, but also allows HUD to streamline PHA Plans for small, high-performing and Section 8-only PHAs. The extent to which the PHA Plan requirement has resulted in useful strategic planning has varied greatly from locality to locality. In many localities, the Resident Advisory Board participation requirement has resulted in better access for public housing residents and Section 8 families to make their views known to PHA decision-makers.

The usefulness of the PHA Plan relative to the PHAs' ability to carry it out with limited staff resources, however, appears to drop dramatically for small PHAs. HUD has provided some streamling of PHA Plan requirements for these PHAs, but I believe we need to go further and HUD is developing a regulation that will accomplish this. The bill's proposal is certainly along these lines, although we may be able to accomplish the necessary streamlining through regulation without disturbing the current resident and public process to the same extent. I want to note Congressman Bereuter's leadership on this issue and thank him for that leadership.

While HUD has differentiated between small and larger PHAs in PHA Plan processing, it has not done this to enough of an extent in its other programs. Small PHAs with 250 or fewer units constitute 75 percent of all PHAs, but operate only fifteen percent of the units. From a risk management standpoint, it is unnecessary to impose the same regulatory burdens on these PHAs as on larger ones. The new regulation I have mentioned will recognize that in several program areas.

The bill would require HUD to develop and test a third-party system for public housing performance evaluation, through an outside contractor (section 503). This year, HUD has implemented a binding public housing management assessment that contains an independent inspection of physical conditions. However, experience with the Public Housing Assessment System (PHAS) during its extended advisory period raised so many questions regarding the adequacy of its physical inspection and finance components that HUD substantially simplified and in some respects had to pare back these components prior to implementation. HUD is committed to working with public housing groups toward how best to revise the system. It may be that a third-party system could accomplish the same tasks better and provide a broader assessment that would be more readily recognized and accepted as appropriate by all parties concerned. The work being done by others such as public housing industry groups and private companies to develop such systems is promising, and HUD may be able to take account of this work and the views of resident representatives and others to develop an improved and possibly third-party system expeditiously.

Section 501 of the bill would allow HUD to waive the requirement that PHAs have a resident on the board of commissioners in particular States, where reasonable efforts are being made to take the necessary legislative or regulatory action so that this can occur. Congress has recognized problems in the implementation of the resident on the board requirement in several States, has exempted housing authorities in three States from the requirement for fiscal 2002 and has required HUD to provide a report by May 30, 2002 regarding the impediments to its implementation and related matters. Thus, further legislative action seems appropriate. The proposed legislation, however, would allow for permanent waivers and would not result in having residents on boards of commissioners promptly in the affected States. A better solution may be to provide for appointment by the chief executive officer of the PHA's jurisdiction of an additional board member to fulfill the resident on the board requirement, for a temporary period such as three years. This would give the noncompliant States more time to complete any necessary actions so that residents could be appointed to PHA boards as federal law requires, but the relief would be temporary and promptly would result in residents serving on boards of commissioners.

The bill provides for a two-year reauthorization of HOPE VI and for measures to ensure that a broader group of communities in terms of size and location have a realistic possibility of receiving a HOPE VI award. HUD supports both reauthorization and the general effort to promote broad program participation. More discussion of concepts in regard to reauthorization of HOPE VI will be constructive. A report on HOPE VI lessons learned is due to Congress on June 15, 2002.

Title VII, Native American Housing

Title VII reauthorizes both the Native American Block Grant Program and its related loan guarantee program. HUD believes that these programs continue to hold much promise and supports the reauthorization of both programs.

I look forward to working closely with the Committee as you continue to develop this important legislation for the improvement of the voucher, public housing and Native American housing programs. Please call on me and my staff for any assistance we can provide.

STATEMENT OF JOHN C. WEICHER

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR HOUSING/FHA COMMISSIONER

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00143908

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on behalf of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Office of Housing-Federal Housing Administration (FHA), concerning the "Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002". The bill covers a very wide range of programs and activities across the Department, including many different programs within the Office of Housing. We have carefully reviewed each provision contained in the bill, and I am grateful for this opportunity to provide you with our thoughts on the sections of this important piece of legislation. Because you have also addressed a number of specific questions about FHA programs in your letter of invitation, I will combine my answers to those questions with comments on the corresponding sections of the bill. I have organized my comments by program area.

FHA Single-Family Insurance Programs

To begin with FHA's basic Section 203(b) home mortgage insurance program and the Mutual Mortgage Insurance (MMI) Fund: as you know, the President and the Secretary have made promoting homeownership, especially for minority households, a cornerstone of domestic policy. We are very proud of FHA's success in promoting homeownership. About 80 percent of our home purchase mortgages serve first-time homebuyers and about 35 percent serve minority households. The national homeownership rate, and the minority homeownership rate, both set new records last year.

The MMI Fund was determined to have an economic value of $18.5 billion at the end of FY2001, with a capital ratio of 3.75%. FHA's volume of business this year is running substantially in excess of expectations. Indeed, through the first six months of the year we have insured over $81 billion of single-family mortgages. We are assessing the need to seek an increase in our current commitment limitation of $160 billion for the MMI Fund for the current fiscal year. Having been personally involved in developing the legislation that put FHA on an actuarially sound basis some 12 years ago – as was Chairwoman Roukema and ranking member Frank - I am very pleased to report this information to you.

Of course, the MMI Fund net worth, which estimates future receipts, liabilities, and cash on hand, has attracted a number of proposals to spend the reserves, for example to divert funds into a new "National Housing Trust Fund" for purposes well beyond the homeownership goals of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund. We think these proposals are ill-advised, and they misconstrue the nature of the MMI Fund.

The creation of the MMI capital reserve was a fundamental goal of the Cranston - Gonzales National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 which was intended to forestall any taxpayer bailout of the FHA, as had just been required for the savings and loan industry. While all Federal credit programs are required to budget for anticipated losses, under the Credit Reform Act of 1990, the MMI Fund was specifically required to generate additional revenue to be held as a special reserve against potential losses. The Cranston-Gonzales legislation created a kind of "lock-box" for funds that would be available to meet any contingency, so that general revenues in the Treasury would never be needed to meet FHA obligations. To generate the funds needed for this capital reserve, FHA suspended the payment of distributive shares to borrowers and raised insurance premiums substantially.

Since 1990, FHA has gradually built up its reserves year by year. This annual surplus has been counted in the overall Federal budget as an offsetting receipt, and has helped reduce the deficit. Because this revenue was previously counted as a receipt, any legislation that proposes to expend it will be counted as new spending, just as if funds were being appropriated directly out of the Treasury. There is no budgetary magic to raiding this "lock box"; instead there is a budgetary outlay. Moreover, using the MMI Fund reserves will vitiate FHA's ability to meet the basic goal of the Cranston-Gonzales Act of making the MMI Fund actuarially sound.

FHA was able to reduce single-family premiums substantially last year, and make homeownership more affordable for more families, in line with our fundamental public policy purpose. We have also been looking at the possibility of reinstituting the payment of distributive shares. However, it is clear that any such policy will be procedurally complex, and we are not proposing it at this time.

The Housing Affordability for Americans Act of 2002 contains several provisions that would improve FHA's ability to operate our core single-family home mortgage insurance programs. Section 221 would make permanent a pilot designed to streamline and simplify the FHA downpayment program. Secretary Martinez supported this proposal during his testimony before the House Appropriations Subcommittee last month. This downpayment simplification calculation has proven to be a successful program modification. The procedure reduces the number of steps involved in the calculation of the FHA single-family mortgage amounts, and thereby has eliminated the confusion experienced by many buyers, brokers, and lenders. Further, this existing statutory authority has reduced the costs associated with closing an FHA insured mortgage. Ultimately, the simplification has increased homeownership opportunities for low- and moderate-income families.

Similarly, Section 227 should facilitate the Department's ability to effectuate another legislative priority. During the FY2002 budget process, the Department requested and received authority to insure hybrid Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARMs). Our work to implement that authority is continuing. The Department's position is that FHA's hybrid ARM should approximate the conventional hybrid ARM and its benefits as closely as possible subject to preserving sound underwriting policies and protections for FHA borrowers and the MMI Fund. Section 227 supports that end by allowing the Department greater flexibility in the design of regulations that will govern the initial rate adjustment at the end of the fixed rate period. The Department appreciates the efforts by Rep. Bob Ney and other Members of this Committee in supporting the permanent extension of this provision.

Sections 229-231 are consistent with recent Department actions to strengthen our Section 203(k) rehabilitation mortgage insurance program and our nonprofit partnerships. In 1996, the Office of Housing issued Mortgagee Letter 96-59, placing a moratorium on investor participation in the 203(k) program. Investors have not been allowed to participate in the program since the issuance of this Mortgagee Letter. The moratorium still stands. We have no plans to modify the Letter and have no objection to Section 229.

Similarly, Section 230 regarding rehabilitation loan advances is also consistent with Departmental action. FHA Mortgagee Letter 00-25 states, "mortgagees are fully responsible for authorizing draw inspections, managing the rehabilitation escrow account, and approving the associated draws for the account." The Letter also requires consultants to be chosen from the FHA 203(k) Consultant Roster and permits consultants to perform the inspections on the mortgagee's behalf. The Department has a number of technical questions regarding this provision and looks forward to working with the Committee to ensure that mortgagees are held appropriately responsible.

Section 231 would require nonprofits to be approved 501(c)(3) organizations and certify annually to the Department its understanding of HUD guidelines. In January 2002, the Office of Housing issued Mortgagee Letter 02-01, establishing new requirements for nonprofits seeking FHA-approval. Nonprofits must now have, among other requirements, two years 501(c)(3) IRS tax-exempt status and a minimum of two consecutive years – within the last 5 years – of housing development experience. Approved nonprofits have until September 30, 2002 to demonstrate their compliance with the new requirements. The Office of Housing supports Section 231 to strengthen its existing guidance. It will help us prevent a recurrence of the 1998-1999 Section 203(k) fraud problem in New York City, where a number of nonprofits purchased small multi-unit buildings in Harlem and Brooklyn intending to have them rehabilitated for owner-occupancy. The knowledgeable and experienced Commissioner of New York City's Department of Housing Preservation and Development said that she had never heard of 25 of the nonprofits that bought these homes; she had only heard of two. This fraud will cost the taxpayers some $268 million, and will cost the citizens of New York City another $125 million.

Sections 222-224 contain proposals to provide special opportunities for teachers and public safety officers. Section 223 would give the Secretary authority to discount HUD-owned, single-family properties by 50% to qualified teachers and public safety officers. The Department certainly does not object to such a program; indeed, the Secretary already has this authority and has exercised it. The Department's Officer/Teacher Next Door Program currently allows teachers and police officers to purchase homes at a 50% discount in designated revitalization areas, subject to a three-year owner occupancy requirement. During a Fiscal Year 2001 audit of the program, the Office of the Inspector General uncovered a significant number of violations of the program rules by officer participants. In May 2001, the Department temporarily suspended sales under the program and instituted enhanced management controls. A recent IG audit of sales closed after the program resumed in August 2001 did not identify any new program violations. The Department is currently working on a proposed rule to include these program controls.

Sections 222 and 224 both aim to reduce downpayment requirements for public safety officers, while Section 222 also includes teachers among those who will benefit. In regard to both provisions, it is important to note that the Office of Housing has recently made significant changes to its programs to reduce downpayment costs substantially for all buyers of FHA insured properties. These changes include the reduction of insurance premium rates by 33 percent, along with the Downpayment Simplification previously mentioned. One observation the Department would make with regard to these provisions is that a number of other occupational groups have expressed a similar interest in reduced downpayments.

In addition, it may be more appropriate to pursue these initiatives within the American Dream Downpayment Fund, as proposed by the President and funded by Congress last year. The American Dream Downpayment Fund will reduce the barrier that downpayments frequently pose to homeownership, for all low- and moderate-income families. On behalf of the Administration, I want to thank Rep. Mike Rogers and other Members of Congress for introducing H.R. 4446 to authorize this program.

I would also mention that the Department's Office of Policy Development and Research is in the process of studying the impact of this type of program, as required by Congress. We believe that it would be prudent to wait until the results of this study are available before making any commitment to such an initiative.

Section 228, which would establish a uniform national loan limit for Home Equity Conversion Mortgages (HECMs), also concerns an issue that is currently part of an internal analysis by the Office of Policy Development and Research. As mandated by the American Homeownership and Economic Opportunity Act of 2000, the Department is conducting an actuarial analysis on the impact of this provision. We will provide the Subcommittee with comments and recommendations when this study has been finalized.

FHA Single-Family REO

The bill also contains several provisions concerning FHA's single-family inventory of foreclosed homes, and the Committee has asked about our REO activities. Since the introduction of the Management and Marketing contracts in March of 1999, the Department has greatly improved its REO disposition. As of March 2002, the inventory of HUD-owned homes is at its lowest level since 1996 - 28,270, compared to a March 1999 inventory of 41,747. Moreover, the inventory has been stable during the recession, instead of rising as has been typical in the past. Currently, properties remain in inventory an average of 183 days, compared to 221 days in March 1999, and losses per claim have been reduced from 39 cents to 29 cents on the dollar. The loss rate is at its lowest point in at least 20 years.

FHA sold 66,415 single-family homes during FY 2001. About 60 percent of these sales were to owner-occupants, helping serve FHA's basic purpose of promoting homeownership. Another 30 percent are sales to investors, and the remainder – slightly less than 10 percent - goes to local governments and nonprofit organizations.

FHA currently offers discounts to HUD-approved nonprofit organizations on the purchase of REO. Properties newly acquired by HUD are initially offered to nonprofit organizations on a limited competitive basis, which excludes investors and owner occupants, for up to 10 business days. FHA offers properties to nonprofits for an additional five days of limited competition that does include owner occupants but excludes investors. After these periods, FHA opens bids on properties to the general public, but nonprofit groups may bid and still receive sales discounts. These discounts are factored into a sale after the highest bids are calculated.

HUD properties are appraised and initially listed for sale on the Internet and through multiple listing services at the "as-is" value established by the appraiser. Properties sold to a nonprofit are discounted by 10%, unless the property is located in a FHA-designated "revitalization area".

FHA has two primary initiatives underway associated with its property disposition program. We have begun a major review of our Asset Control Area (ACA) program, following a report of program deficiencies by the HUD Office of Inspector General in a recent audit. We are planning to build stronger controls into the ACA program. During that review, which will take 4-6 months, we will let current ACA agreements expire. Our ACA partners can, however, continue to rehabilitate and sell the properties they have already acquired from HUD, and we believe that most if not all ACA partners have an inventory of properties that will not be exhausted during the review. This program, with proper controls in place, can provide an effective role for nonprofit groups, and local governments, in HUD's property disposition.

A second initiative is HUD's Accelerated Claims Demonstration Program. This program, announced in a Federal Register Notice on February 5th, utilizes current statutory authority for HUD to buy seriously defaulted loans that cannot be addressed through FHA's loss mitigation program, and sell these loans to the private sector for disposition. This program is expected to begin in the fourth quarter of this fiscal year. Considering both of these initiatives, it does not appear that additional statutory authority related to property disposition is required at this time.

Partly for these reasons, we see no need for Section 225 of this bill, which would require HUD to use the Department of Agriculture's Rural Housing Services Center as an additional resource for servicing single-family, HUD-held mortgages. We believe that this requirement is unnecessary and indeed would be counterproductive. Presently, HUD's National Servicing Center (NSC) in Oklahoma services four types of secretary-held loans, each with unique characteristics and servicing requirements. In particular, NSC services 963 reverse equity (HECM) loans. For this loan type, the Department makes monthly payments to the borrowers rather than receiving income from them. The daily payment process is complex and time sensitive. Additionally, NSC services second mortgages generated through loss mitigation advances, and discounted sales to officers and teachers in HUD's Officer Next Door/Teacher Next Door programs. Because these mortgages carry no interest and require no monthly payments, servicing activity is generally limited to processing subordinations and payoffs. All of these mortgage types are unique to HUD. The Rural Housing Service has no similar programs and no experience in servicing such loans. NSC is doing an excellent job managing their unique mortgage servicing requirements. It is unclear that there is a benefit or need to outsource the servicing of these loans.

FHA Multifamily Insurance Programs

As the members of this Subcommittee know, FHA's basic multifamily insurance program is Section 221(d)(4). This program has required a credit subsidy since Credit Reform was enacted in 1990. Three times in the last eight years, the program was closed down because the available credit subsidy was exhausted. To prevent further closures and place the program on a break-even basis, the Department raised the premium from 50 basis points to 80 basis points for FY 2002. Many in the industry, and some Members of Congress, were concerned that the program would be hamstrung by this increase. That has not happened. In the first six months of the fiscal year, FHA has insured almost $1.5 billion worth of Section 221(d)(4) projects, compared to less than $1.1 billion during the same period a year ago. Moreover, with the 25 percent increase in mortgage limits that was proposed by the Secretary and enacted by Congress, we are seeing applications from high-cost metropolitan area that have not participated in the program in years – the Twin Cities, Philadelphia, Newark, Baltimore, here in Washington, and Austin.

In addition, we have conducted the first systematic re-analysis of the premium and credit subsidy since Credit Reform was enacted. We have concluded that Section 221(d)(4) can be operated on a break-even basis at a much lower premium – 57 basis points. The President's Budget contains an announcement of this premium reduction, effective in October, at the beginning of FY 2003. We are also reducing either the premium or the credit subsidy for nearly every other multifamily program.

This summary of FHA's multifamily mortgage insurance programs provides background for your consideration of Sections 201 and 202 in the legislation. They address the question of who should be served by the programs. FHA generally serves moderate-income renters. Most of the projects that FHA insures are affordable to families in the lower half of the income distribution, and almost half are in underserved areas. These are important markets; these families and these communities need FHA.

Section 201 proposes to index the FHA multifamily mortgage limits. As members of this Subcommittee certainly know, Congress approved indexing the mortgage limits in the Section 203(b) single-family mortgage insurance program several years ago. This provision has enabled FHA to keep pace with inflation and changing economic conditions as it serves young, first-time homebuyers. Indexing the multifamily limits should likewise prove to be more responsive to market conditions and to the needs of families seeking moderately priced rental housing. Clearly, annual adjustments provide a better way to compensate for increased costs than by providing periodic dollar increases. When Congress raised the limits last year by 25 percent, at the request of Secretary Martinez, this was the first increase since 1992, and represented a delayed catch-up for the inflation that occurred between 1992 and 2001; during those years, FHA was progressively less able to serve moderate-income renters.

Section 202 proposes to increase the maximum mortgage limits in areas with very high housing costs by 30 percent above the amounts allowed under current law. It also proposes to increase the amount by which the Secretary, on a case-by-case basis, may increase the maximum mortgage amount. The Department would prefer to analyze the data resulting from our experience with the new limits that Congress enacted last year and the future effects of the indexing contained in Section 201 before proceeding with any additional high housing cost authority beyond that which already exists.

FHA Insurance for Nursing Homes and Hospitals

The Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002 contains several provisions relating to FHA's insurance programs for nursing homes and hospitals. Section 206 seeks to provide a more flexible procedure with respect to the Certificate of Need (CON) for hospitals, which is somewhat similar to an Administration proposal that was not enacted last year. There is a technical problem with the language of Section 206 as drafted. The Section states that HUD should work "in conjunction with" the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). HUD currently has a contractual agreement with HHS with respect to Section 242, the hospital mortgage insurance program. Under this agreement, both HHS salaries and expenses are paid from the FHA General Insurance Fund. This agreement has worked well for several years. Because of the agreement, the language should be modified to read "in consultation with," to avoid any contractual disputes between HUD and HHS in the future. There is no similar agreement between HUD and HHS with respect to the Section 232 nursing homes mortgage insurance program, and we do not believe that the language is necessary or desirable for that program. HUD operates the nursing home program effectively without formal participation by HHS.

Sections 203-205 amend the definition of the FHA health care and assisted living programs so as to take FHA into new lines of business. Sections 203 and 204 change the definitions in Section 232 and Section 242, respectively, to include community health centers, medical practice facilities, and group practice facilities, and Section 205 permits insurance to refinance these facilities. These provisions raise a number of questions and require additional analysis before the Department can provide a definitive position. The language creates an overlap between Section 232 and Section 242, as well as Title XI, so that these new lines of business can be insured under either program. The programs are now managed separately within the Office of Housing, and the overlap could possibly complicate our ability to run both programs. More fundamentally, these proposals would appear to require FHA to undertake new insurance activities on unfamiliar products, beyond our current expertise and capacity. FHA primarily insures financing for housing. To expand our portfolio to include businesses that provide no shelter could have long-term consequences to the FHA GI Fund. We are now experiencing an increasing number of claims in the Section 232 nursing home program, and just last week had the first default in the Section 242 hospital program in three years. It is particularly relevant that the expansion of nursing homes into new business activities during the 1990s led to a significant number of defaults and bankruptcies.

Programs for the Elderly and Disabled

Section 301 addresses part of a well-known policy concern. It would authorize the use of uncommitted, unobligated Assisted Living Conversion Program funds in the Section 202 program for use in a modernization demonstration program for Section 236 elderly housing. The Section 236 elderly housing portfolio is a fraction of the Section 236 program - about 90,000 units, less than one-third of the units in the entire Section 236 portfolio of over 330,000 units nationwide. The elderly housing projects are generally in good physical condition; only 25 projects out of 556 have REAC physical inspection scores of less than 60, less than 5 percent of the inventory. No projects have REAC scores less than 30. We certainly recognize that there is some need for capital improvements among the entire older insured subsidized FHA multifamily portfolio. We have been working with the multifamily industry over the last two years, in an effort to modernize and restructure the Section 236 housing portfolio. The work is being conducted within the framework of preserving these projects for continued use within the affordable multifamily housing stock. The general restructuring technique involves a sale of the project to a new owner who physically modernizes the project and maintains its affordability for the term of the mortgage plus five years, generally a total of 15 years. In most cases, the financing technique utilizes new mortgages supported by the continuation of Section 8 rental assistance and the remaining Section 236 interest reduction payments. The owner's capital is provided through the Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC). To date, we have succeeded in restructuring over 100 of these projects. We do not believe that Section 301 is necessary for this effort. We also are concerned that the Section 202 Assisted Living Conversion program might be adversely affected. The program has not yet reached the scale envisioned in past appropriations, and the unexpended funds have been carried forward. But it is our experience that new programs do take time to get underway, and we do not believe it is prudent to anticipate that Section 202 Assisted Living Conversion funds would be available.

With regard to Section 303, as you know, the President and the Secretary are strongly committed to ensuring that religious organizations have the same opportunities as any other participant in the Section 202/811 programs, which are our largest programs in terms of participation by faith-based organizations. These organizations now can be sponsors of these projects, and certainly religious organizations have been very active in the Section 202 program since its creation in 1959. In recent years, they have accounted for approximately 40% of the funding that Congress appropriates for these programs. While we applaud the purpose of Section 303, the Department will need to thoroughly consider the issues relative to direct ownership of projects by religious organizations. Our practice for both religious and secular sponsors has been that ownership is vested in a single-purpose non-religious entity and established by the sponsor, not the sponsoring organization.

Other Provisions

The Housing Impact Analysis proposed in Title VIII was proposed by President Bush during the campaign two years ago. It is an effort to create a system to monitor the aggregate effects of all rules on the cost and availability of housing. We believe that it is in the interest of consumers, especially moderate-income families seeking to become homeowners or to find decent affordable rental housing, to ensure that regulations are demonstrably required to protect health and safety, and that the consequences of regulation for affordable housing are recognized and balanced against other important public purposes.

Section 902 establishes a single office within the Department to coordinate counseling activities. This sounds desirable, but may be counterproductive, in our judgment. It might undermine the ability of the various offices to establish requirements, standards, and performance measures that meet the unique needs of their programs and clients. HUD's various program areas each provide counseling, generally for different purposes and typically to different clienteles. Recently, FHA revised the standards and performance measures related to the 1400 HUD-approved housing counseling agencies participating in this program. We see no need for another office within the Department to repeat this process. As you know, the Administration has requested $35 million for a new categorical counseling program, nearly doubling the current level of funding and removing the program from the HOME block grant. We urge you to support that proposal, and we believe it will be easier and quicker to provide the funds to counseling agencies if we can operate the new program on the basis of the standards we have recently established.

Finally, the Administration supports Section 907 to simplify current law pertaining to subsidy layering. The provision permits housing credit agencies to certify to compliance with the Department's subsidy layering requirements concerning the combination of HUD and other governmental assistance with the Low Income Housing Tax Credit. The housing credit agency will simply certify that it has made the subsidy layering determination already required by Section 42 of the Tax Code. This provision is consistent with the Secretary's efforts to streamline the delivery of HUD's programs and support the production of affordable housing through the use of FHA mortgage insurance and the Low Income Housing Tax Credit Program.

Conclusion

Thank you again for the opportunity to testify on The Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. I would be happy to answer any questions that the Subcommittee may have.

SENATE SMALL BUSINESS & ENTREPRENEURSHIP and INDIAN AFFAIRS COMMITTEES JOINT HEARING

NATIVE AMERICAN ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Good morning Mr. Chairmen, Senators Bond and Campbell, and distinguished members of both committees. Thank you for convening this joint hearing to discuss the extremely important issue of Native American economic development. Administrator Barreto had a previous commitment and asked that I testify on behalf of the Agency. I am honored and delighted to have the opportunity to share with you the vision and commitment of the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA).

The SBA is dedicated to ensuring that all Native Americans who seek to create, develop, and expand small businesses have full access to the necessary business development and expansion tools available through our Agency programs. As you know, the President's FY 2003 Budget for the SBA contains a $1 million request for an expanded Native American Economic Development Program. This program is a comprehensive initiative designed to meet specific cultural needs and, to result in small business job creation. It is intended to build upon the economic development activity of tribes and Native American community-based organizations seeking to improve the economic well being of their communities.

The 2003 initiative is an expansion of the current SBA Native American program based on an expressed and visible need. The current technical assistance program (TBICs) operates in only six states. Our expanded program will increase the geographic dispersion of SBA assistance and impact greater numbers of Native American small businesses by adding a small business component to the economic development activities already taking place in affected communities. The purpose of the expansion is to broaden our scope nationally and to have a greater impact on significantly more Native American businesses.

The intended grantees include community-based Native American Organizations and tribes who presently have multi-faceted economic development programs and can present a well-developed plan for increasing small business development in Native American communities. Interested and qualified parties will apply for the grants. The current TBICs will, of course, be eligible to apply for the grants.

In our continued efforts to create an essential foundation for economic growth and social stability in the Native American community, the SBA is also currently in the final interview stage for the National Director for Native American Outreach. The responsibility of the National Director will be to direct and coordinate an Agency-wide program designed to promote, expand, and enhance small business opportunities and services for Native Americans. Specifically, the National Director will be responsible for the development of polices designed to enhance the SBA's delivery of programs and services to the Native American business community. Furthermore, the individual will be expected to develop and maintain relationships with other Federal, state and local governments, for-profit and non-profit organizations involved in the promotion of Native American business initiatives. It is our intent to have this position filled as soon as possible.

We have worked closely with Native American organizations in the search for the SBA's National Director of Native American Outreach. We have also collaborated with these organizations to design the expanded Native American Economic Development Program. From this collaboration, we learned that it is necessary to maintain a level of flexibility in the newly expanded program so that the National Director, an expert on Native American issues, will have the opportunity to customize the economic development program to ensure that the need is met.

Again, thank you to both Chairmen and distinguished members of the committees for providing me with the opportunity to share the SBA vision for Native American Economic Development. I believe that we all agree there is a definite need to be met. The appointment of a National Director for Native American Outreach and the FY2003 Native American Economic Development Program are essential steps for further economic development in the Native American community. I firmly believe that this SBA vision will succeed in providing the appropriate tools to promote self-sufficiency and job creation in our Native American community. I look forward to working together to achieve this goal and am happy to answer any of your questions.

April 2002
Five Legislative Proposals – Section-by-Section Analysis

REDUCTION IN MINIMUM RENT; ELIMINATION OF HARDSHIP EXEMPTION FOR NON-ELDERLY, NON-DISABLED FAMILIES THAT WOULD BE EVICTED

Section ____ would amend section 3(a)(3) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to eliminate the eviction-related hardship exemption for those families that are not elderly families or disabled families, and also to lower the maximum minimum rent from $50 to $25.

AMEND MODERATE REHABILITATION RENEWALS TEST TO DROP FAIR MARKET RENT RESTRICTION

Section ____ would amend section 524(b)(3) of the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 to provide that renewal rents for moderate rehabilitation projects are set at the lesser of current rents plus an operating adjustment for inflation, or comparable market rents for the market area. Under current law, they are set at the lesser of current rents plus an operating adjustment for inflation, fair market rents, or comparable market rents for the market area.

VOUCHER UTILIZATION: CHANGE LIMITATION ON FAMILY PAYMENTS OF RENT FROM 40 PERCENT OF ADJUSTED MONTHLY INCOME TO 40 PERCENT OF MONTHLY INCOME

Section ____ would amend section 8(o)(3) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to change the reference to "monthly adjusted income" to instead reference "monthly income" by striking the word "adjusted". The effect of this change would be to increase the total rent that a family initially receiving tenant-based section 8 assistance with respect to any dwelling unit may be allowed to pay from 40% of the monthly adjusted income of the family to 40% of the monthly income of the family.

A basic compromise in the 1998 merger of the voucher and certificate programs was that families could choose to pay more than 30% of adjusted income to rent better apartments, but could not pay more than 40% of adjusted income. This 40% cap helps to ensure that families entering the voucher program do not assume untenably high rent burdens that might undermine the stability of their housing. However, the limit has prevented some families from obtaining housing of their choice, and caused problems such as preventing a family previously in the voucher program and paying more than 40% of adjusted income from moving to a less expensive apartment that still costs more than 40% of adjusted income. This section would help to ease the potentially adverse effects of the limitation by raising the 40% of adjusted monthly income rent burden limitation to 40% of monthly income.

INCREASED FLEXIBILITY FOR SALE OF PROPERTIES UNDER ASSET CONTROL AREA AGREEMENTS

Section ____ would amend section 204(h)(2) of the National Housing Act to allow HUD to establish an exception to the definition of "eligible asset" for those properties for which rehabilitation is or becomes infeasible, or for which the best use is determined to be as open land or park space, effectively excluding those properties from the requirements of that section. Section 204(h) sets forth special procedures for FHA single family property disposition, and currently provides that HUD must dispose of all "eligible assets" in accordance with the terms of that section, including the terms of paragraph (5)(A)(iii) and paragraph (5)(B)(ii), which provide that properties acquired under an Asset Control Area ("ACA") agreement must be rehabilitated into livable homes. The changes made by this proposal would relieve the ACA partners from having to manage rehabilitation of properties where that use is not the best use and/or where rehabilitation is not feasible.

TECHNICAL CORRECTION TO NATIONAL HOUSING ACT AMENDMENT

Section 207 of HUD's FY 2002 appropriations Act amended section 203(c) of the National Housing Act to allow a change in premium for FHA single family programs insured under sections 203(k) and 234 of the National Housing Act. Section 207(a)(1) contained some technical drafting errors in its amendment to section 203(c)(1). Section ___ would amend section 207(a)(1) to correct these errors and would deem the amendment to be effective on November 26, 2001 (the date of enactment of HUD's FY 2002 appropriations Act).

I was in the room, as was Joel Kaplan. Mitch never said anything like that about putting a value on human life. That account is wrong.

The discussions that night largely were between (i) Delay and Nickles and (ii) Daschle and Gephardt.

Mitch just talked to Julie Kosterlitz, told her he had not made any statements about the value of a life. He was profuse about what an extraordinary effort it was to get this legislation together in such a short time and it was true bi-partisan compromise. He said that there were discussions on patterning the program after the police/fire benefits, which at the time were 250,000 or a multiple of that. Also that there was a very real time predicament in getting the airline system up and running again- and you had to deal with the liability issue to do that, and of course there were real economic, commerce and public confidence issues with getting the planes back in the air.

Julie is also interested in talking to staff about their version of events so I will pass your names on to her- (If you all call unsolicited it may look a little staged)

I was in the room, as was Joel Kaplan. Mitch never said anything like that about putting a value on human life. That account is wrong.

The discussions that night largely were between (i) Delay and Nickles and (ii) Daschle and Gephardt.

Subject: victims comp discussions

The National Journal is doing a story about how the federal government allocates scarce resources and how resources were allocated post-9-11. She is looking into the victims comp fund negotiations.

Sources she has talked to have told her that Senator Daschle said you can't put a value on a human life and Mitch said- yes I can and it is $37,850 She has also heard that Mitch was advocating for the collateral offset provision, and that there was a discussion about making this an appropriation as opposed to an entitlement.

She would like to know if this is a true accounting of these negotiations/discussions. She would also like to talk with Mitch or any staff involved in these discussions to get a more well-rounded version of events. Her deadline, of course, is today.

Given the limited timing, OMB GC cannot assess all of these provisions before today's 4:45 deadline, but I will provide comments on Section 301, which would cap the assessment for SSA processing attorney fees at $100 or 6.3%, whichever is lower. We would be interested in finding out how the $100 / 6.3% figure was reached and whether the previous provision of 6.3% captured fees highly in excess of $100.

since you have a clear recollection, i'd suggest you call her and give her that account on background -- if being an "administration official who was

I agree that (d) is superfluous. The choice of law matches up with House bill except for part (b)(1) giving district court some discretion to decide that another state's law applies.

I looked at the base bill. Why do they need (d) "claims against terrorists" if they don't have our punitives section? There isn't anything that could be perceived as a limitation on any form of recovery.

also -- is the choice of law section right?

The Honorable Don Young
Chairman, Committee on Transportation
and Infrastructure
House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the--

General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would, with some significant changes, provide for the same program of Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided immediately following September 11, 2001, to commercial airlines and their agents. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks.

The Administration supported the direct compensation and loan guarantee authority in H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (Pub. L. No. 107-42 (Sept. 22, 2001)), for commercial air carriers for a number of reasons unique to that industry and time. Commercial airliners had been used as the instrument for the terrorist attacks, air travel had been totally disrupted and was newly feared by many travelers, and the U.S. economy benefits in significant measure from continued viability of this commercial sector and the travel services it provides to businesses nationwide. The President's call after September 11 for the Nation to counter terrorism in part by reengaging in daily economic activity was critical to the effort to avoid a significant economic downturn, and the enactment of H.R. 2926 at that time was a highly visible case of the Federal Government's decisiveness in meeting our common objective. Because the U.S.-flag air carriers are a symbol of the United States both at home and abroad--and subject to attack for that reason--the compensation payments for air carriers were also in the interests of our foreign policy objectives world-wide.

Overall, the Administration believes that the best, most even-handed approach to recovery from the attacks of September 11 for all industries is couched in the President's proposals for economic stimulus, recently acted on in part by Congress, and his Budget Request for fiscal year 2003. This combination of pro-growth Federal spending measures has, in our view, already had a beneficial effect on the economic outlook, and has gone far to revive the markets for the Nation's goods and services, including the non-commercial aviation sector. In an even-handed way, this approach seeks to lift the economic situation of industries across the economy.

Our experience with implementation of H.R. 2926 also indicates that the provisions of H.R. 3347 contain a number of practical drawbacks. Most important, while the number of entities that might qualify in the commercial aviation industry for benefits may reach 600, the number of "general aviation entities and their employees" covered by H.R. 3347 may number in the many thousands. "[G]eneral aviation entities" is imprecise phraseology and could be argued to cover a wide range of businesses, everything from companies that make aviation charts to those that supply specialty items sold in aviation catalogs and shops featuring an aviation theme. The staff resources at the Department are already strained implementing H.R. 2926, and enactment of H.R. 3347 would place a very substantial additional burden on them.

Another substantial difference between the two bills and a concern in the case of H.R. 3347 is that the objectively grounded formula for allocating limited funding among recipients in H.R. 2926 (proportion of "available seat miles" or "revenue ton miles") is, of necessity, omitted from H.R. 3347. We are not aware of objective data that would provide a defensible basis for allocation of the limited funding in H.R. 3347 among qualified recipients. To take a simple example, what basis would exist to balance claims about lost sales among aircraft manufacturers, their own employees, and suppliers to that industry? It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. The commercial insurance industry has already objected to the continuation of the existing program on behalf of commercial air carriers. Rather than enacting a new program, the Department believes that the House-passed general terrorism insurance legislation (H.R. 3210) now pending in Congress makes more sense for the Nation's industries.

Finally, although section 2(c) of the bill would provide that the $5.5 billion in spending under the bill (potentially offset in part by reduced spending under H.R. 2926) would constitute emergency spending under budget rules, the spending would nonetheless exacerbate the problem of budget deficits in the wake of September 11. We firmly believe that the President's proposals to reinvigorate the economy are the better means to address the finances of this and other industries.

For these reasons, we oppose passage of H.R. 3347. We do appreciate the opportunity to provide our views. The Office of Management and Budget advises that it has no objection to the submission of these views for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely yours,

Norman Y. Mineta

Log of Efforts to Cooperate with Senate Governmental Affairs Committee

Date	Event
3/27/02	Lieberman sends request letter to Andy Card seeking information concerning White House contacts with and about Enron.
4/11/02	Flanigan, Kavanaugh, Berenson, and Bartolomucci meet with Lieberman staff (Lesser, Rubinstein and others) in an effort to narrow request or identify priorities. Lieberman staff refuses and asks instead for a letter stating White House intentions with respect to compliance.
4/19/02	Judge Gonzales sends Lieberman letter articulating objections to request and promising cooperation.
4/24/02	Lieberman sends letter to Gonzales requesting further information concerning efforts being undertaken by the White House, time frames for compliance, and positions with respect to categories of information.
4/29/02	Gonzales distributes survey form to all commissioned officers plus representatives of CEA, OVP, CEQ, USTR, and OMB seeking information relating to contacts with or about Enron. Survey form is released to media Gonzales sends letter back to Lieberman responding to 4/24 inquiry and apprising him of steps taken and rough timetable for compliance (early to mid-June) Kavanaugh speaks with Joyce Rechstaffen to inform her of letter and Survey. Berenson informs minority staff.
4/30/02	Berenson and Bartolomucci meet with CEA (Furchtgott-Roth), CEQ (Boling), OVP (Addington), USTR (Freiberg), and OMB (Perry, Laragy) to discuss survey and provide instructions for circulation and response. Representatives are told to distribute to all those reasonably likely to have responsive information, to create a list of recipients and forward to WHCO, and to direct responses to be provided directly to WHCO.

The Honorable Don Young
Chairman, Committee on Transportation
and Infrastructure
House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the--

General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would, with some significant changes, provide for the same program of Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided immediately following September 11, 2001, to commercial airlines and their agents. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks.

The Administration supported the direct compensation and loan guarantee authority in H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (Pub. L. No. 107-42 (Sept. 22, 2001)), for commercial air carriers for a number of reasons unique to that industry and time. Commercial airliners had been used as the instrument for the terrorist attacks, air travel had been totally disrupted and was newly feared by many travelers, and the U.S. economy benefits in significant measure from continued viability of this commercial sector and the travel services it provides to businesses nationwide. The President's call after September 11 for the Nation to counter terrorism in part by reengaging in daily economic activity was critical to the effort to avoid a significant economic downturn, and the enactment of H.R. 2926 at that time was a highly visible case of the Federal Government's decisiveness in meeting our common objective. Because the U.S.-flag air carriers are a symbol of the United States both at home and abroad--and subject to attack for that reason--the compensation payments for air carriers were also in the interests of our foreign policy objectives world-wide.

Overall, the Administration believes that the best, most even-handed approach to recovery from the attacks of September 11 for all industries is couched in the President's proposals for economic stimulus, recently acted on in part by Congress, and his Budget

Request for fiscal year 2003. This combination of pro-growth Federal spending measures has, in our view, already had a beneficial effect on the economic outlook, and has gone far to revive the markets for the Nation's goods and services, including the non-commercial aviation sector. In an even-handed way, this approach seeks to lift the economic situation of industries across the economy.

Our experience with implementation of H.R. 2926 also indicates that the provisions of H.R. 3347 contain a number of practical drawbacks. Most important, while the number of entities that might qualify in the commercial aviation industry for benefits may reach 600, the number of "general aviation entities and their employees" covered by H.R. 3347 may number in the many thousands. "[G]eneral aviation entities" is imprecise phraseology and could be argued to cover a wide range of businesses, everything from companies that make aviation charts to those that supply specialty items sold in aviation catalogs and shops featuring an aviation theme. The staff resources at the Department are already strained implementing H.R. 2926, and enactment of H.R. 3347 would place a very substantial additional burden on them.

Another substantial difference between the two bills and a concern in the case of H.R. 3347 is that the objectively grounded formula for allocating limited funding among recipients in H.R. 2926 (proportion of "available seat miles" or "revenue ton miles") is, of necessity, omitted from H.R. 3347. We are not aware of objective data that would provide a defensible basis for allocation of the limited funding in H.R. 3347 among qualified recipients. To take a simple example, what basis would exist to balance claims about lost sales among aircraft manufacturers, their own employees, and suppliers to that industry? It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. The commercial insurance industry has already objected to the continuation of the existing program on behalf of commercial air carriers. Rather than enacting a new program, the Department believes that the House-passed general terrorism insurance legislation (H.R. 3210) now pending in Congress makes more sense for the Nation's industries.

Finally, although section 2(c) of the bill would provide that the $5.5 billion in spending under the bill (potentially offset in part by reduced spending under H.R. 2926) would constitute emergency spending under budget rules, the spending would nonetheless exacerbate the problem of budget deficits in the wake of September 11. We firmly believe that the President's proposals to reinvigorate the economy are the better means to address the finances of this and other industries.

For these reasons, we oppose passage of H.R. 3347. We do appreciate the opportunity to provide our views. The Office of Management and Budget advises that it has no objection to the submission of these views for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely yours,

Norman Y. Mineta

The Council on National Policy is a very old, very established conservative group headed by former OMB Director James Miller.

I assume Judge Gonzales is speaking about the judicial crisis; I am speaking about cloning and life issues. Both are closed to the press.

Their Washington meeting is later this week.

Dear Chairman Byrd and Senator Stevens:

Thank you for your April 17 letter to Assistant to the President for Homeland Security Tom Ridge renewing your previous invitations for him to testify before the Committee.

We look forward to working with you and the committee as deliberations begin on the fiscal year &028 supplemental, and fiscal year &038 appropriations bills. As you are aware, the Secretaries of Transportation, Agriculture, State, Treasury, Interior, Health & Human Services as well as the Attorney General and the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency are scheduled to testify before the Senate Appropriations Committee this week on the President,s funding requests for homeland security. We expect the Secretary of Defense will also testify subject to his travels to Central Asia.

Regarding your request, Governor Ridge and his staff remain fully prepared to meet with you and to provide appropriate briefings to you, the Committee, and Committee staff. Consistent with the policy long maintained by the Executive Branch and long respected by the Congress, Presidential advisors such as Governor Ridge do not formally testify before Congress on policy matters.

Thank you again for your letter. We look forward to continuing to consult and work with you on homeland security issues.

Sincerely,

Nicholas E. Calio

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the--

General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would, with some significant changes, provide for the same program of Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided immediately following September 11, 2001, to commercial airlines and their agents. Subject: Sovereign Immunity Bill

Brett:

Chairman Leahy and Senator Hatch have been asked by the technology lobby to pass some legislation to force States to waive their sovereign immunity with respect to intellectual property infringement. State infringement cases do not constitute a substantial percentage of the total infringement actions.
Nonetheless, the tech companies are worried that foreign governments (e.g., China) will not allow them to sue for infringement over there if foreign companies are not allowed to sue U.S. State governments for similar infringements over here.

The Leahy approach is to bar a State from being a plaintiff in an intellectual property infringement case unless it waives sovereign immunity defense as a defendant for all such actions. [Note: The Dems also want to pass something that would let them crow: "Even Republican Senators rejected the Rehnquist Court's sovereign immunity jurisprudence. It must be outside the mainstream. " Of course, a waiver, as opposed to an abrogation, would not be wholly inconsistent with Florida Prepaid.]

When Leahy tried to force his bill through Committee, Senators Kyl, Sessions, and McConnell opposed the Leahy bill with numerous amendments in order to force a negotiation. These Senators are concerned that the Leahy bill is too broad and tends to erode the sovereign immunity protection that States enjoy.

While the State colleges and universities share this concern, NAAG and NGA have no position.

In an effort to provide some relief to the tech companies while retaining sovereign immunity protection for the States, we have come up with a tentative approach of allowing the Federal government to sue States for money damages arising from infringement and allowing private persons to sue for injunctive relief. These tactics come from footnote 9 in the Garrett case.

We would appreciate your thoughts on this approach and any other suggestions that you may have.

The Honorable Don Young
Chairman, Committee on Transportation
and Infrastructure
House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the--

General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would, with some significant changes, provide for the same program of Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided immediately following September 11, 2001, to commercial airlines and their agents. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks.

The Administration supported the direct compensation and loan guarantee authority in H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (Pub. L. No. 107-42 (Sept. 22, 2001)), for commercial air carriers for a number of reasons unique to that industry and time. Commercial airliners had been used as the instrument for the terrorist attacks, air travel had been totally disrupted and was newly feared by many travelers, and the U.S. economy benefits in significant measure from continued viability of this commercial sector and the travel services it provides to businesses nationwide. The President's call after September 11 for the Nation to counter terrorism in part by reengaging in daily economic activity was critical to the effort to avoid a significant economic downturn, and the enactment of H.R. 2926 at that time was a highly visible case of the Federal Government's decisiveness in meeting our common objective. Because the U.S.-flag air carriers are a symbol of the United States both at home and abroad--and subject to attack for that reason--the compensation payments for air carriers were also in the interests of our foreign policy objectives world-wide.

Overall, the Administration believes that the best, most even-handed approach to recovery from the attacks of September 11 for all industries is couched in the President's proposals for economic stimulus, recently acted on in part by Congress, and his Budget

Request for fiscal year 2003. This combination of pro-growth Federal spending measures has, in our view, already had a beneficial effect on the economic outlook, and has gone far to revive the markets for the Nation's goods and services, including the non-commercial aviation sector. In an even-handed way, this approach seeks to lift the economic situation of industries across the economy.

Our experience with implementation of H.R. 2926 also indicates that the provisions of H.R. 3347 contain a number of practical drawbacks. Most important, while the number of entities that might qualify in the commercial aviation industry for benefits may reach 600, the number of "general aviation entities and their employees" covered by H.R. 3347 may number in the many thousands. "[G]eneral aviation entities" is imprecise phraseology and could be argued to cover a wide range of businesses, everything from companies that make aviation charts to those that supply specialty items sold in aviation catalogs and shops featuring an aviation theme. The staff resources at the Department are already strained implementing H.R. 2926, and enactment of H.R. 3347 would place a very substantial additional burden on them.

Another substantial difference between the two bills and a concern in the case of H.R. 3347 is that the objectively grounded formula for allocating limited funding among recipients in H.R. 2926 (proportion of "available seat miles" or "revenue ton miles") is, of necessity, omitted from H.R. 3347. We are not aware of objective data that would provide a defensible basis for allocation of the limited funding in H.R. 3347 among qualified recipients. To take a simple example, what basis would exist to balance claims about lost sales among aircraft manufacturers, their own employees, and suppliers to that industry? It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. The commercial insurance industry has already objected to the continuation of the existing program on behalf of commercial air carriers. Rather than enacting a new program, the Department believes that the House-passed general terrorism insurance legislation (H.R. 3210) now pending in Congress makes more sense for the Nation's industries.

Finally, although section 2(c) of the bill would provide that the $5.5 billion in spending under the bill (potentially offset in part by reduced spending under H.R. 2926) would constitute emergency spending under budget rules, the spending would nonetheless exacerbate the problem of budget deficits in the wake of September 11. We firmly believe that the President's proposals to reinvigorate the economy are the better means to address the finances of this and other industries.

For these reasons, we oppose passage of H.R. 3347. We do appreciate the opportunity to provide our views. The Office of Management and Budget advises that it has no objection to the submission of these views for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely yours,

Norman Y. Mineta

Dear Chairman Byrd and Senator Stevens:

Thank you for your April 17 letter to Assistant to the President for Homeland Security Tom Ridge renewing your previous invitations for him to testify before the Committee.

We look forward to working with you and the committee as deliberations begin on the fiscal year &028 supplemental, and fiscal year &038 appropriations bills. As you are aware, the Secretaries of Transportation, Agriculture, State, Treasury, Interior, Health & Human Services as well as the Attorney General and the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency are scheduled to testify before the Senate Appropriations Committee this week on the President,s funding requests for homeland security. We expect the Secretary of Defense will also testify subject to his travels to Central Asia.

Regarding your request, Governor Ridge and his staff remain fully prepared to meet with you and to provide appropriate briefings to you, the Committee, and Committee staff. Consistent with the policy long maintained by the Executive Branch and long respected by the Congress, Presidential advisors such as Governor Ridge do not formally testify before Congress on policy matters.

Thank you again for your letter. We look forward to continuing to consult and work with you on homeland security issues.

Sincerely,

Nicholas E. Calio

Can we please have a brief meeting to discuss the record-keeping issues relating to the PHSAC?

Ed, my discussion with GSA about the MOU this a.m. was not easy, because I haven't been privy to all the prior discussions he's had with NARA, you, Kim,
Frank, etc.

I need to know:

1) Will the records of the PHSAC and subcomponents be Presidential Records (Brett)?
2) Ed, would you rather be responsible for making legal determinations about FOIA issues (specifically, whether FOIA execmptions take certain documents out of the public disclosure requirement under FACA), or would you rather have GSA shoulder that burden?
3) Has someone agreed that OHS, not GSA, would be responsible for making the documents of the PHSAC contemporaneously available to the public? This could be a major logistical burden and would be hard to do out of the OEOB if we have to let people in to look at hard copies, but if the docs are presidential records, or if we want to keep control over which docs are and aren't disclosed under

FOIA, we may want to take on that responsibility.

S. 2079

S. 2079 would effect four changes in current law. First, it would permit judicial review of amendments to VA's schedule of ratings for disabilities. Second, it would change the standard of review applied by the United States Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims (CAVC) in challenges to findings of fact made by VA in adjudicating claims for benefits. Third, it would expand the jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to permit review of CAVC decisions on rules of law not involving the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation. Fourth, it would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses under the Equal Access to Justice Act to non-attorney practitioners.

Review of Rating Schedule

Section 1 of S. 2079 would permit judicial review of VA's actions in adopting or revising provisions of its Rating Schedule. Such review is currently prohibited by 38 U.S.C. §§ 502 and 7252(b). Under S. 2079, such review could be sought either through a rule-making challenge filed directly with the Federal Circuit or as part of an appeal from a VA decision on a benefit claim, which is presented first to the CAVC and may thereafter be appealed to the Federal Circuit. The bill would permit direct challenges in the Federal Circuit only with respect to a revision of the Rating Schedule occurring after the date of enactment of this bill. However, the bill would impose no similar limitation on challenges brought in connection with an appeal from a VA benefit decision. Accordingly, all changes to VA's Rating Schedule made at any time in the past would apparently be subject to review in such appeals.

VA does not support this change. In the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, Congress prohibited judicial review of the Rating Schedule because of the disruptive effect such review may have on VA claims processing. This change unnecessarily revisits the issues that were resolved in the compromises that led to enactment of the VJRA. Those compromises were reached in recognition of the fact that empowering courts to review VA's rating schedule will result in additional time-consuming litigation concerning complex medical and vocational matters on which courts have no particular expertise or experience.

Pursuant to 38 U.S.C. § 1155, the disability ratings assigned in the Rating Schedule are based upon the "average impairments of earning capacity resulting from such injuries in civil occupations" and are to be revised by VA "in accordance with experience." As the statute contemplates, the provisions of VA's Rating Schedule are based on VA's judgment and accumulated experience in evaluating the medical, vocational, and economic factors relating to the effect of specific disabilities on earning capacity. Disputes concerning the content of the Rating Schedule would not involve the type of legal issues or case-specific fact issues that appellate courts are ordinarily called upon to decide. Rather, they would involve challenges to VA's informed judgment concerning the average economic effects of specific medical conditions.

Appellate courts are ill-equipped to assess the many medical, social, economic, and experiential factors that inform VA's judgment on these issues, and the CAVC and Federal Circuit would be particularly hampered in this endeavor by the lack of any procedures for developing an evidentiary record for such review. Even if an appellate court could acquire sufficient information to permit judicial review of these discretionary judgments, the process would be extremely time-consuming and burdensome on VA and the courts alike.

Apart from the disruptive effects that would ensue if a reviewing court modifies or invalidates portions of the Rating Schedule, judicial review may limit VA's flexibility to adopt beneficial rating provisions based primarily on its experience and expertise. Although 38 U.S.C. § 1155 indicates that VA's experience will be the primary guide in adopting changes to the Rating Schedule, judicial review would necessarily result in increased formalization and a greater need for specific medical and vocational evidence to support each rating. Rather than benefiting veterans, in our view, the rigidity that would likely follow from judicial review may adversely affect the historically liberal nature of VA's Rating Schedule.

For these reasons, determinations concerning the average impairment of earning capacity due to specific conditions should continue to be committed to VA's informed discretion. The costs that may be associated with this provision cannot be predicted, but would depend on the number of challenges filed under this provision and the outcome of such challenges.

Standard of Review for Findings of Fact

Section 2 of S. 2079 would change the standard applied by the CAVC in reviewing findings of fact made by the Board of Veterans' Appeals. Currently, the CAVC is authorized to set aside any "clearly erroneous" finding of material fact. S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to set aside any finding of material fact that is "not reasonably supported by a preponderance of the evidence."

The "clearly erroneous" standard is a well-known standard of appellate review. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a). In contrast, the "preponderance" standard is ordinarily used as a standard of proof describing a party's evidentiary burden before a fact-finding body such as the Board of Veterans' Appeals. As the Supreme Court has noted, standards of proof and standards of appellate review serve very different functions and are not interchangeable. Concrete Pipe and Products of California, Inc. v. Construction Laborers Pension Trust for Southern California, 508 U.S. 602, 622-23 (1993). Standards of proof describe the degree of evidence needed to convince the finder of fact in the first instance. Standards of appellate review, on the other hand, describe the degree of confidence an appellate court must have in the fact finder's decision, and ordinarily accord some deference to the fact finder's decision.

There would be some incongruity in defining the CAVC's standard of review in terms of a standard of proof customarily employed only by initial fact finders. More troubling, however, is the fact that the "preponderance" standard would require the CAVC to decide claims without any deference to VA's findings of fact. Under the "benefit of the doubt" rule in section 5107(b) of title 38, United States Code, any findings of fact adverse to the veteran must be based on a preponderance of evidence. Section 2 of S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to independently decide whether a preponderance of evidence supports each factual finding, allowing no deference to the Board, which holds hearings, takes testimony, and seeks additional evidence as necessary.

This Committee's 1988 report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act discussed the importance of according deference to the Board's "expertise as an arbiter of the specialized types of factual issues that arise in the context of claims for VA benefits." This approach comports with the ordinary practice of according deference to factual findings made by administrative agencies, in view of the agencies' expertise, familiarity with the types of evidence and evidentiary issues involved, and ability to evaluate the credibility of testimony and other forms of evidence. Under the Administrative Procedure Act, findings of fact by most agencies are reviewed under the deferential "substantial evidence" standard.

Even if the Committee believes that a standard less restrictive than the "clearly erroneous" standard is warranted, it should not take the drastic step of permitting de novo review of VA fact finding, as S. 2079 would. As this Committee noted in its report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, there are other intermediate review standards available, such as the "substantial evidence" standard. Permitting de novo review would derogate from the Board's primary expertise in weighing evidence, evaluating the credibility of evidence, and making factual determinations on complex medical issues. It may also be expected to increase the CAVC's responsibilities and caseload. Moreover, it would depart from established practice in American jurisprudence of tiered layers of judicial review and would uniquely deprive VA of the deference routinely accorded to factual findings of virtually all other agencies. The anomaly of a court performing precisely the same function as an agency and wielding the same fact-finding authority is both redundant and inconsistent with the traditional roles of the executive and judicial branches of government.

Finally, I want to make clear that the CAVC's current standard of review does not in any way deprive veterans of the benefit of the doubt accorded by law. Under current law, the CAVC routinely considers whether the Board has applied the "benefit of the doubt" standard, whether the Board has adequately explained the application of that standard to the facts of each case, and whether there is a plausible basis for the Board's conclusions under that standard. This review plainly ensures that the benefit of the doubt is accorded to veterans whenever applicable.

We cannot predict the costs that may be associated with this provision, as they would depend largely upon the outcome of individual cases.

Federal Circuit Review of Issues of Law

Section 3 of S. 2079 would authorize the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to review decisions of the CAVC on a rule of law. Currently, the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions with respect to the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation or with respect to a constitutional question. S. 2079 would clarify that the Federal Circuit may decide legal questions that do not involve a statute, regulation, or constitutional provision. Proponents of this provision have suggested that it is needed to permit review of judicially-created legal rules, such as those involving equitable tolling of time limits or the so-called "treating physician" rule adopted by courts in Social Security benefit claims. VA does not agree with that view. We do not believe that purely legal issues are insulated from review by the current statute. Notably, the Federal Circuit has decided challenges concerning judicially-created legal principles under the existing statute, including issues pertaining to equitable tolling and the treating physician rule. See Bailey v. West, 160 F.3d 1360 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (en banc); White v. Principi, 243 F.3d 1378 (Fed. Cir. 2001).

Although we do not believe this provision is necessary, VA has no objection to it. Permitting judicial review of purely legal matters is consistent with the purpose of the Veterans' Judicial Review Act and, we believe, with the Federal Circuit's current practice.

We would, however, recommend one change to this provision. S. 2079 would amend section 7292(c) of title 38, United States Code, to state that the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions on a rule of law. This would ensure that the Federal Circuit would retain exclusive jurisdiction over review of decisions of the CAVC. We believe it would also be necessary to make this change in section 7292(a), the provision the Federal Circuit has identified as prescribing its jurisdiction in those cases. See Forshey v. Principi, No. 99-7064 (Fed. Cir. Apr. 1, 2002).

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

Fees for Non-Attorney Practitioners

Section 4 of S. 2079 would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses for the services of non-attorney practitioners admitted to practice under that court's rules. Specifically, the bill would state that the CAVC's authority to award fees and expenses of attorneys under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b) shall include the authority to award fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners "as if such non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court."

REV_00144608

As an initial matter, we believe this bill should refer to subsection (d) of section 2412, rather than to subsection (b). The Federal Courts Administration Act of 1992 amended subsection (d) to give the CAVC authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of attorneys under that subsection. We are aware of no cases in which the CAVC has awarded fees and expenses under the separate authority of subsection (b) of section 2412.

VA has no objection to permitting payment of reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners. We note that the CAVC currently has authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners who are supervised by an attorney. This legislation would extend that authority to cases involving unsupervised non-attorney practitioners who have been admitted to practice under the CAVC's rules.

VA does not, however, support the language in section 4 providing for awards "as if [the] non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court." This language may require that fees for non-attorney practitioners be commensurate with fees for attorneys. Although we recognize the valuable services provided by non-attorney practitioners before the CAVC, their services ordinarily are not compensated at the same level as services of a licensed attorney. The Equal Access to Justice Act contemplates that fees generally shall correspond to the market rates for the kind and quality of services furnished. Accordingly, the CAVC should retain the authority to pay fees for attorneys and non-attorneys at different rates.

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

STATEMENT OF

ANTHONY J. PRINCIPI

SECRETARY OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

BEFORE THE

SENATE COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS

MAY 2, 2002

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee:

Thank you for the opportunity to testify today on a number of legislative items of interest to veterans.

S. 984

This bill would increase the beneficiary travel mileage rates to reimbursement rates (applicable to privately owned vehicles) established by the General Services Administration (GSA). It would also include a new group of veterans among those entitled to beneficiary travel benefits under 38 U.S.C. § 111, specifically veterans whose travel is in connection with treatment for a non-service connected disability at a non-VA facility, if the treatment is recommended by VA medical personnel at a facility that is not able to provide the recommended treatment.

VA does not support S. 984. While VA's reimbursement rates are less than those established by GSA, any increase would decrease funds available for direct medical care. It is estimated that an increase in beneficiary mileage reimbursement rates to GSA's level of 36.5 cents would cost approximately $97 million that would have to come from medical care funding. Even a modest increase of 5 cents per mile would cost approximately $20 million. We cannot support diminishing VA's capacity to provide direct patient care to provide an added benefit to the very limited groups of veterans eligible for travel reimbursement benefits.

S. 1113 and S. 2025

Both of these bills would enhance the special pension paid by VA to those who have been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, by increasing the monthly benefit to $1,000 (it is currently $600) and indexing the rate to annual increases in the cost of living. S. 2025 would, in addition, provide that the special-pension eligibility shall commence on the first day of the month beginning after the date of the act for which an individual is awarded the Medal of Honor. Currently, the period of eligibility does not begin until after the military service concerned certifies to VA that the Medal of Honor has been awarded and the recipient applies for the pension. Under S. 2025, all individuals in receipt of the special pension on the date of enactment would be entitled to lump-sum payments representing the additional amounts of pension that would have been payable had they been eligible from the first of the month following the acts for which they received the medals. We note that as of March 2002, there were only 143 Medal of Honor recipients drawing the special pension.

Last October we notified the Committee that we favor an increase of the monthly payments to $1,000 and the indexing of the rate, as provided in S. 1113. We also support the earlier effective dates for the awards called for in S. 2025. We are aware of situations in which there have been lengthy delays – through no fault of the recipients -- in the awarding of Medals of Honor. The proposed effective-date amendment would be more equitable than current law, which bases periods of eligibility on when the Government acts to award Medals of Honor. We believe, however, there may be an internal inconsistency in the language of sections 2(a) and 2(c) of S. 2025 concerning the calculation of retroactive payments which we do not believe was intended by Congress. We would be pleased to work with the Committee staff to revise the bill to correct this technical problem. We would defer to the views of the Department of Justice regarding the merits of the criminal-law amendments in S. 2025.

We estimate the costs associated with enactment of the rate increases in either S. 1113 or S. 2025 to be $1.6 million for FY 2003, $7.4 million for the five-year period FY 2003 through FY 2007, and $13.3 million for the 10-year period FY 2003 through FY 2012. We have not yet estimated the costs of the effective-date amendment in S. 2025.

This bill would increase the income threshold used to define the group of low-income veterans who are exempted from paying the outpatient pharmacy co-payment. The exempted group would be expanded to include veterans who, for purposes of receiving VA health care, are deemed unable to defray necessary expenses of care, i.e., those with incomes below VA's "means-test" threshold. A provision of the bill would also prohibit the Secretary from increasing the pharmacy co-payment until VA begins collecting co-payments for outpatient care.

Currently, the low-income exemption applies only to those veterans whose incomes do not exceed the maximum annual rate of pension payable under 38 U.S.C. § 1521 were they eligible for such pension. This is a much smaller group composed of very low-income veterans. Although VA appreciates the desire to standardize the definition of "low-income" veteran for purposes of both health care eligibility and the pharmacy co-payment exemption, VA cannot support S.1408. The proposal would significantly reduce much needed revenue upon which the Department relies to continue providing services. We also recommend deletion of the provision deferring increases in the amount of the pharmacy co-payment. VA is already implementing new regulations pertaining to both the pharmacy co-payment and the outpatient co-payment.

S. 1517 would enhance certain aspects of the Montgomery GI Bill (MGIB). Specifically, the bill would amend the chapter 30 MGIB-Active Duty program by eliminating both the $1200 pay reduction currently required to participate in the chapter 30 MGIB program and the election required of those who choose not to participate. We defer to the Department of Defense (DOD) on these issues. S. 1517 would also add a new category of individuals under the chapter 30 program who would be entitled to transfer their entire entitlement or a portion of it to one or more of their dependents. Under this provision, individuals with not less than 15 years of active duty service would become eligible to transfer MGIB education benefits. VA would be responsible for funding the transferred benefits paid to dependents. Since this proposal does not support the readjustment goals of the MGIB, we do not concur in its enactment.

S. 1517 also would extend the time limitation for using an individual's chapter 30 MGIB entitlement from 10 years after the date of discharge or release from active duty to 20 years. In like manner, it would provide for a 20-year delimiting period for members of the MGIB-Selected Reserve as well. VA does not support these provisions. In our view, extending the 10-year period is not consistent with the stated purposes of the MGIB. We believe that 10 years is sufficient time for most individuals to make the readjustment from military to civilian life. We defer to the views of the DOD on the delimiting date extension for the MGIB Selected Reserve program.

Finally, S. 1517 would provide for increased MGIB education benefits for those members of the Selected Reserve who are called to active duty for more than one year for a contingency operation. VA defers to DOD's views on this matter.

This bill would authorize $2 million for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as may be needed for each subsequent fiscal year for VA to continue its efforts in responding to, and training of VA and other health-care professionals for, the medical consequences of bio-terrorism.

We support increasing VA's efforts in the area of emergency medical preparedness. However, we believe that the objectives of this legislation should be addressed in the context of other measures being considered that address VA's role in bio-terrorism preparedness.

S. 1576

S. 1576 would extend through December 31, 2011, VA's special authority to treat Gulf War veterans for any disability possibly related to their service in the Gulf, notwithstanding there is insufficient medical evidence to conclude that such disability may be associated with such service. That authority will expire after December 31, 2002. VA supports this proposal.

REV_00144619

S. 1680

S. 1680 would amend the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 (SSCRA) to treat certain National Guard duty as military service under that Act. This legislation would enable National Guard members who are called to active service by their governor in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, or at the request of the President, to qualify for the protections afforded by the SSCRA. Examples of these protections are the six-percent interest rate limitation on pre-existing consumer debt, and stays of judicial proceedings in civil matters.

Because the protections provided under the SSCRA are afforded to individuals serving in military service, the Department of Defense, not VA, is the Federal agency with the primary interest in this Act. The only notable impact on VA would be in our loan guaranty programs. In these areas, VA itself would have to abide by the SSCRA's provisions. The impact of the proposed amendment in this regard would be minimal and the cost to VA would be insignificant. We therefore have no objection to this bill.

Mr. Chairman, thank you for introducing S. 1905 at our request. It contains a variety of needed enhancements to veterans' programs and the ability of the Department to administer them. Among its most significant provisions, it would:

- Confer new authority for VA to provide medical care for newborn children of enrolled women veterans;
- Authorize us to provide dental care to more former prisoners of war; and
- Eliminate certain VA-specific restrictions on numbers of non-career SES members and on who may serve as Deputy Assistant Secretaries.

I strongly urge its favorable consideration.

S. 2003

S. 2003 would amend VA's anti-assignment statute, 38 U.S.C. § 5301, by adding language to prohibit agreements, and collateral security arrangements, between persons receiving monetary VA benefits and third parties. Third parties use these agreements to acquire rights to receive monetary benefits paid to VA beneficiaries.

Let me first say that, because 38 U.S.C. § 5301 generally bars assignment of VA benefits, VA regional offices have not, and do not, honor such agreements. Nevertheless, once funds are paid to a beneficiary, except where the veteran has been found mentally incompetent, VA lacks the ability to oversee how those funds are used. While we would certainly counsel veterans, their dependents and survivors to very carefully consider the full ramifications of assigning their benefits, we believe they should be free to decide how best to manage their own personal finances. We do not, therefore, support enactment of S. 2003.

S. 2043

S. 2043 would extend by five years (through December 31, 2008) VA's authority to provide non-institutional extended care services as part of the medical benefits package furnished to veterans. The bill would also extend through December 31, 2008, mandatory eligibility for nursing home care for veterans with a service-connected disability rated 70% or greater. Finally, S. 2043 would extend by five years the date by which the Secretary must report to Congress on the operation of its long-term care programs established under the Millennium Act. VA supports S. 2043 and the continuation of the Millennium Act non-institutional long-term care provisions.

S. 2044 would amend section 116 of the Millennium Act to direct that we increase funding for specialized mental health services for veterans. The measure directs that we expend $25 million for these programs, but it is not clear whether it would require $25 million for each of three successive years, or over a three-year period. The additional $25 million must also be over and above the baseline amount now being expended for these programs. However, it is unclear if we must expend an additional $25 million over the baseline each year for three successive years, or only over a three-year period. Finally, the measure directs that we consider these funds to be special-purpose funds that we must allocate outside the VERA allocation system.

Although VA appreciates the need to ensure adequate funding for these highly valuable and essential health-care programs, we strongly oppose this bill. We do not believe these programs should be treated differently from other essential treatment programs for allocation of appropriated resources. We also believe it is inappropriate to direct that we allocate funds for programs like this outside of the VERA system.

This legislation would designate the building housing VA's Regional Office in St. Petersburg, Florida as the "Franklin D. Miller Department of Veterans Affairs Regional Office Building." It would also require the Secretary to provide for an appropriate ceremony for, and commemoration of, the new designation on the first Memorial Day that follows enactment of the bill. Finally, the bill would require the Secretary to permanently display a copy of Mr. Miller's Medal of Honor citation in the building's lobby. We respectfully defer to the views of Congress on the naming of Federal property.

S. 2073

This bill would provide retroactive entitlement to Medal of Honor special pension to Mr. Ed W. Freeman. As indicated above, VA supports enactment of S. 2025, which would "make whole" special pensioners for whom the awarding of the Medal of Honor was delayed. We would prefer that this issue be addressed generally through enactment of S. 2025, rather than through special legislation such as S. 2073.

S. 2074 and S. 2229

Both S. 2074 and S. 2229 would increase the rates of compensation for service-disabled veterans and for dependency and indemnity compensation paid to survivors of veterans whose deaths were service-related, effective December 1, 2002. As provided in the President's FY 2003 budget request, the rate of increase would be the same as the COLA that will be provided under current law to veterans' pension and Social Security recipients, which is currently estimated to be 1.8 percent. The proposed COLA is necessary to protect the benefits of affected veterans and their survivors from the eroding effects of inflation. These worthy beneficiaries deserve no less.

We estimate that enactment of this COLA would cost $279 million during FY 2003, $1.66 billion over the period FY 2003-2007 and $3.45 billion over the period FY 2003-2012.

S. 2229, which you were kind enough to introduce at our request, would also revise the statutory requirement that VA continue to provide extended-care services at 1998 levels. As you know, current law requires VA to maintain staffing and level of extended care services provided in VA facilities at the levels provided during FY 1998. We propose to amend the law to require that VA maintain the overall level of extended care it provided during FY 1998 (i.e., the aggregate of care in provided in VA facilities, care VA contracts for in community nursing homes, and care VA subsidizes in State homes). If VA were required to meet the current mandate regarding care in just VA facilities, it would need to divert to that program an estimated $161.2 million by the end of FY 2004 from other health-care purposes, including community nursing-home care and State nursing-home construction. This would greatly disserve veterans, who benefit from both choice and access to care closer to loved ones.

S. 2079

S. 2079 would effect four changes in current law. First, it would permit judicial review of amendments to VA's schedule of ratings for disabilities. Second, it would change the standard of review applied by the United States Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims (CAVC) in challenges to findings of fact made by VA in adjudicating claims for benefits. Third, it would expand the jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to permit review of CAVC decisions on rules of law not involving the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation. Fourth, it would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses under the Equal Access to Justice Act to non-attorney practitioners.

Review of Rating Schedule

Section 1 of S. 2079 would permit judicial review of VA's actions in adopting or revising provisions of its Rating Schedule. Such review is currently prohibited by 38 U.S.C. §§ 502 and 7252(b). Under S. 2079, such review could be sought either through a rule-making challenge filed directly with the Federal Circuit or as part of an appeal from a VA decision on a benefit claim, which is presented first to the CAVC and may thereafter be appealed to the Federal Circuit. The bill would permit direct challenges in the Federal Circuit only with respect to a revision of the Rating Schedule occurring after the date of enactment of this bill. However, the bill would impose no similar limitation on challenges brought in connection with an appeal from a VA benefit decision. Accordingly, all changes to VA's Rating Schedule made at any time in the past would apparently be subject to review in such appeals.

VA does not support this change. In the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, Congress prohibited judicial review of the Rating Schedule because of the disruptive effect such review may have on VA claims processing. This change unnecessarily revisits the issues that were resolved in the compromises that led to enactment of the VJRA. Those compromises were reached in recognition of the fact that empowering courts to review VA's rating schedule will result in additional time-consuming litigation concerning complex medical and vocational matters on which courts have no particular expertise or experience.

Pursuant to 38 U.S.C. § 1155, the disability ratings assigned in the Rating Schedule are based upon the "average impairments of earning capacity resulting from such injuries in civil occupations" and are to be revised by VA "in accordance with experience." As the statute contemplates, the provisions of

VA's Rating Schedule are based on VA's judgment and accumulated experience in evaluating the medical, vocational, and economic factors relating to the effect of specific disabilities on earning capacity. Disputes concerning the content of the Rating Schedule would not involve the type of legal issues or case-specific fact issues that appellate courts are ordinarily called upon to decide. Rather, they would involve challenges to VA's informed judgment concerning the average economic effects of specific medical conditions.

Appellate courts are ill-equipped to assess the many medical, social, economic, and experiential factors that inform VA's judgment on these issues, and the CAVC and Federal Circuit would be particularly hampered in this endeavor by the lack of any procedures for developing an evidentiary record for such review. Even if an appellate court could acquire sufficient information to permit judicial review of these discretionary judgments, the process would be extremely time-consuming and burdensome on VA and the courts alike.

Apart from the disruptive effects that would ensue if a reviewing court modifies or invalidates portions of the Rating Schedule, judicial review may limit VA's flexibility to adopt beneficial rating provisions based primarily on its experience and expertise. Although 38 U.S.C. § 1155 indicates that VA's experience will be the primary guide in adopting changes to the Rating Schedule, judicial review would necessarily result in increased formalization and a greater need for specific medical and vocational evidence to support each rating. Rather than benefiting veterans, in our view, the rigidity that would likely follow from judicial review may adversely affect the historically liberal nature of VA's Rating Schedule.

For these reasons, determinations concerning the average impairment of earning capacity due to specific conditions should continue to be committed to VA's informed discretion. The costs that may be associated with this provision cannot be predicted, but would depend on the number of challenges filed under this provision and the outcome of such challenges.

Standard of Review for Findings of Fact

Section 2 of S. 2079 would change the standard applied by the CAVC in reviewing findings of fact made by the Board of Veterans' Appeals. Currently, the CAVC is authorized to set aside any "clearly erroneous" finding of material fact. S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to set aside any finding of material fact that is "not reasonably supported by a preponderance of the evidence."

The "clearly erroneous" standard is a well-known standard of appellate review. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a). In contrast, the "preponderance" standard is ordinarily used as a standard of proof describing a party's evidentiary burden before a fact-finding body such as the Board of Veterans' Appeals. As the Supreme Court has noted, standards of proof and standards of appellate review serve very different functions and are not interchangeable. Concrete Pipe and

Products of California, Inc. v. Construction Laborers Pension Trust for Southern California, 508 U.S. 602, 622-23 (1993). Standards of proof describe the degree of evidence needed to convince the finder of fact in the first instance. Standards of appellate review, on the other hand, describe the degree of confidence an appellate court must have in the fact finder's decision, and ordinarily accord some deference to the fact finder's decision.

There would be some incongruity in defining the CAVC's standard of review in terms of a standard of proof customarily employed only by initial fact finders. More troubling, however, is the fact that the "preponderance" standard would require the CAVC to decide claims without any deference to VA's findings of fact. Under the "benefit of the doubt" rule in section 5107(b) of title 38, United States Code, any findings of fact adverse to the veteran must be based on a preponderance of evidence. Section 2 of S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to independently decide whether a preponderance of evidence supports each factual finding, allowing no deference to the Board, which holds hearings, takes testimony, and seeks additional evidence as necessary.

This Committee's 1988 report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act discussed the importance of according deference to the Board's "expertise as an arbiter of the specialized types of factual issues that arise in the context of claims for VA benefits." This approach comports with the ordinary practice of according deference to factual findings made by administrative agencies, in view of the agencies' expertise, familiarity with the types of evidence and evidentiary issues involved, and ability to evaluate the credibility of testimony and other forms of evidence. Under the Administrative Procedure Act, findings of fact by most agencies are reviewed under the deferential "substantial evidence" standard.

Even if the Committee believes that a standard less restrictive than the "clearly erroneous" standard is warranted, it should not take the drastic step of permitting de novo review of VA fact finding, as S. 2079 would. As this Committee noted in its report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, there are other intermediate review standards available, such as the "substantial evidence" standard. Permitting de novo review would derogate from the Board's primary expertise in weighing evidence, evaluating the credibility of evidence, and making factual determinations on complex medical issues. It may also be expected to increase the CAVC's responsibilities and caseload. Moreover, it would depart from established practice in American jurisprudence of tiered layers of judicial review and would uniquely deprive VA of the deference routinely accorded to factual findings of virtually all other agencies. The anomaly of a court performing precisely the same function as an agency and wielding the same fact-finding authority is both redundant and inconsistent with the traditional roles of the executive and judicial branches of government.

Finally, I want to make clear that the CAVC's current standard of review does not in any way deprive veterans of the benefit of the doubt accorded by law.

Under current law, the CAVC routinely considers whether the Board has applied the "benefit of the doubt" standard, whether the Board has adequately explained the application of that standard to the facts of each case, and whether there is a plausible basis for the Board's conclusions under that standard. This review plainly ensures that the benefit of the doubt is accorded to veterans whenever applicable.

We cannot predict the costs that may be associated with this provision, as they would depend largely upon the outcome of individual cases.

Federal Circuit Review of Issues of Law

Section 3 of S. 2079 would authorize the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to review decisions of the CAVC on a rule of law. Currently, the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions with respect to the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation or with respect to a constitutional question. S. 2079 would clarify that the Federal Circuit may decide legal questions that do not involve a statute, regulation, or constitutional provision. Proponents of this provision have suggested that it is needed to permit review of judicially-created legal rules, such as those involving equitable tolling of time limits or the so-called "treating physician" rule adopted by courts in Social Security benefit claims. VA does not agree with that view. We do not believe that purely legal issues are insulated from review by the current statute. Notably, the Federal Circuit has decided challenges concerning judicially-created legal principles under the existing statute, including issues pertaining to equitable tolling and the treating physician rule. See Bailey v. West, 160 F.3d 1360 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (en banc); White v. Principi, 243 F.3d 1378 (Fed. Cir. 2001).

Although we do not believe this provision is necessary, VA has no objection to it. Permitting judicial review of purely legal matters is consistent with the purpose of the Veterans' Judicial Review Act and, we believe, with the Federal Circuit's current practice.

We would, however, recommend one change to this provision. S. 2079 would amend section 7292(c) of title 38, United States Code, to state that the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions on a rule of law. This would ensure that the Federal Circuit would retain exclusive jurisdiction over review of decisions of the CAVC. We believe it would also be necessary to make this change in section 7292(a), the provision the Federal Circuit has identified as prescribing its jurisdiction in those cases. See Forshey v. Principi, No. 99-7064 (Fed. Cir. Apr. 1, 2002).

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

Fees for Non-Attorney Practitioners

Section 4 of S. 2079 would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses for the services of non-attorney practitioners admitted to practice

REV_00144632

under that court's rules. Specifically, the bill would state that the CAVC's authority to award fees and expenses of attorneys under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b) shall include the authority to award fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners "as if such non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court."

As an initial matter, we believe this bill should refer to subsection (d) of section 2412, rather than to subsection (b). The Federal Courts Administration Act of 1992 amended subsection (d) to give the CAVC authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of attorneys under that subsection. We are aware of no cases in which the CAVC has awarded fees and expenses under the separate authority of subsection (b) of section 2412.

VA has no objection to permitting payment of reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners. We note that the CAVC currently has authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners who are supervised by an attorney. This legislation would extend that authority to cases involving unsupervised non-attorney practitioners who have been admitted to practice under the CAVC's rules.

VA does not, however, support the language in section 4 providing for awards "as if [the] non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court." This language may require that fees for non-attorney practitioners be commensurate with fees for attorneys. Although we recognize the valuable services provided by non-attorney practitioners before the CAVC, their services ordinarily are not compensated at the same level as services of a licensed attorney. The Equal Access to Justice Act contemplates that fees generally shall correspond to the market rates for the kind and quality of services furnished. Accordingly, the CAVC should retain the authority to pay fees for attorneys and non-attorneys at different rates.

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

S. 2132

Section 1 of S. 2132 would require the Secretary to establish four Emergency Medical Preparedness Centers within the Veterans Health Administration (VHA). VA employees would staff the proposed Centers, and the Centers would be administered jointly by the offices within the Department that are responsible for directing research and for directing medical emergency preparedness.

The Centers would have four specific purposes. First, they would carry out research and develop methods in detection, diagnosis, vaccination, protection, and treatment of injuries arising from the use of chemical, biological, radiological agents or incendiary or other explosive weapons or devices.

Second, they would provide education, training, and advice on the medical consequences of the use of CBR agents or incendiary or other explosive weapons or devices. Third, the Centers would provide that same education, training, and advice to non-VA health-care professionals. These activities would be accomplished through either the National Disaster Medical System or interagency agreements. Fourth, in the event of a national emergency, they would provide laboratory, epidemiological, medical, or other assistance, as the Secretary considers appropriate, to Federal, State, and local health care agencies and personnel involved in, or responding to, the national emergency.

Each Center would be authorized to solicit and accept contributions of funds and other resources, including grants, to carry out their purposes and activities, subject to the Secretary's approval. Section 1 of this bill would also authorize to be appropriated $20 million for these Centers for each of fiscal years 2003 through 2007. By the bill's terms, such authorization is valid only for funds appropriated separately and solely for purposes of the Centers; otherwise, the authorization is null and void.

Section 1 of S. 2132 is similar to H.R. 3253 on which the Deputy Secretary testified on April 10, 2002, before the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, Subcommittee on Health. However, it incorporates the recommendations VA suggested in its April testimony concerning H.R. 3253 and adds a number of improvements to the House version of the bill. We are grateful to this Committee for having incorporated our recommendations. We strongly support section 1 of S. 2132 and prefer it to H.R. 3253.

In addition, S. 2132 contains two provisions that would expand the purpose and operations of VA non-profit corporations. VA non-profit corporations function as flexible funding mechanisms that support VA research and education. VA non-profits receive and administer funds from outside sources, e.g., NIH grants and donations made by private sponsors, in support of approved VA research projects and education activities. However, the current statute expressly provides that VA may not transfer appropriated funds to the corporations. Section 2(a) of the bill would amend section 7362 of title 38 to permit the transfer of appropriated dollars from VA to a corporation pursuant to a contract or other agreement, including an agreement for actual research. In addition, section 2(b) of the bill would amend VA's sharing authority to treat VA non-profits like affiliated institutions for the purpose of sharing health-care resources related to research, education and training. These changes would broadly enable the corporations to sell services to the Department. The bill also provides that these arrangements would be outside the scope of Federal procurement law and, therefore, would not be subject to full and open competition.

VA objects to these proposals on the grounds that they would alter the fundamental nature of the relationship between VA and the non-profits, which is analogous to that created in a trust. Under current law the corporations exist as a flexible funding mechanism solely to support approved VA research and education. The amendments in section 2 of the bill would make the relationship between Department health-care facilities and VA non-profits more like that with outside contractors or university affiliates; more of an arms-length negotiation rather than one of incontrovertible fiduciary support. This change would also shift the emphasis of VA non-profits away from the primary focus of providing flexible funding support for VA research, education and training to conducting and selling these services to VA. This shift would present a troubling risk of ceding Department control of VA approved research or education to the non-profits.

Section 3 of the bill would amend the title 38 authorities related to VA non-profits by adding a new section 7364A to specifically state that corporation employees assigned to work on approved VA research or education and training shall be considered employees for purposes of Federal tort claim and medical malpractice coverage. VA strongly favors this provision. We note, however, that the phrase, "carried out with Department funds" in the proposed section 7364A(b)(2) might be interpreted to limit this coverage. Much of VA-approved research, or education and training is supported by external funds.

S. 2186

Mr. Chairman, thank you for introducing S. 2186 at our request. This legislation would establish a new Assistant Secretary to perform operations, preparedness, security and law enforcement and a new VA office of Operations Security and Preparedness. We believe this new office is essential if we are to meet our responsibilities of protecting veterans, employees, and visitors to our facilities.

S. 2187

S. 2187 would permit VA, on its own initiative, to care for those affected by a disaster or emergency and those responding to the emergency. The disaster or emergency must be either declared by the President or involve activation of the National Defense Medical System. Currently, in most cases, VA may provide care in such situations only if requested to do so under the Federal Response Plan administered by the Federal Emergency Management Administration. The bill would also require other Federal agencies to reimburse VA for care provided to their officers, employees, and active duty members at rates agreed upon by the agencies. VA would not be required to charge for care provided to other individuals. Finally, the bill would allow VA to provide care in response to disasters and emergency situations before caring for all other beneficiaries except service-connected veterans and active duty military members referred during war or national emergency or who are responding or involved in a disaster or emergency.

VA supports this measure. It would permit VA to respond quickly and obtain reimbursement for care from other Federal entities. We note that the bill also proposes to amend 38 U.S.C. § 1711(b). That provision is now codified at 38 U.S.C. § 1784. We also note that the bill would conflict with an administrative provision that appears in VA's annual appropriation act that requires reimbursement of costs except in specified situations. For the provision to be effective that provision of the appropriations act will also need amendment.

S. 2227

S. 2227 would clarify the effective date of changes to the method of computing retirement annuities for certain VA health-care personnel. Last January the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Care Programs Enhancement Act of 2001 became law. That bill changed the way part-time service performed before April 7, 1986, by certain VA health-care personnel is credited for annuity purposes. Congress intended this change to apply prospectively to the annuities of both those retiring after the effective date of Public Law No.107-135, as well as those who retired before that date, i.e., that part-time service performed prior to April 7, 1986, would be credited as full-time. This is a technical clarification of Congress' intent that the changes apply prospectively to both categories of employees. VA does not object to this proposal.

S. 2228

This bill would provide that the Secretary may establish not more than 15 Centers for Mental Illness Research, Education, and Clinical Activities under 38 U.S.C. § 7320. VA has no objection to this provision.

S. 2230

This legislation would revive VA's authority, contained in section 3707 of title 38, to guarantee adjustable rate mortgage loans (ARMs). The bill would also amend this section to authorize VA to guarantee "hybrid" ARMs.

In 1992 the Congress authorized a three-year test program for VA to guarantee ARMs. That authority had a sunset date of September 30, 1995. Due to concerns about the cost of that program, the Congress let the ARM authority lapse.

The interest rate on ARMs authorized by the 1992 statute, which would be reauthorized by the bill, is adjusted annually, based on a national interest-rate index approved by VA. Each annual increase or decrease is limited to one percentage point. In no event, however, may the interest rate be increased to more than five percentage points above the initial contract interest rate.

The interest rate on hybrid ARMs, which would also be authorized by S. 2230, is fixed for an initial period of not less than three years. Thereafter, the rate would increase or decrease annually by up to one percentage point. The maximum lifetime increase of five percentage points would also apply to hybrid ARMs.

VA supports S. 2230. The availability of ARMs would expand veterans' ability to qualify for home loans, as some veterans could qualify for the lower initial payments on an ARM who could not qualify for the payments on fixed rate loans for the same dollar amount. The availability of hybrid ARMs would give veterans the additional option of having a fixed monthly payment for a certain number of years before payment adjustment would be a possibility. VA believes veterans using their earned housing loan benefits should have the same options as borrowers using FHA and conventional loans.

VA has established detailed and prudent credit underwriting guidelines that are designed to increase the probability veterans will have the ability and inclination to make the required loan payments. Should veterans encounter financial difficulty and not be able to make the mortgage payments, VA will aggressively work with them in an effort to assist them in bringing their loans current. Should that effort fail, efforts are made to find alternatives to foreclosure that will reduce the adverse financial impact on both the veteran and the Government.

[The following is a preliminary cost estimate which is being verified and is subject to change] VA estimates that enactment of this bill would have a first-year cost of $17 million, and a 10-year cost of $211 million. This estimate assumes that the increased loan fees now set to expire September 30, 2011, will be extended at least one more year.

S. 2231

S. 2231 would increase educational assistance benefits under VA's Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance program (chapter 35), limit the number of months for those benefits, and increase funding to State Approving Agencies (SAAs). Specifically, it would raise the chapter 35 educational assistance allowance to $900 per month for a full-time course for Fiscal Year (FY) 2003 and to $985 for months after FY 2003. It would also raise the amounts payable for Special Restorative Training to $900 for FY 2003 and to $985 for the months thereafter. The proposed legislation would also decrease the entitlement available to chapter 35 recipients from the current 45 months to 36 months, in the case of those who first file an educational assistance claim under chapter 35 after the date of enactment. Given the relatively short time to consider these important issues regarding chapter 35, we would like to provide

The final provision of S. 2231 would increase the annual limit on funds available to compensate SAAs for work undertaken on behalf of VA, including approving educational institutions and programs for which veterans and other entitled participants receive VA-administered education benefits. On April 11, 2002, the Under Secretary for Benefits testified before the House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Benefits in favor of H.R. 3731, a bill similar to this one. We, likewise, favor the increase to $18,000,000 contained in S. 1517. However, H.R. 3731 additionally would provide increases in SAA funding of 3 percent for FYs 2004 and 2005, with funding for 2006 and each succeeding fiscal year remaining fixed at the FY 2005 level.

Because of the cost-of-living pay increases mandated by State law, salaries for State employees have gone up since the last SAA funding increase in 1994. Additionally, over the last two years, the SAAs have been called upon to perform new and time-consuming duties as part of their mission. For example, Public Law 106-419, enacted on November 1, 2000, initiated the licensing and certification test payment program and allowed VA to delegate approval responsibility to SAAs even though it was not covered in their contracts.

We prefer the House version of this provision because it would increase SAA funding for the outyears.

Other Bills

Mr. Chairman, we do not yet have cleared positions on three other bills on today's agenda:

- S. 2205, involving compensation for service-connected mastectomies and making permanent VA's authority to provide counseling and treatment for sexual trauma;
- S. 2209, which would establish a new insurance program for service-disabled veterans; and,
- S. 2237, involving enhanced compensation for veterans with hearing loss.

We will be presenting our views and estimates on these in writing once the necessary executive-branch coordination is completed.

Mr. Chairman that concludes my prepared testimony. I will be pleased to respond to any questions you or the members of the committee may have.

STATEMENT OF

ANTHONY J. PRINCIPI

BEFORE THE

SENATE COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS

MAY 2, 2002

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee:

Thank you for the opportunity to testify today on a number of legislative items of interest to veterans.

S. 984

This bill would increase the beneficiary travel mileage rates to reimbursement rates (applicable to privately owned vehicles) established by the General Services Administration (GSA). It would also include a new group of veterans among those entitled to beneficiary travel benefits under 38 U.S.C. § 111, specifically veterans whose travel is in connection with treatment for a non-service connected disability at a non-VA facility, if the treatment is recommended by VA medical personnel at a facility that is not able to provide the recommended treatment.

VA does not support S. 984. While VA's reimbursement rates are less than those established by GSA, any increase would decrease funds available for direct medical care. It is estimated that an increase in beneficiary mileage reimbursement rates to GSA's level of 36.5 cents would cost approximately $97 million that would have to come from medical care funding. Even a modest increase of 5 cents per mile would cost approximately $20 million. We cannot support diminishing VA's capacity to provide direct patient care to provide an added benefit to the very limited groups of veterans eligible for travel reimbursement benefits.

S. 1113 and S. 2025

Both of these bills would enhance the special pension paid by VA to those who have been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, by increasing the monthly benefit to $1,000 (it is currently $600) and indexing the rate to annual increases in the cost of living. S. 2025 would, in addition, provide that the special-pension eligibility shall commence on the first day of the month beginning after the date of the act for which an individual is awarded the Medal of Honor. Currently, the period of eligibility does not begin until after the military service concerned certifies to VA that the Medal of Honor has been awarded and the recipient applies for the pension. Under S. 2025, all individuals in receipt of the special pension on the date of enactment would be entitled to lump-sum payments representing the additional amounts of pension that would have been payable had they been eligible from the first of the month following the acts for which they received the medals. We note that as of March 2002, there were only 143 Medal of Honor recipients drawing the special pension.

Last October we notified the Committee that we favor an increase of the monthly payments to $1,000 and the indexing of the rate, as provided in S. 1113. We also support the earlier effective dates for the awards called for in S. 2025. We are aware of situations in which there have been lengthy delays – through no fault of the recipients -- in the awarding of Medals of Honor. The proposed effective-date amendment would be more equitable than current law, which bases periods of eligibility on when the Government acts to award Medals of Honor. We believe, however, there may be an internal inconsistency in the language of sections 2(a) and 2(c) of S. 2025 concerning the calculation of retroactive payments which we do not believe was intended by Congress. We would be pleased to work with the Committee staff to revise the bill to correct this technical problem. We would defer to the views of the Department of Justice regarding the merits of the criminal-law amendments in S. 2025.

We estimate the costs associated with enactment of the rate increases in either S. 1113 or S. 2025 to be $1.6 million for FY 2003, $7.4 million for the five-year period FY 2003 through FY 2007, and $13.3 million for the 10-year period FY 2003 through FY 2012. We have not yet estimated the costs of the effective-date amendment in S. 2025.

This bill would increase the income threshold used to define the group of low-income veterans who are exempted from paying the outpatient pharmacy co-payment. The exempted group would be expanded to include veterans who, for purposes of receiving VA health care, are deemed unable to defray necessary expenses of care, i.e., those with incomes below VA's "means-test" threshold. A provision of the bill would also prohibit the Secretary from increasing the pharmacy co-payment until VA begins collecting co-payments for outpatient care.

Currently, the low-income exemption applies only to those veterans whose incomes do not exceed the maximum annual rate of pension payable under 38 U.S.C. § 1521 were they eligible for such pension. This is a much smaller group composed of very low-income veterans. Although VA appreciates the desire to standardize the definition of "low-income" veteran for purposes of both health care eligibility and the pharmacy co-payment exemption, VA cannot support S.1408. The proposal would significantly reduce much needed revenue upon which the Department relies to continue providing services. We also recommend deletion of the provision deferring increases in the amount of the pharmacy co-payment. VA is already implementing new regulations pertaining to both the pharmacy co-payment and the outpatient co-payment.

S. 1517 would enhance certain aspects of the Montgomery GI Bill (MGIB). Specifically, the bill would amend the chapter 30 MGIB-Active Duty program by eliminating both the $1200 pay reduction currently required to participate in the chapter 30 MGIB program and the election required of those who choose not to participate. We defer to the Department of Defense (DOD) on these issues. S. 1517 would also add a new category of individuals under the chapter 30 program who would be entitled to transfer their entire entitlement or a portion of it to one or more of their dependents. Under this provision, individuals with not less than 15 years of active duty service would become eligible to transfer MGIB education benefits. VA would be responsible for funding the transferred benefits paid to dependents. Since this proposal does not support the readjustment goals of the MGIB, we do not concur in its enactment.

S. 1517 also would extend the time limitation for using an individual's chapter 30 MGIB entitlement from 10 years after the date of discharge or release from active duty to 20 years. In like manner, it would provide for a 20-year delimiting period for members of the MGIB-Selected Reserve as well. VA does not support these provisions. In our view, extending the 10-year period is not consistent with the stated purposes of the MGIB. We believe that 10 years is sufficient time for most individuals to make the readjustment from military to civilian life. We defer to the views of the DOD on the delimiting date extension for the MGIB Selected Reserve program.

Finally, S. 1517 would provide for increased MGIB education benefits for those members of the Selected Reserve who are called to active duty for more than one year for a contingency operation. VA defers to DOD's views on this matter.

S. 1561

This bill would authorize $2 million for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as may be needed for each subsequent fiscal year for VA to continue its efforts in responding to, and training of VA and other health-care professionals for, the medical consequences of bio-terrorism.

We support increasing VA's efforts in the area of emergency medical preparedness. However, we believe that the objectives of this legislation should be addressed in the context of other measures being considered that address VA's role in bio-terrorism preparedness.

S. 1576

S. 1576 would extend through December 31, 2011, VA's special authority to treat Gulf War veterans for any disability possibly related to their service in the Gulf, notwithstanding there is insufficient medical evidence to conclude that such disability may be associated with such service. That authority will expire after December 31, 2002. VA supports this proposal.

REV_00144668

S. 1680

S. 1680 would amend the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 (SSCRA) to treat certain National Guard duty as military service under that Act. This legislation would enable National Guard members who are called to active service by their governor in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, or at the request of the President, to qualify for the protections afforded by the SSCRA. Examples of these protections are the six-percent interest rate limitation on pre-existing consumer debt, and stays of judicial proceedings in civil matters.

Because the protections provided under the SSCRA are afforded to individuals serving in military service, the Department of Defense, not VA, is the Federal agency with the primary interest in this Act. The only notable impact on VA would be in our loan guaranty programs. In these areas, VA itself would have to abide by the SSCRA's provisions. The impact of the proposed amendment in this regard would be minimal and the cost to VA would be insignificant. We therefore have no objection to this bill.

Mr. Chairman, thank you for introducing S. 1905 at our request. It contains a variety of needed enhancements to veterans' programs and the ability of the Department to administer them. Among its most significant provisions, it would:

REV_00144669

- Confer new authority for VA to provide medical care for newborn children of enrolled women veterans;
- Authorize us to provide dental care to more former prisoners of war; and
- Eliminate certain VA-specific restrictions on numbers of non-career SES members and on who may serve as Deputy Assistant Secretaries.

I strongly urge its favorable consideration.

S. 2003

S. 2003 would amend VA's anti-assignment statute, 38 U.S.C. § 5301, by adding language to prohibit agreements, and collateral security arrangements, between persons receiving monetary VA benefits and third parties. Third parties use these agreements to acquire rights to receive monetary benefits paid to VA beneficiaries.

Let me first say that, because 38 U.S.C. § 5301 generally bars assignment of VA benefits, VA regional offices have not, and do not, honor such agreements. Nevertheless, once funds are paid to a beneficiary, except where the veteran has been found mentally incompetent, VA lacks the ability to oversee how those funds are used. While we would certainly counsel veterans, their dependents and survivors to very carefully consider the full ramifications of assigning their benefits, we believe they should be free to decide how best to manage their own personal finances. We do not, therefore, support enactment of S. 2003.

S. 2043

S. 2043 would extend by five years (through December 31, 2008) VA's authority to provide non-institutional extended care services as part of the medical benefits package furnished to veterans. The bill would also extend through December 31, 2008, mandatory eligibility for nursing home care for veterans with a service-connected disability rated 70% or greater. Finally, S. 2043 would extend by five years the date by which the Secretary must report to Congress on the operation of its long-term care programs established under the Millennium Act. VA supports S. 2043 and the continuation of the Millennium Act non-institutional long-term care provisions.

S. 2044 would amend section 116 of the Millennium Act to direct that we increase funding for specialized mental health services for veterans. The measure directs that we expend $25 million for these programs, but it is not clear whether it would require $25 million for each of three successive years, or over a three-year period. The additional $25 million must also be over and above the baseline amount now being expended for these programs. However, it is unclear if we must expend an additional $25 million over the baseline each year for three successive years, or only over a three-year period. Finally, the measure directs that we consider these funds to be special-purpose funds that we must allocate outside the VERA allocation system.

Although VA appreciates the need to ensure adequate funding for these highly valuable and essential health-care programs, we strongly oppose this bill. We do not believe these programs should be treated differently from other essential treatment programs for allocation of appropriated resources. We also believe it is inappropriate to direct that we allocate funds for programs like this outside of the VERA system.

This legislation would designate the building housing VA's Regional Office in St. Petersburg, Florida as the "Franklin D. Miller Department of Veterans Affairs Regional Office Building." It would also require the Secretary to provide for an appropriate ceremony for, and commemoration of, the new designation on the first Memorial Day that follows enactment of the bill. Finally, the bill would require the Secretary to permanently display a copy of Mr. Miller's Medal of Honor citation in the building's lobby. We respectfully defer to the views of Congress on the naming of Federal property.

S. 2073

This bill would provide retroactive entitlement to Medal of Honor special pension to Mr. Ed W. Freeman. As indicated above, VA supports enactment of S. 2025, which would "make whole" special pensioners for whom the awarding of the Medal of Honor was delayed. We would prefer that this issue be addressed generally through enactment of S. 2025, rather than through special legislation such as S. 2073.

S. 2074 and S. 2229

Both S. 2074 and S. 2229 would increase the rates of compensation for service-disabled veterans and for dependency and indemnity compensation paid to survivors of veterans whose deaths were service-related, effective December 1, 2002. As provided in the President's FY 2003 budget request, the rate of increase would be the same as the COLA that will be provided under current law to veterans' pension and Social Security recipients, which is currently estimated to be 1.8 percent. The proposed COLA is necessary to protect the benefits of affected veterans and their survivors from the eroding effects of inflation. These worthy beneficiaries deserve no less.

We estimate that enactment of this COLA would cost $279 million during FY 2003, $1.66 billion over the period FY 2003-2007 and $3.45 billion over the period FY 2003-2012.

S. 2229, which you were kind enough to introduce at our request, would also revise the statutory requirement that VA continue to provide extended-care services at 1998 levels. As you know, current law requires VA to maintain staffing and level of extended care services provided in VA facilities at the levels provided during FY 1998. We propose to amend the law to require that VA maintain the overall level of extended care it provided during FY 1998 (i.e., the aggregate of care in provided in VA facilities, care VA contracts for in community nursing homes, and care VA subsidizes in State homes). If VA were required to meet the current mandate regarding care in just VA facilities, it would need to divert to that program an estimated $161.2 million by the end of FY 2004 from other health-care purposes, including community nursing-home care and State nursing-home construction. This would greatly disserve veterans, who benefit from both choice and access to care closer to loved ones.

S. 2079

S. 2079 would effect four changes in current law. First, it would permit judicial review of amendments to VA's schedule of ratings for disabilities. Second, it would change the standard of review applied by the United States Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims (CAVC) in challenges to findings of fact made by VA in adjudicating claims for benefits. Third, it would expand the jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to permit review of CAVC decisions on rules of law not involving the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation. Fourth, it would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses under the Equal Access to Justice Act to non-attorney practitioners.

Review of Rating Schedule

Section 1 of S. 2079 would permit judicial review of VA's actions in adopting or revising provisions of its Rating Schedule. Such review is currently prohibited by 38 U.S.C. §§ 502 and 7252(b). Under S. 2079, such review could be sought either through a rule-making challenge filed directly with the Federal Circuit or as part of an appeal from a VA decision on a benefit claim, which is presented first to the CAVC and may thereafter be appealed to the Federal Circuit. The bill would permit direct challenges in the Federal Circuit only with respect to a revision of the Rating Schedule occurring after the date of enactment of this bill. However, the bill would impose no similar limitation on challenges brought in connection with an appeal from a VA benefit decision. Accordingly, all changes to VA's Rating Schedule made at any time in the past would apparently be subject to review in such appeals.

VA does not support this change. In the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, Congress prohibited judicial review of the Rating Schedule because of the disruptive effect such review may have on VA claims processing. This change unnecessarily revisits the issues that were resolved in the compromises that led to enactment of the VJRA. Those compromises were reached in recognition of the fact that empowering courts to review VA's rating schedule will result in additional time-consuming litigation concerning complex medical and vocational matters on which courts have no particular expertise or experience.

Pursuant to 38 U.S.C. § 1155, the disability ratings assigned in the Rating Schedule are based upon the "average impairments of earning capacity resulting from such injuries in civil occupations" and are to be revised by VA "in accordance with experience." As the statute contemplates, the provisions of

VA's Rating Schedule are based on VA's judgment and accumulated experience in evaluating the medical, vocational, and economic factors relating to the effect of specific disabilities on earning capacity. Disputes concerning the content of the Rating Schedule would not involve the type of legal issues or case-specific fact issues that appellate courts are ordinarily called upon to decide. Rather, they would involve challenges to VA's informed judgment concerning the average economic effects of specific medical conditions.

Appellate courts are ill-equipped to assess the many medical, social, economic, and experiential factors that inform VA's judgment on these issues, and the CAVC and Federal Circuit would be particularly hampered in this endeavor by the lack of any procedures for developing an evidentiary record for such review. Even if an appellate court could acquire sufficient information to permit judicial review of these discretionary judgments, the process would be extremely time-consuming and burdensome on VA and the courts alike.

Apart from the disruptive effects that would ensue if a reviewing court modifies or invalidates portions of the Rating Schedule, judicial review may limit VA's flexibility to adopt beneficial rating provisions based primarily on its experience and expertise. Although 38 U.S.C. § 1155 indicates that VA's experience will be the primary guide in adopting changes to the Rating Schedule, judicial review would necessarily result in increased formalization and a greater need for specific medical and vocational evidence to support each rating. Rather than benefiting veterans, in our view, the rigidity that would likely follow from judicial review may adversely affect the historically liberal nature of VA's Rating Schedule.

For these reasons, determinations concerning the average impairment of earning capacity due to specific conditions should continue to be committed to VA's informed discretion. The costs that may be associated with this provision cannot be predicted, but would depend on the number of challenges filed under this provision and the outcome of such challenges.

Standard of Review for Findings of Fact

Section 2 of S. 2079 would change the standard applied by the CAVC in reviewing findings of fact made by the Board of Veterans' Appeals. Currently, the CAVC is authorized to set aside any "clearly erroneous" finding of material fact. S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to set aside any finding of material fact that is "not reasonably supported by a preponderance of the evidence."

The "clearly erroneous" standard is a well-known standard of appellate review. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a). In contrast, the "preponderance" standard is ordinarily used as a standard of proof describing a party's evidentiary burden before a fact-finding body such as the Board of Veterans' Appeals. As the Supreme Court has noted, standards of proof and standards of appellate review serve very different functions and are not interchangeable. Concrete Pipe and

Products of California, Inc. v. Construction Laborers Pension Trust for Southern California, 508 U.S. 602, 622-23 (1993). Standards of proof describe the degree of evidence needed to convince the finder of fact in the first instance. Standards of appellate review, on the other hand, describe the degree of confidence an appellate court must have in the fact finder's decision, and ordinarily accord some deference to the fact finder's decision.

There would be some incongruity in defining the CAVC's standard of review in terms of a standard of proof customarily employed only by initial fact finders. More troubling, however, is the fact that the "preponderance" standard would require the CAVC to decide claims without any deference to VA's findings of fact. Under the "benefit of the doubt" rule in section 5107(b) of title 38, United States Code, any findings of fact adverse to the veteran must be based on a preponderance of evidence. Section 2 of S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to independently decide whether a preponderance of evidence supports each factual finding, allowing no deference to the Board, which holds hearings, takes testimony, and seeks additional evidence as necessary.

This Committee's 1988 report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act discussed the importance of according deference to the Board's "expertise as an arbiter of the specialized types of factual issues that arise in the context of claims for VA benefits." This approach comports with the ordinary practice of according deference to factual findings made by administrative agencies, in view of the agencies' expertise, familiarity with the types of evidence and evidentiary issues involved, and ability to evaluate the credibility of testimony and other forms of evidence. Under the Administrative Procedure Act, findings of fact by most agencies are reviewed under the deferential "substantial evidence" standard.

Even if the Committee believes that a standard less restrictive than the "clearly erroneous" standard is warranted, it should not take the drastic step of permitting de novo review of VA fact finding, as S. 2079 would. As this Committee noted in its report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, there are other intermediate review standards available, such as the "substantial evidence" standard. Permitting de novo review would derogate from the Board's primary expertise in weighing evidence, evaluating the credibility of evidence, and making factual determinations on complex medical issues. It may also be expected to increase the CAVC's responsibilities and caseload. Moreover, it would depart from established practice in American jurisprudence of tiered layers of judicial review and would uniquely deprive VA of the deference routinely accorded to factual findings of virtually all other agencies. The anomaly of a court performing precisely the same function as an agency and wielding the same fact-finding authority is both redundant and inconsistent with the traditional roles of the executive and judicial branches of government.

Finally, I want to make clear that the CAVC's current standard of review does not in any way deprive veterans of the benefit of the doubt accorded by law.

Under current law, the CAVC routinely considers whether the Board has applied the "benefit of the doubt" standard, whether the Board has adequately explained the application of that standard to the facts of each case, and whether there is a plausible basis for the Board's conclusions under that standard. This review plainly ensures that the benefit of the doubt is accorded to veterans whenever applicable.

We cannot predict the costs that may be associated with this provision, as they would depend largely upon the outcome of individual cases.

Federal Circuit Review of Issues of Law

Section 3 of S. 2079 would authorize the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to review decisions of the CAVC on a rule of law. Currently, the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions with respect to the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation or with respect to a constitutional question. S. 2079 would clarify that the Federal Circuit may decide legal questions that do not involve a statute, regulation, or constitutional provision. Proponents of this provision have suggested that it is needed to permit review of judicially-created legal rules, such as those involving equitable tolling of time limits or the so-called "treating physician" rule adopted by courts in Social Security benefit claims. VA does not agree with that view. We do not believe that purely legal issues are insulated from review by the current statute. Notably, the Federal Circuit has decided challenges concerning judicially-created legal principles under the existing statute, including issues pertaining to equitable tolling and the treating physician rule. See Bailey v. West, 160 F.3d 1360 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (en banc); White v. Principi, 243 F.3d 1378 (Fed. Cir. 2001).

Although we do not believe this provision is necessary, VA has no objection to it. Permitting judicial review of purely legal matters is consistent with the purpose of the Veterans' Judicial Review Act and, we believe, with the Federal Circuit's current practice.

We would, however, recommend one change to this provision. S. 2079 would amend section 7292(c) of title 38, United States Code, to state that the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions on a rule of law. This would ensure that the Federal Circuit would retain exclusive jurisdiction over review of decisions of the CAVC. We believe it would also be necessary to make this change in section 7292(a), the provision the Federal Circuit has identified as prescribing its jurisdiction in those cases. See Forshey v. Principi, No. 99-7064 (Fed. Cir. Apr. 1, 2002).

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

Fees for Non-Attorney Practitioners

Section 4 of S. 2079 would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses for the services of non-attorney practitioners admitted to practice

REV_00144681

under that court's rules. Specifically, the bill would state that the CAVC's authority to award fees and expenses of attorneys under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b) shall include the authority to award fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners "as if such non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court."

As an initial matter, we believe this bill should refer to subsection (d) of section 2412, rather than to subsection (b). The Federal Courts Administration Act of 1992 amended subsection (d) to give the CAVC authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of attorneys under that subsection. We are aware of no cases in which the CAVC has awarded fees and expenses under the separate authority of subsection (b) of section 2412.

VA has no objection to permitting payment of reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners. We note that the CAVC currently has authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners who are supervised by an attorney. This legislation would extend that authority to cases involving unsupervised non-attorney practitioners who have been admitted to practice under the CAVC's rules.

VA does not, however, support the language in section 4 providing for awards "as if [the] non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court." This language may require that fees for non-attorney practitioners be commensurate with fees for attorneys. Although we recognize the valuable services provided by non-attorney practitioners before the CAVC, their services ordinarily are not compensated at the same level as services of a licensed attorney. The Equal Access to Justice Act contemplates that fees generally shall correspond to the market rates for the kind and quality of services furnished. Accordingly, the CAVC should retain the authority to pay fees for attorneys and non-attorneys at different rates.

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

S. 2132

Section 1 of S. 2132 would require the Secretary to establish four Emergency Medical Preparedness Centers within the Veterans Health Administration (VHA). VA employees would staff the proposed Centers, and the Centers would be administered jointly by the offices within the Department that are responsible for directing research and for directing medical emergency preparedness.

The Centers would have four specific purposes. First, they would carry out research and develop methods in detection, diagnosis, vaccination, protection, and treatment of injuries arising from the use of chemical, biological, radiological agents or incendiary or other explosive weapons or devices.

Second, they would provide education, training, and advice on the medical consequences of the use of CBR agents or incendiary or other explosive weapons or devices. Third, the Centers would provide that same education, training, and advice to non-VA health-care professionals. These activities would be accomplished through either the National Disaster Medical System or interagency agreements. Fourth, in the event of a national emergency, they would provide laboratory, epidemiological, medical, or other assistance, as the Secretary considers appropriate, to Federal, State, and local health care agencies and personnel involved in, or responding to, the national emergency.

Each Center would be authorized to solicit and accept contributions of funds and other resources, including grants, to carry out their purposes and activities, subject to the Secretary's approval. Section 1 of this bill would also authorize to be appropriated $20 million for these Centers for each of fiscal years 2003 through 2007. By the bill's terms, such authorization is valid only for funds appropriated separately and solely for purposes of the Centers; otherwise, the authorization is null and void.

Section 1 of S. 2132 is similar to H.R. 3253 on which the Deputy Secretary testified on April 10, 2002, before the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, Subcommittee on Health. However, it incorporates the recommendations VA suggested in its April testimony concerning H.R. 3253 and adds a number of improvements to the House version of the bill. We are grateful to this Committee for having incorporated our recommendations. We strongly support section 1 of S. 2132 and prefer it to H.R. 3253.

In addition, S. 2132 contains two provisions that would expand the purpose and operations of VA non-profit corporations. VA non-profit corporations function as flexible funding mechanisms that support VA research and education. VA non-profits receive and administer funds from outside sources, e.g., NIH grants and donations made by private sponsors, in support of approved VA research projects and education activities. However, the current statute expressly provides that VA may not transfer appropriated funds to the corporations. Section 2(a) of the bill would amend section 7362 of title 38 to permit the transfer of appropriated dollars from VA to a corporation pursuant to a contract or other agreement, including an agreement for actual research. In addition, section 2(b) of the bill would amend VA's sharing authority to treat VA non-profits like affiliated institutions for the purpose of sharing health-care resources related to research, education and training. These changes would broadly enable the corporations to sell services to the Department. The bill also provides that these arrangements would be outside the scope of Federal procurement law and, therefore, would not be subject to full and open competition.

VA objects to these proposals on the grounds that they would alter the fundamental nature of the relationship between VA and the non-profits, which is analogous to that created in a trust. Under current law the corporations exist as a flexible funding mechanism solely to support approved VA research and education. The amendments in section 2 of the bill would make the relationship between Department health-care facilities and VA non-profits more like that with outside contractors or university affiliates; more of an arms-length negotiation rather than one of incontrovertible fiduciary support. This change would also shift the emphasis of VA non-profits away from the primary focus of providing flexible funding support for VA research, education and training to conducting and selling these services to VA. This shift would present a troubling risk of ceding Department control of VA approved research or education to the non-profits.

Section 3 of the bill would amend the title 38 authorities related to VA non-profits by adding a new section 7364A to specifically state that corporation employees assigned to work on approved VA research or education and training shall be considered employees for purposes of Federal tort claim and medical malpractice coverage. VA strongly favors this provision. We note, however, that the phrase, "carried out with Department funds" in the proposed section 7364A(b)(2) might be interpreted to limit this coverage. Much of VA-approved research, or education and training is supported by external funds.

S. 2186

Mr. Chairman, thank you for introducing S. 2186 at our request. This legislation would establish a new Assistant Secretary to perform operations, preparedness, security and law enforcement and a new VA office of Operations Security and Preparedness. We believe this new office is essential if we are to meet our responsibilities of protecting veterans, employees, and visitors to our facilities.

S. 2187

S. 2187 would permit VA, on its own initiative, to care for those affected by a disaster or emergency and those responding to the emergency. The disaster or emergency must be either declared by the President or involve activation of the National Defense Medical System. Currently, in most cases, VA may provide care in such situations only if requested to do so under the Federal Response Plan administered by the Federal Emergency Management Administration. The bill would also require other Federal agencies to reimburse VA for care provided to their officers, employees, and active duty members at rates agreed upon by the agencies. VA would not be required to charge for care provided to other individuals. Finally, the bill would allow VA to provide care in response to disasters and emergency situations before caring for all other beneficiaries except service-connected veterans and active duty military members referred during war or national emergency or who are responding or involved in a disaster or emergency.

VA supports this measure. It would permit VA to respond quickly and obtain reimbursement for care from other Federal entities. We note that the bill also proposes to amend 38 U.S.C. § 1711(b). That provision is now codified at 38 U.S.C. § 1784. We also note that the bill would conflict with an administrative provision that appears in VA's annual appropriation act that requires reimbursement of costs except in specified situations. For the provision to be effective that provision of the appropriations act will also need amendment.

S. 2227

S. 2227 would clarify the effective date of changes to the method of computing retirement annuities for certain VA health-care personnel. Last January the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Care Programs Enhancement Act of 2001 became law. That bill changed the way part-time service performed before April 7, 1986, by certain VA health-care personnel is credited for annuity purposes. Congress intended this change to apply prospectively to the annuities of both those retiring after the effective date of Public Law No.107-135, as well as those who retired before that date, i.e., that part-time service performed prior to April 7, 1986, would be credited as full-time. This is a technical clarification of Congress' intent that the changes apply prospectively to both categories of employees. VA does not object to this proposal.

S. 2228

This bill would provide that the Secretary may establish not more than 15 Centers for Mental Illness Research, Education, and Clinical Activities under 38 U.S.C. § 7320. VA has no objection to this provision.

S. 2230

This legislation would revive VA's authority, contained in section 3707 of title 38, to guarantee adjustable rate mortgage loans (ARMs). The bill would also amend this section to authorize VA to guarantee "hybrid" ARMs.

In 1992 the Congress authorized a three-year test program for VA to guarantee ARMs. That authority had a sunset date of September 30, 1995. Due to concerns about the cost of that program, the Congress let the ARM authority lapse.

The interest rate on ARMs authorized by the 1992 statute, which would be reauthorized by the bill, is adjusted annually, based on a national interest-rate index approved by VA. Each annual increase or decrease is limited to one percentage point. In no event, however, may the interest rate be increased to more than five percentage points above the initial contract interest rate.

The interest rate on hybrid ARMs, which would also be authorized by S. 2230, is fixed for an initial period of not less than three years. Thereafter, the rate would increase or decrease annually by up to one percentage point. The maximum lifetime increase of five percentage points would also apply to hybrid ARMs.

VA supports S. 2230. The availability of ARMs would expand veterans' ability to qualify for home loans, as some veterans could qualify for the lower initial payments on an ARM who could not qualify for the payments on fixed rate loans for the same dollar amount. The availability of hybrid ARMs would give veterans the additional option of having a fixed monthly payment for a certain number of years before payment adjustment would be a possibility. VA believes veterans using their earned housing loan benefits should have the same options as borrowers using FHA and conventional loans.

VA has established detailed and prudent credit underwriting guidelines that are designed to increase the probability veterans will have the ability and inclination to make the required loan payments. Should veterans encounter financial difficulty and not be able to make the mortgage payments, VA will aggressively work with them in an effort to assist them in bringing their loans current. Should that effort fail, efforts are made to find alternatives to foreclosure that will reduce the adverse financial impact on both the veteran and the Government.

[The following is a preliminary cost estimate which is being verified and is subject to change] VA estimates that enactment of this bill would have a first-year cost of $17 million, and a 10-year cost of $211 million. This estimate assumes that the increased loan fees now set to expire September 30, 2011, will be extended at least one more year.

S. 2231

S. 2231 would increase educational assistance benefits under VA's Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance program (chapter 35), limit the number of months for those benefits, and increase funding to State Approving Agencies (SAAs). Specifically, it would raise the chapter 35 educational assistance allowance to $900 per month for a full-time course for Fiscal Year (FY) 2003 and to $985 for months after FY 2003. It would also raise the amounts payable for Special Restorative Training to $900 for FY 2003 and to $985 for the months thereafter. The proposed legislation would also decrease the entitlement available to chapter 35 recipients from the current 45 months to 36 months, in the case of those who first file an educational assistance claim under chapter 35 after the date of enactment. Given the relatively short time to consider these important issues regarding chapter 35, we would like to provide

The final provision of S. 2231 would increase the annual limit on funds available to compensate SAAs for work undertaken on behalf of VA, including approving educational institutions and programs for which veterans and other entitled participants receive VA-administered education benefits. On April 11, 2002, the Under Secretary for Benefits testified before the House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Benefits in favor of H.R. 3731, a bill similar to this one. We, likewise, favor the increase to $18,000,000 contained in S. 1517. However, H.R. 3731 additionally would provide increases in SAA funding of 3 percent for FYs 2004 and 2005, with funding for 2006 and each succeeding fiscal year remaining fixed at the FY 2005 level.

Because of the cost-of-living pay increases mandated by State law, salaries for State employees have gone up since the last SAA funding increase in 1994. Additionally, over the last two years, the SAAs have been called upon to perform new and time-consuming duties as part of their mission. For example, Public Law 106-419, enacted on November 1, 2000, initiated the licensing and certification test payment program and allowed VA to delegate approval responsibility to SAAs even though it was not covered in their contracts.

We prefer the House version of this provision because it would increase SAA funding for the outyears.

Other Bills

Mr. Chairman, we do not yet have cleared positions on three other bills on today's agenda:

- S. 2205, involving compensation for service-connected mastectomies and making permanent VA's authority to provide counseling and treatment for sexual trauma;
- S. 2209, which would establish a new insurance program for service-disabled veterans; and,
- S. 2237, involving enhanced compensation for veterans with hearing loss.

We will be presenting our views and estimates on these in writing once the necessary executive-branch coordination is completed.

Mr. Chairman that concludes my prepared testimony. I will be pleased to respond to any questions you or the members of the committee may have.

REV_00144693

S. 2079

S. 2079 would effect four changes in current law. First, it would permit judicial review of amendments to VA's schedule of ratings for disabilities. Second, it would change the standard of review applied by the United States Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims (CAVC) in challenges to findings of fact made by VA in adjudicating claims for benefits. Third, it would expand the jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to permit review of CAVC decisions on rules of law not involving the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation. Fourth, it would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses under the Equal Access to Justice Act to non-attorney practitioners.

Review of Rating Schedule

Section 1 of S. 2079 would permit judicial review of VA's actions in adopting or revising provisions of its Rating Schedule. Such review is currently prohibited by 38 U.S.C. §§ 502 and 7252(b). Under S. 2079, such review could be sought either through a rule-making challenge filed directly with the Federal Circuit or as part of an appeal from a VA decision on a benefit claim, which is presented first to the CAVC and may thereafter be appealed to the Federal Circuit. The bill would permit direct challenges in the Federal Circuit only with respect to a revision of the Rating Schedule occurring after the date of enactment of this bill. However, the bill would impose no similar limitation on challenges brought in connection with an appeal from a VA benefit decision. Accordingly, all changes to VA's Rating Schedule made at any time in the past would apparently be subject to review in such appeals.

VA does not support this change. In the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, Congress prohibited judicial review of the Rating Schedule because of the disruptive effect such review may have on VA claims processing. This change unnecessarily revisits the issues that were resolved in the compromises that led to enactment of the VJRA. Those compromises were reached in recognition of the fact that empowering courts to review VA's rating schedule will result in additional time-consuming litigation concerning complex medical and vocational matters on which courts have no particular expertise or experience.

Pursuant to 38 U.S.C. § 1155, the disability ratings assigned in the Rating Schedule are based upon the "average impairments of earning capacity resulting from such injuries in civil occupations" and are to be revised by VA "in accordance with experience." As the statute contemplates, the provisions of VA's Rating Schedule are based on VA's judgment and accumulated experience in evaluating the medical, vocational, and economic factors relating to the effect of specific disabilities on earning capacity. Disputes concerning the content of the Rating Schedule would not involve the type of legal issues or case-specific fact issues that appellate courts are ordinarily called upon to decide. Rather, they would involve challenges to VA's informed judgment concerning the average economic effects of specific medical conditions.

Appellate courts are ill-equipped to assess the many medical, social, economic, and experiential factors that inform VA's judgment on these issues, and the CAVC and Federal Circuit would be particularly hampered in this endeavor by the lack of any procedures for developing an evidentiary record for such review. Even if an appellate court could acquire sufficient information to permit judicial review of these discretionary judgments, the process would be extremely time-consuming and burdensome on VA and the courts alike.

Apart from the disruptive effects that would ensue if a reviewing court modifies or invalidates portions of the Rating Schedule, judicial review may limit VA's flexibility to adopt beneficial rating provisions based primarily on its experience and expertise. Although 38 U.S.C. § 1155 indicates that VA's experience will be the primary guide in adopting changes to the Rating Schedule, judicial review would necessarily result in increased formalization and a greater need for specific medical and vocational evidence to support each rating. Rather than benefiting veterans, in our view, the rigidity that would likely follow from judicial review may adversely affect the historically liberal nature of VA's Rating Schedule.

For these reasons, determinations concerning the average impairment of earning capacity due to specific conditions should continue to be committed to VA's informed discretion. The costs that may be associated with this provision cannot be predicted, but would depend on the number of challenges filed under this provision and the outcome of such challenges.

Standard of Review for Findings of Fact

Section 2 of S. 2079 would change the standard applied by the CAVC in reviewing findings of fact made by the Board of Veterans' Appeals. Currently, the CAVC is authorized to set aside any "clearly erroneous" finding of material fact. S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to set aside any finding of material fact that is "not reasonably supported by a preponderance of the evidence."

The "clearly erroneous" standard is a well-known standard of appellate review. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a). In contrast, the "preponderance" standard is ordinarily used as a standard of proof describing a party's evidentiary burden before a fact-finding body such as the Board of Veterans' Appeals. As the Supreme Court has noted, standards of proof and standards of appellate review serve very different functions and are not interchangeable. Concrete Pipe and Products of California, Inc. v. Construction Laborers Pension Trust for Southern California, 508 U.S. 602, 622-23 (1993). Standards of proof describe the degree of evidence needed to convince the finder of fact in the first instance. Standards of appellate review, on the other hand, describe the degree of confidence an appellate court must have in the fact finder's decision, and ordinarily accord some deference to the fact finder's decision.

There would be some incongruity in defining the CAVC's standard of review in terms of a standard of proof customarily employed only by initial fact finders. More troubling, however, is the fact that the "preponderance" standard would require the CAVC to decide claims without any deference to VA's findings of fact. Under the "benefit of the doubt" rule in section 5107(b) of title 38, United States Code, any findings of fact adverse to the veteran must be based on a preponderance of evidence. Section 2 of S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to independently decide whether a preponderance of evidence supports each factual finding, allowing no deference to the Board, which holds hearings, takes testimony, and seeks additional evidence as necessary.

This Committee's 1988 report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act discussed the importance of according deference to the Board's "expertise as an arbiter of the specialized types of factual issues that arise in the context of claims for VA benefits." This approach comports with the ordinary practice of according deference to factual findings made by administrative agencies, in view of the agencies' expertise, familiarity with the types of evidence and evidentiary issues involved, and ability to evaluate the credibility of testimony and other forms of evidence. Under the Administrative Procedure Act, findings of fact by most agencies are reviewed under the deferential "substantial evidence" standard.

Even if the Committee believes that a standard less restrictive than the "clearly erroneous" standard is warranted, it should not take the drastic step of permitting de novo review of VA fact finding, as S. 2079 would. As this Committee noted in its report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, there are other intermediate review standards available, such as the "substantial evidence" standard. Permitting de novo review would derogate from the Board's primary expertise in weighing evidence, evaluating the credibility of evidence, and making factual determinations on complex medical issues. It may also be expected to increase the CAVC's responsibilities and caseload. Moreover, it would depart from established practice in American jurisprudence of tiered layers of judicial review and would uniquely deprive VA of the deference routinely accorded to factual findings of virtually all other agencies. The anomaly of a court performing precisely the same function as an agency and wielding the same fact-finding authority is both redundant and inconsistent with the traditional roles of the executive and judicial branches of government.

Finally, I want to make clear that the CAVC's current standard of review does not in any way deprive veterans of the benefit of the doubt accorded by law. Under current law, the CAVC routinely considers whether the Board has applied the "benefit of the doubt" standard, whether the Board has adequately explained the application of that standard to the facts of each case, and whether there is a plausible basis for the Board's conclusions under that standard. This review plainly ensures that the benefit of the doubt is accorded to veterans whenever applicable.

We cannot predict the costs that may be associated with this provision, as they would depend largely upon the outcome of individual cases.

Federal Circuit Review of Issues of Law

Section 3 of S. 2079 would authorize the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to review decisions of the CAVC on a rule of law. Currently, the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions with respect to the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation or with respect to a constitutional question. S. 2079 would clarify that the Federal Circuit may decide legal questions that do not involve a statute, regulation, or constitutional provision. Proponents of this provision have suggested that it is needed to permit review of judicially-created legal rules, such as those involving equitable tolling of time limits or the so-called "treating physician" rule adopted by courts in Social Security benefit claims. VA does not agree with that view. We do not believe that purely legal issues are insulated from review by the current statute. Notably, the Federal Circuit has decided challenges concerning judicially-created legal principles under the existing statute, including issues pertaining to equitable tolling and the treating physician rule. See Bailey v. West, 160 F.3d 1360 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (en banc); White v. Principi, 243 F.3d 1378 (Fed. Cir. 2001).

Although we do not believe this provision is necessary, VA has no objection to it. Permitting judicial review of purely legal matters is consistent with the purpose of the Veterans' Judicial Review Act and, we believe, with the Federal Circuit's current practice.

We would, however, recommend one change to this provision. S. 2079 would amend section 7292(c) of title 38, United States Code, to state that the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions on a rule of law. This would ensure that the Federal Circuit would retain exclusive jurisdiction over review of decisions of the CAVC. We believe it would also be necessary to make this change in section 7292(a), the provision the Federal Circuit has identified as prescribing its jurisdiction in those cases. See Forshey v. Principi, No. 99-7064 (Fed. Cir. Apr. 1, 2002).

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

Fees for Non-Attorney Practitioners

Section 4 of S. 2079 would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses for the services of non-attorney practitioners admitted to practice under that court's rules. Specifically, the bill would state that the CAVC's authority to award fees and expenses of attorneys under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b) shall include the authority to award fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners "as if such non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court."

REV_00144701

As an initial matter, we believe this bill should refer to subsection (d) of section 2412, rather than to subsection (b). The Federal Courts Administration Act of 1992 amended subsection (d) to give the CAVC authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of attorneys under that subsection. We are aware of no cases in which the CAVC has awarded fees and expenses under the separate authority of subsection (b) of section 2412.

VA has no objection to permitting payment of reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners. We note that the CAVC currently has authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners who are supervised by an attorney. This legislation would extend that authority to cases involving unsupervised non-attorney practitioners who have been admitted to practice under the CAVC's rules.

VA does not, however, support the language in section 4 providing for awards "as if [the] non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court." This language may require that fees for non-attorney practitioners be commensurate with fees for attorneys. Although we recognize the valuable services provided by non-attorney practitioners before the CAVC, their services ordinarily are not compensated at the same level as services of a licensed attorney. The Equal Access to Justice Act contemplates that fees generally shall correspond to the market rates for the kind and quality of services furnished. Accordingly, the CAVC should retain the authority to pay fees for attorneys and non-attorneys at different rates.

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

THE SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20590

April 30, 2002

The Honorable Don Young
Chairman, Committee on Transportation
and Infrastructure
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear ~~Mr. Chairman~~ DON:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would provide the same Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided to commercial airlines immediately following September 11, 2001. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks. The Administration opposes enactment of this bill.

The Administration supported the direct compensation and loan guarantee authority in H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (Pub. L. No. 107-42 (Sept. 22, 2001)), for commercial air carriers for a number of reasons unique to that industry and time. Commercial airliners had been used as the instrument for the terrorist attacks, air travel had been totally disrupted and was newly feared by many travelers, and significant adverse effects on the U.S. economy were anticipated as a result. The President's call after September 11 for the Nation to counter terrorism in part by reengaging in daily economic activity was critical to the effort to avoid a significant economic downturn. The enactment of H.R. 2926 was a highly visible case of the Federal Government's decisiveness in meeting our common objective. Because the U.S.-flag air carriers are a symbol of the United States both at home and abroad--and subject to attack for that reason--the compensation payments for air carriers were also in the interests of our foreign policy objectives world-wide.

Overall, the Administration believes that the best, most even-handed approach to recovery from the attacks of September 11 for all industries is couched in the President's proposals for economic stimulus, recently acted on in part by Congress, and his Budget Request for fiscal year 2003. This combination of measures has, in our view, already had a beneficial effect on the economic outlook, and has gone far to revive the markets for the Nation's goods and services, including the non-commercial aviation sector. In an even-handed way, this approach seeks to lift the economic situation of industries across the Nation.

Our experience with implementation of H.R. 2926 also indicates that the provisions of H.R. 3347 contain a number of practical drawbacks. Most important, while the number of entities that might qualify in the commercial aviation industry for benefits may reach 600, the number of "general aviation entities and their employees" covered by H.R. 3347 may number in the many thousands. "[G]eneral aviation entities" is imprecise phraseology and could be argued to cover a wide range of businesses, everything from companies that make aviation charts to those that supply specialty items sold in aviation catalogs and shops featuring an aviation theme. Enactment of H.R. 3347 would place a very substantial additional burden on the Department.

Another substantial difference between the two bills and a concern in the case of H.R. 3347 is that the objectively grounded formula for allocating limited funding among recipients in H.R. 2926 (proportion of "available seat miles" or "revenue ton miles") is, of necessity, omitted from H.R. 3347. We are not aware of objective data that would provide a defensible basis for allocation of the limited funding in H.R. 3347 among qualified recipients. To take a simple example, what basis would exist to balance claims about lost sales among aircraft manufacturers, their own employees, and suppliers to that industry? It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. The commercial insurance industry has already objected to the continuation of the existing program on behalf of commercial air carriers. The Department believes that the general terrorism insurance legislation (H.R. 3210) now pending in Congress makes more sense for the Nation's industries.

Finally, although the bill would deem the $5.5 billion in spending under the bill (potentially offset in part by reduced spending under H.R. 2926) "emergency spending" under budget rules, it would nonetheless exacerbate the problem of budget deficits in the wake of September 11. We firmly believe that the President's proposals to reinvigorate the economy are the better means to address the finances of this and other industries.

For these reasons, we oppose passage of H.R. 3347. We do appreciate the opportunity to provide our views. The Office of Management and Budget advises that it has no objection to the submission of these views for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely yours,

Norman Y. Mineta

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20590

April 30, 2002

The Honorable William O. Lipinski
Ranking Member, Subcommittee On Aviation
Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Lipinski:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would provide the same Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided to commercial airlines immediately following September 11, 2001. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks. The Administration opposes enactment of this bill.

The Administration supported the direct compensation and loan guarantee authority in H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (Pub. L. No. 107-42 (Sept. 22, 2001)), for commercial air carriers for a number of reasons unique to that industry and time. Commercial airliners had been used as the instrument for the terrorist attacks, air travel had been totally disrupted and was newly feared by many travelers, and significant adverse effects on the U.S. economy were anticipated as a result. The President's call after September 11 for the Nation to counter terrorism in part by reengaging in daily economic activity was critical to the effort to avoid a significant economic downturn. The enactment of H.R. 2926 was a highly visible case of the Federal Government's decisiveness in meeting our common objective. Because the U.S.-flag air carriers are a symbol of the United States both at home and abroad--and subject to attack for that reason--the compensation payments for air carriers were also in the interests of our foreign policy objectives world-wide.

Overall, the Administration believes that the best, most even-handed approach to recovery from the attacks of September 11 for all industries is couched in the President's proposals for economic stimulus, recently acted on in part by Congress, and his Budget Request for fiscal year 2003. This combination of measures has, in our view, already had a beneficial effect on the economic outlook, and has gone far to revive the markets for the Nation's goods and services, including the non-commercial aviation sector. In an even-handed way, this approach seeks to lift the economic situation of industries across the Nation.

Our experience with implementation of H.R. 2926 also indicates that the provisions of H.R. 3347 contain a number of practical drawbacks. Most important, while the number of entities that might qualify in the commercial aviation industry for benefits may reach 600, the number of "general aviation entities and their employees" covered by H.R. 3347 may number in the many thousands. "[G]eneral aviation entities" is imprecise phraseology and could be argued to cover a wide range of businesses, everything from companies that make aviation charts to those that supply specialty items sold in aviation catalogs and shops featuring an aviation theme. Enactment of H.R. 3347 would place a very substantial additional burden on the Department.

Another substantial difference between the two bills and a concern in the case of H.R. 3347 is that the objectively grounded formula for allocating limited funding among recipients in H.R. 2926 (proportion of "available seat miles" or "revenue ton miles") is, of necessity, omitted from H.R. 3347. We are not aware of objective data that would provide a defensible basis for allocation of the limited funding in H.R. 3347 among qualified recipients. To take a simple example, what basis would exist to balance claims about lost sales among aircraft manufacturers, their own employees, and suppliers to that industry? It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. The commercial insurance industry has already objected to the continuation of the existing program on behalf of commercial air carriers. The Department believes that the general terrorism insurance legislation (H.R. 3210) now pending in Congress makes more sense for the Nation's industries.

Finally, although the bill would deem the $5.5 billion in spending under the bill (potentially offset in part by reduced spending under H.R. 2926) "emergency spending" under budget rules, it would nonetheless exacerbate the problem of budget deficits in the wake of September 11. We firmly believe that the President's proposals to reinvigorate the economy are the better means to address the finances of this and other industries.

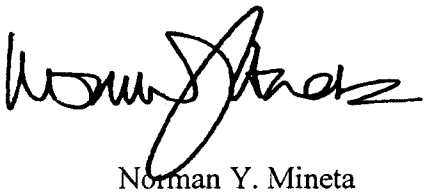
For these reasons, we oppose passage of H.R. 3347. We do appreciate the opportunity to provide our views. The Office of Management and Budget advises that it has no objection to the submission of these views for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely yours,



Norman Y. Mineta

STATEMENT OF

ANTHONY J. PRINCIPI

BEFORE THE

SENATE COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS

MAY 2, 2002

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee:

Thank you for the opportunity to testify today on a number of legislative items of interest to veterans.

S. 984

This bill would increase the beneficiary travel mileage rates to reimbursement rates (applicable to privately owned vehicles) established by the General Services Administration (GSA). It would also include a new group of veterans among those entitled to beneficiary travel benefits under 38 U.S.C. § 111, specifically veterans whose travel is in connection with treatment for a non-service connected disability at a non-VA facility, if the treatment is recommended by VA medical personnel at a facility that is not able to provide the recommended treatment.

VA does not support S. 984. While VA's reimbursement rates are less than those established by GSA, any increase would decrease funds available for direct medical care. It is estimated that an increase in beneficiary mileage reimbursement rates to GSA's level of 36.5 cents would cost approximately $97 million that would have to come from medical care funding. Even a modest increase of 5 cents per mile would cost approximately $20 million. We cannot support diminishing VA's capacity to provide direct patient care to provide an added benefit to the very limited groups of veterans eligible for travel reimbursement benefits.

S. 1113 and S. 2025

Both of these bills would enhance the special pension paid by VA to those who have been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, by increasing the monthly benefit to $1,000 (it is currently $600) and indexing the rate to annual increases in the cost of living. S. 2025 would, in addition, provide that the special-pension eligibility shall commence on the first day of the month beginning after the date of the act for which an individual is awarded the Medal of Honor. Currently, the period of eligibility does not begin until after the military service concerned certifies to VA that the Medal of Honor has been awarded and the recipient applies for the pension. Under S. 2025, all individuals in receipt of the special pension on the date of enactment would be entitled to lump-sum payments representing the additional amounts of pension that would have been payable had they been eligible from the first of the month following the acts for which they received the medals. We note that as of March 2002, there were only 143 Medal of Honor recipients drawing the special pension.

Last October we notified the Committee that we favor an increase of the monthly payments to $1,000 and the indexing of the rate, as provided in S. 1113. We also support the earlier effective dates for the awards called for in S. 2025. We are aware of situations in which there have been lengthy delays – through no fault of the recipients -- in the awarding of Medals of Honor. The proposed effective-date amendment would be more equitable than current law, which bases periods of eligibility on when the Government acts to award Medals of Honor. We believe, however, there may be an internal inconsistency in the language of sections 2(a) and 2(c) of S. 2025 concerning the calculation of retroactive payments which we do not believe was intended by Congress. We would be pleased to work with the Committee staff to revise the bill to correct this technical problem. We would defer to the views of the Department of Justice regarding the merits of the criminal-law amendments in S. 2025.

We estimate the costs associated with enactment of the rate increases in either S. 1113 or S. 2025 to be $1.6 million for FY 2003, $7.4 million for the five-year period FY 2003 through FY 2007, and $13.3 million for the 10-year period FY 2003 through FY 2012. We have not yet estimated the costs of the effective-date amendment in S. 2025.

This bill would increase the income threshold used to define the group of low-income veterans who are exempted from paying the outpatient pharmacy co-payment. The exempted group would be expanded to include veterans who, for purposes of receiving VA health care, are deemed unable to defray necessary expenses of care, i.e., those with incomes below VA's "means-test" threshold. A provision of the bill would also prohibit the Secretary from increasing the pharmacy co-payment until VA begins collecting co-payments for outpatient care.

Currently, the low-income exemption applies only to those veterans whose incomes do not exceed the maximum annual rate of pension payable under 38 U.S.C. § 1521 were they eligible for such pension. This is a much smaller group composed of very low-income veterans. Although VA appreciates the desire to standardize the definition of "low-income" veteran for purposes of both health care eligibility and the pharmacy co-payment exemption, VA cannot support S.1408. The proposal would significantly reduce much needed revenue upon which the Department relies to continue providing services. We also recommend deletion of the provision deferring increases in the amount of the pharmacy co-payment. VA is already implementing new regulations pertaining to both the pharmacy co-payment and the outpatient co-payment.

S. 1517 would enhance certain aspects of the Montgomery GI Bill (MGIB). Specifically, the bill would amend the chapter 30 MGIB-Active Duty program by eliminating both the $1200 pay reduction currently required to participate in the chapter 30 MGIB program and the election required of those who choose not to participate. We defer to the Department of Defense (DOD) on these issues. S. 1517 would also add a new category of individuals under the chapter 30 program who would be entitled to transfer their entire entitlement or a portion of it to one or more of their dependents. Under this provision, individuals with not less than 15 years of active duty service would become eligible to transfer MGIB education benefits. VA would be responsible for funding the transferred benefits paid to dependents. Since this proposal does not support the readjustment goals of the MGIB, we do not concur in its enactment.

S. 1517 also would extend the time limitation for using an individual's chapter 30 MGIB entitlement from 10 years after the date of discharge or release from active duty to 20 years. In like manner, it would provide for a 20-year delimiting period for members of the MGIB-Selected Reserve as well. VA does not support these provisions. In our view, extending the 10-year period is not consistent with the stated purposes of the MGIB. We believe that 10 years is sufficient time for most individuals to make the readjustment from military to civilian life. We defer to the views of the DOD on the delimiting date extension for the MGIB Selected Reserve program.

Finally, S. 1517 would provide for increased MGIB education benefits for those members of the Selected Reserve who are called to active duty for more than one year for a contingency operation. VA defers to DOD's views on this matter.

This bill would authorize $2 million for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as may be needed for each subsequent fiscal year for VA to continue its efforts in responding to, and training of VA and other health-care professionals for, the medical consequences of bio-terrorism.

We support increasing VA's efforts in the area of emergency medical preparedness. However, we believe that the objectives of this legislation should be addressed in the context of other measures being considered that address VA's role in bio-terrorism preparedness.

S. 1576 would extend through December 31, 2011, VA's special authority to treat Gulf War veterans for any disability possibly related to their service in the Gulf, notwithstanding there is insufficient medical evidence to conclude that such disability may be associated with such service. That authority will expire after December 31, 2002. VA supports this proposal.

REV_00144742

S. 1680

S. 1680 would amend the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 (SSCRA) to treat certain National Guard duty as military service under that Act. This legislation would enable National Guard members who are called to active service by their governor in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, or at the request of the President, to qualify for the protections afforded by the SSCRA. Examples of these protections are the six-percent interest rate limitation on pre-existing consumer debt, and stays of judicial proceedings in civil matters.

Because the protections provided under the SSCRA are afforded to individuals serving in military service, the Department of Defense, not VA, is the Federal agency with the primary interest in this Act. The only notable impact on VA would be in our loan guaranty programs. In these areas, VA itself would have to abide by the SSCRA's provisions. The impact of the proposed amendment in this regard would be minimal and the cost to VA would be insignificant. We therefore have no objection to this bill.

Mr. Chairman, thank you for introducing S. 1905 at our request. It contains a variety of needed enhancements to veterans' programs and the ability of the Department to administer them. Among its most significant provisions, it would:

REV_00144743

- Confer new authority for VA to provide medical care for newborn children of enrolled women veterans;
- Authorize us to provide dental care to more former prisoners of war; and
- Eliminate certain VA-specific restrictions on numbers of non-career SES members and on who may serve as Deputy Assistant Secretaries.

I strongly urge its favorable consideration.

S. 2003

S. 2003 would amend VA's anti-assignment statute, 38 U.S.C. § 5301, by adding language to prohibit agreements, and collateral security arrangements, between persons receiving monetary VA benefits and third parties. Third parties use these agreements to acquire rights to receive monetary benefits paid to VA beneficiaries.

Let me first say that, because 38 U.S.C. § 5301 generally bars assignment of VA benefits, VA regional offices have not, and do not, honor such agreements. Nevertheless, once funds are paid to a beneficiary, except where the veteran has been found mentally incompetent, VA lacks the ability to oversee how those funds are used. While we would certainly counsel veterans, their dependents and survivors to very carefully consider the full ramifications of assigning their benefits, we believe they should be free to decide how best to manage their own personal finances. We do not, therefore, support enactment of S. 2003.

S. 2043

S. 2043 would extend by five years (through December 31, 2008) VA's authority to provide non-institutional extended care services as part of the medical benefits package furnished to veterans. The bill would also extend through December 31, 2008, mandatory eligibility for nursing home care for veterans with a service-connected disability rated 70% or greater. Finally, S. 2043 would extend by five years the date by which the Secretary must report to Congress on the operation of its long-term care programs established under the Millennium Act. VA supports S. 2043 and the continuation of the Millennium Act non-institutional long-term care provisions.

S. 2044 would amend section 116 of the Millennium Act to direct that we increase funding for specialized mental health services for veterans. The measure directs that we expend $25 million for these programs, but it is not clear whether it would require $25 million for each of three successive years, or over a three-year period. The additional $25 million must also be over and above the baseline amount now being expended for these programs. However, it is unclear if we must expend an additional $25 million over the baseline each year for three successive years, or only over a three-year period. Finally, the measure directs that we consider these funds to be special-purpose funds that we must allocate outside the VERA allocation system.

Although VA appreciates the need to ensure adequate funding for these highly valuable and essential health-care programs, we strongly oppose this bill. We do not believe these programs should be treated differently from other essential treatment programs for allocation of appropriated resources. We also believe it is inappropriate to direct that we allocate funds for programs like this outside of the VERA system.

This legislation would designate the building housing VA's Regional Office in St. Petersburg, Florida as the "Franklin D. Miller Department of Veterans Affairs Regional Office Building." It would also require the Secretary to provide for an appropriate ceremony for, and commemoration of, the new designation on the first Memorial Day that follows enactment of the bill. Finally, the bill would require the Secretary to permanently display a copy of Mr. Miller's Medal of Honor citation in the building's lobby. We respectfully defer to the views of Congress on the naming of Federal property.

S. 2073

This bill would provide retroactive entitlement to Medal of Honor special pension to Mr. Ed W. Freeman. As indicated above, VA supports enactment of S. 2025, which would "make whole" special pensioners for whom the awarding of the Medal of Honor was delayed. We would prefer that this issue be addressed generally through enactment of S. 2025, rather than through special legislation such as S. 2073.

S. 2074 and S. 2229

Both S. 2074 and S. 2229 would increase the rates of compensation for service-disabled veterans and for dependency and indemnity compensation paid to survivors of veterans whose deaths were service-related, effective December 1, 2002. As provided in the President's FY 2003 budget request, the rate of increase would be the same as the COLA that will be provided under current law to veterans' pension and Social Security recipients, which is currently estimated to be 1.8 percent. The proposed COLA is necessary to protect the benefits of affected veterans and their survivors from the eroding effects of inflation. These worthy beneficiaries deserve no less.

We estimate that enactment of this COLA would cost $279 million during FY 2003, $1.66 billion over the period FY 2003-2007 and $3.45 billion over the period FY 2003-2012.

S. 2229, which you were kind enough to introduce at our request, would also revise the statutory requirement that VA continue to provide extended-care services at 1998 levels. As you know, current law requires VA to maintain staffing and level of extended care services provided in VA facilities at the levels provided during FY 1998. We propose to amend the law to require that VA maintain the overall level of extended care it provided during FY 1998 (i.e., the aggregate of care in provided in VA facilities, care VA contracts for in community nursing homes, and care VA subsidizes in State homes). If VA were required to meet the current mandate regarding care in just VA facilities, it would need to divert to that program an estimated $161.2 million by the end of FY 2004 from other health-care purposes, including community nursing-home care and State nursing-home construction. This would greatly disserve veterans, who benefit from both choice and access to care closer to loved ones.

S. 2079

S. 2079 would effect four changes in current law. First, it would permit judicial review of amendments to VA's schedule of ratings for disabilities. Second, it would change the standard of review applied by the United States Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims (CAVC) in challenges to findings of fact made by VA in adjudicating claims for benefits. Third, it would expand the jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to permit review of CAVC decisions on rules of law not involving the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation. Fourth, it would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses under the Equal Access to Justice Act to non-attorney practitioners.

Review of Rating Schedule

Section 1 of S. 2079 would permit judicial review of VA's actions in adopting or revising provisions of its Rating Schedule. Such review is currently prohibited by 38 U.S.C. §§ 502 and 7252(b). Under S. 2079, such review could be sought either through a rule-making challenge filed directly with the Federal Circuit or as part of an appeal from a VA decision on a benefit claim, which is presented first to the CAVC and may thereafter be appealed to the Federal Circuit. The bill would permit direct challenges in the Federal Circuit only with respect to a revision of the Rating Schedule occurring after the date of enactment of this bill. However, the bill would impose no similar limitation on challenges brought in connection with an appeal from a VA benefit decision. Accordingly, all changes to VA's Rating Schedule made at any time in the past would apparently be subject to review in such appeals.

VA does not support this change. In the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, Congress prohibited judicial review of the Rating Schedule because of the disruptive effect such review may have on VA claims processing. This change unnecessarily revisits the issues that were resolved in the compromises that led to enactment of the VJRA. Those compromises were reached in recognition of the fact that empowering courts to review VA's rating schedule will result in additional time-consuming litigation concerning complex medical and vocational matters on which courts have no particular expertise or experience.

Pursuant to 38 U.S.C. § 1155, the disability ratings assigned in the Rating Schedule are based upon the "average impairments of earning capacity resulting from such injuries in civil occupations" and are to be revised by VA "in accordance with experience." As the statute contemplates, the provisions of

VA's Rating Schedule are based on VA's judgment and accumulated experience in evaluating the medical, vocational, and economic factors relating to the effect of specific disabilities on earning capacity. Disputes concerning the content of the Rating Schedule would not involve the type of legal issues or case-specific fact issues that appellate courts are ordinarily called upon to decide. Rather, they would involve challenges to VA's informed judgment concerning the average economic effects of specific medical conditions.

Appellate courts are ill-equipped to assess the many medical, social, economic, and experiential factors that inform VA's judgment on these issues, and the CAVC and Federal Circuit would be particularly hampered in this endeavor by the lack of any procedures for developing an evidentiary record for such review. Even if an appellate court could acquire sufficient information to permit judicial review of these discretionary judgments, the process would be extremely time-consuming and burdensome on VA and the courts alike.

Apart from the disruptive effects that would ensue if a reviewing court modifies or invalidates portions of the Rating Schedule, judicial review may limit VA's flexibility to adopt beneficial rating provisions based primarily on its experience and expertise. Although 38 U.S.C. § 1155 indicates that VA's experience will be the primary guide in adopting changes to the Rating Schedule, judicial review would necessarily result in increased formalization and a greater need for specific medical and vocational evidence to support each rating. Rather than benefiting veterans, in our view, the rigidity that would likely follow from judicial review may adversely affect the historically liberal nature of VA's Rating Schedule.

For these reasons, determinations concerning the average impairment of earning capacity due to specific conditions should continue to be committed to VA's informed discretion. The costs that may be associated with this provision cannot be predicted, but would depend on the number of challenges filed under this provision and the outcome of such challenges.

Standard of Review for Findings of Fact

Section 2 of S. 2079 would change the standard applied by the CAVC in reviewing findings of fact made by the Board of Veterans' Appeals. Currently, the CAVC is authorized to set aside any "clearly erroneous" finding of material fact. S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to set aside any finding of material fact that is "not reasonably supported by a preponderance of the evidence."

The "clearly erroneous" standard is a well-known standard of appellate review. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 52(a). In contrast, the "preponderance" standard is ordinarily used as a standard of proof describing a party's evidentiary burden before a fact-finding body such as the Board of Veterans' Appeals. As the Supreme Court has noted, standards of proof and standards of appellate review serve very different functions and are not interchangeable. Concrete Pipe and

Products of California, Inc. v. Construction Laborers Pension Trust for Southern California, 508 U.S. 602, 622-23 (1993). Standards of proof describe the degree of evidence needed to convince the finder of fact in the first instance. Standards of appellate review, on the other hand, describe the degree of confidence an appellate court must have in the fact finder's decision, and ordinarily accord some deference to the fact finder's decision.

There would be some incongruity in defining the CAVC's standard of review in terms of a standard of proof customarily employed only by initial fact finders. More troubling, however, is the fact that the "preponderance" standard would require the CAVC to decide claims without any deference to VA's findings of fact. Under the "benefit of the doubt" rule in section 5107(b) of title 38, United States Code, any findings of fact adverse to the veteran must be based on a preponderance of evidence. Section 2 of S. 2079 would direct the CAVC to independently decide whether a preponderance of evidence supports each factual finding, allowing no deference to the Board, which holds hearings, takes testimony, and seeks additional evidence as necessary.

This Committee's 1988 report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act discussed the importance of according deference to the Board's "expertise as an arbiter of the specialized types of factual issues that arise in the context of claims for VA benefits." This approach comports with the ordinary practice of according deference to factual findings made by administrative agencies, in view of the agencies' expertise, familiarity with the types of evidence and evidentiary issues involved, and ability to evaluate the credibility of testimony and other forms of evidence. Under the Administrative Procedure Act, findings of fact by most agencies are reviewed under the deferential "substantial evidence" standard.

Even if the Committee believes that a standard less restrictive than the "clearly erroneous" standard is warranted, it should not take the drastic step of permitting de novo review of VA fact finding, as S. 2079 would. As this Committee noted in its report on the Veterans' Judicial Review Act, there are other intermediate review standards available, such as the "substantial evidence" standard. Permitting de novo review would derogate from the Board's primary expertise in weighing evidence, evaluating the credibility of evidence, and making factual determinations on complex medical issues. It may also be expected to increase the CAVC's responsibilities and caseload. Moreover, it would depart from established practice in American jurisprudence of tiered layers of judicial review and would uniquely deprive VA of the deference routinely accorded to factual findings of virtually all other agencies. The anomaly of a court performing precisely the same function as an agency and wielding the same fact-finding authority is both redundant and inconsistent with the traditional roles of the executive and judicial branches of government.

Finally, I want to make clear that the CAVC's current standard of review does not in any way deprive veterans of the benefit of the doubt accorded by law.

Under current law, the CAVC routinely considers whether the Board has applied the "benefit of the doubt" standard, whether the Board has adequately explained the application of that standard to the facts of each case, and whether there is a plausible basis for the Board's conclusions under that standard. This review plainly ensures that the benefit of the doubt is accorded to veterans whenever applicable.

We cannot predict the costs that may be associated with this provision, as they would depend largely upon the outcome of individual cases.

Federal Circuit Review of Issues of Law

Section 3 of S. 2079 would authorize the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit to review decisions of the CAVC on a rule of law. Currently, the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions with respect to the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation or with respect to a constitutional question. S. 2079 would clarify that the Federal Circuit may decide legal questions that do not involve a statute, regulation, or constitutional provision. Proponents of this provision have suggested that it is needed to permit review of judicially-created legal rules, such as those involving equitable tolling of time limits or the so-called "treating physician" rule adopted by courts in Social Security benefit claims. VA does not agree with that view. We do not believe that purely legal issues are insulated from review by the current statute. Notably, the Federal Circuit has decided challenges concerning judicially-created legal principles under the existing statute, including issues pertaining to equitable tolling and the treating physician rule. See Bailey v. West, 160 F.3d 1360 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (en banc); White v. Principi, 243 F.3d 1378 (Fed. Cir. 2001).

Although we do not believe this provision is necessary, VA has no objection to it. Permitting judicial review of purely legal matters is consistent with the purpose of the Veterans' Judicial Review Act and, we believe, with the Federal Circuit's current practice.

We would, however, recommend one change to this provision. S. 2079 would amend section 7292(c) of title 38, United States Code, to state that the Federal Circuit may review CAVC decisions on a rule of law. This would ensure that the Federal Circuit would retain exclusive jurisdiction over review of decisions of the CAVC. We believe it would also be necessary to make this change in section 7292(a), the provision the Federal Circuit has identified as prescribing its jurisdiction in those cases. See Forshey v. Principi, No. 99-7064 (Fed. Cir. Apr. 1, 2002).

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

Fees for Non-Attorney Practitioners

Section 4 of S. 2079 would authorize the CAVC to award reasonable fees and expenses for the services of non-attorney practitioners admitted to practice

under that court's rules. Specifically, the bill would state that the CAVC's authority to award fees and expenses of attorneys under 28 U.S.C. § 2412(b) shall include the authority to award fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners "as if such non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court."

As an initial matter, we believe this bill should refer to subsection (d) of section 2412, rather than to subsection (b). The Federal Courts Administration Act of 1992 amended subsection (d) to give the CAVC authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of attorneys under that subsection. We are aware of no cases in which the CAVC has awarded fees and expenses under the separate authority of subsection (b) of section 2412.

VA has no objection to permitting payment of reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners. We note that the CAVC currently has authority to award reasonable fees and expenses of non-attorney practitioners who are supervised by an attorney. This legislation would extend that authority to cases involving unsupervised non-attorney practitioners who have been admitted to practice under the CAVC's rules.

VA does not, however, support the language in section 4 providing for awards "as if [the] non-attorney practitioners were attorneys admitted to practice before the Court." This language may require that fees for non-attorney practitioners be commensurate with fees for attorneys. Although we recognize the valuable services provided by non-attorney practitioners before the CAVC, their services ordinarily are not compensated at the same level as services of a licensed attorney. The Equal Access to Justice Act contemplates that fees generally shall correspond to the market rates for the kind and quality of services furnished. Accordingly, the CAVC should retain the authority to pay fees for attorneys and non-attorneys at different rates.

There would be no significant costs associated with this provision.

S. 2132

Section 1 of S. 2132 would require the Secretary to establish four Emergency Medical Preparedness Centers within the Veterans Health Administration (VHA). VA employees would staff the proposed Centers, and the Centers would be administered jointly by the offices within the Department that are responsible for directing research and for directing medical emergency preparedness.

The Centers would have four specific purposes. First, they would carry out research and develop methods in detection, diagnosis, vaccination, protection, and treatment of injuries arising from the use of chemical, biological, radiological agents or incendiary or other explosive weapons or devices.

Second, they would provide education, training, and advice on the medical consequences of the use of CBR agents or incendiary or other explosive weapons or devices. Third, the Centers would provide that same education, training, and advice to non-VA health-care professionals. These activities would be accomplished through either the National Disaster Medical System or interagency agreements. Fourth, in the event of a national emergency, they would provide laboratory, epidemiological, medical, or other assistance, as the Secretary considers appropriate, to Federal, State, and local health care agencies and personnel involved in, or responding to, the national emergency.

Each Center would be authorized to solicit and accept contributions of funds and other resources, including grants, to carry out their purposes and activities, subject to the Secretary's approval. Section 1 of this bill would also authorize to be appropriated $20 million for these Centers for each of fiscal years 2003 through 2007. By the bill's terms, such authorization is valid only for funds appropriated separately and solely for purposes of the Centers; otherwise, the authorization is null and void.

Section 1 of S. 2132 is similar to H.R. 3253 on which the Deputy Secretary testified on April 10, 2002, before the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, Subcommittee on Health. However, it incorporates the recommendations VA suggested in its April testimony concerning H.R. 3253 and adds a number of improvements to the House version of the bill. We are grateful to this Committee for having incorporated our recommendations. We strongly support section 1 of S. 2132 and prefer it to H.R. 3253.

In addition, S. 2132 contains two provisions that would expand the purpose and operations of VA non-profit corporations. VA non-profit corporations function as flexible funding mechanisms that support VA research and education. VA non-profits receive and administer funds from outside sources, e.g., NIH grants and donations made by private sponsors, in support of approved VA research projects and education activities. However, the current statute expressly provides that VA may not transfer appropriated funds to the corporations. Section 2(a) of the bill would amend section 7362 of title 38 to permit the transfer of appropriated dollars from VA to a corporation pursuant to a contract or other agreement, including an agreement for actual research. In addition, section 2(b) of the bill would amend VA's sharing authority to treat VA non-profits like affiliated institutions for the purpose of sharing health-care resources related to research, education and training. These changes would broadly enable the corporations to sell services to the Department. The bill also provides that these arrangements would be outside the scope of Federal procurement law and, therefore, would not be subject to full and open competition.

VA objects to these proposals on the grounds that they would alter the fundamental nature of the relationship between VA and the non-profits, which is analogous to that created in a trust. Under current law the corporations exist as a flexible funding mechanism solely to support approved VA research and education. The amendments in section 2 of the bill would make the relationship between Department health-care facilities and VA non-profits more like that with outside contractors or university affiliates; more of an arms-length negotiation rather than one of incontrovertible fiduciary support. This change would also shift the emphasis of VA non-profits away from the primary focus of providing flexible funding support for VA research, education and training to conducting and selling these services to VA. This shift would present a troubling risk of ceding Department control of VA approved research or education to the non-profits.

Section 3 of the bill would amend the title 38 authorities related to VA non-profits by adding a new section 7364A to specifically state that corporation employees assigned to work on approved VA research or education and training shall be considered employees for purposes of Federal tort claim and medical malpractice coverage. VA strongly favors this provision. We note, however, that the phrase, "carried out with Department funds" in the proposed section 7364A(b)(2) might be interpreted to limit this coverage. Much of VA-approved research, or education and training is supported by external funds.

REV_00144760

S. 2186

Mr. Chairman, thank you for introducing S. 2186 at our request. This legislation would establish a new Assistant Secretary to perform operations, preparedness, security and law enforcement and a new VA office of Operations Security and Preparedness. We believe this new office is essential if we are to meet our responsibilities of protecting veterans, employees, and visitors to our facilities.

S. 2187

S. 2187 would permit VA, on its own initiative, to care for those affected by a disaster or emergency and those responding to the emergency. The disaster or emergency must be either declared by the President or involve activation of the National Defense Medical System. Currently, in most cases, VA may provide care in such situations only if requested to do so under the Federal Response Plan administered by the Federal Emergency Management Administration. The bill would also require other Federal agencies to reimburse VA for care provided to their officers, employees, and active duty members at rates agreed upon by the agencies. VA would not be required to charge for care provided to other individuals. Finally, the bill would allow VA to provide care in response to disasters and emergency situations before caring for all other beneficiaries except service-connected veterans and active duty military members referred during war or national emergency or who are responding or involved in a disaster or emergency.

VA supports this measure. It would permit VA to respond quickly and obtain reimbursement for care from other Federal entities. We note that the bill also proposes to amend 38 U.S.C. § 1711(b). That provision is now codified at 38 U.S.C. § 1784. We also note that the bill would conflict with an administrative provision that appears in VA's annual appropriation act that requires reimbursement of costs except in specified situations. For the provision to be effective that provision of the appropriations act will also need amendment.

S. 2227

S. 2227 would clarify the effective date of changes to the method of computing retirement annuities for certain VA health-care personnel. Last January the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Care Programs Enhancement Act of 2001 became law. That bill changed the way part-time service performed before April 7, 1986, by certain VA health-care personnel is credited for annuity purposes. Congress intended this change to apply prospectively to the annuities of both those retiring after the effective date of Public Law No.107-135, as well as those who retired before that date, i.e., that part-time service performed prior to April 7, 1986, would be credited as full-time. This is a technical clarification of Congress' intent that the changes apply prospectively to both categories of employees. VA does not object to this proposal.

S. 2228

This bill would provide that the Secretary may establish not more than 15 Centers for Mental Illness Research, Education, and Clinical Activities under 38 U.S.C. § 7320. VA has no objection to this provision.

S. 2230

This legislation would revive VA's authority, contained in section 3707 of title 38, to guarantee adjustable rate mortgage loans (ARMs). The bill would also amend this section to authorize VA to guarantee "hybrid" ARMs.

In 1992 the Congress authorized a three-year test program for VA to guarantee ARMs. That authority had a sunset date of September 30, 1995. Due to concerns about the cost of that program, the Congress let the ARM authority lapse.

The interest rate on ARMs authorized by the 1992 statute, which would be reauthorized by the bill, is adjusted annually, based on a national interest-rate index approved by VA. Each annual increase or decrease is limited to one percentage point. In no event, however, may the interest rate be increased to more than five percentage points above the initial contract interest rate.

The interest rate on hybrid ARMs, which would also be authorized by S. 2230, is fixed for an initial period of not less than three years. Thereafter, the rate would increase or decrease annually by up to one percentage point. The maximum lifetime increase of five percentage points would also apply to hybrid ARMs.

VA supports S. 2230. The availability of ARMs would expand veterans' ability to qualify for home loans, as some veterans could qualify for the lower initial payments on an ARM who could not qualify for the payments on fixed rate loans for the same dollar amount. The availability of hybrid ARMs would give veterans the additional option of having a fixed monthly payment for a certain number of years before payment adjustment would be a possibility. VA believes veterans using their earned housing loan benefits should have the same options as borrowers using FHA and conventional loans.

VA has established detailed and prudent credit underwriting guidelines that are designed to increase the probability veterans will have the ability and inclination to make the required loan payments. Should veterans encounter financial difficulty and not be able to make the mortgage payments, VA will aggressively work with them in an effort to assist them in bringing their loans current. Should that effort fail, efforts are made to find alternatives to foreclosure that will reduce the adverse financial impact on both the veteran and the Government.

[The following is a preliminary cost estimate which is being verified and is subject to change] VA estimates that enactment of this bill would have a first-year cost of $17 million, and a 10-year cost of $211 million. This estimate assumes that the increased loan fees now set to expire September 30, 2011, will be extended at least one more year.

S. 2231

S. 2231 would increase educational assistance benefits under VA's Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance program (chapter 35), limit the number of months for those benefits, and increase funding to State Approving Agencies (SAAs). Specifically, it would raise the chapter 35 educational assistance allowance to $900 per month for a full-time course for Fiscal Year (FY) 2003 and to $985 for months after FY 2003. It would also raise the amounts payable for Special Restorative Training to $900 for FY 2003 and to $985 for the months thereafter. The proposed legislation would also decrease the entitlement available to chapter 35 recipients from the current 45 months to 36 months, in the case of those who first file an educational assistance claim under chapter 35 after the date of enactment. Given the relatively short time to consider these important issues regarding chapter 35, we would like to provide

The final provision of S. 2231 would increase the annual limit on funds available to compensate SAAs for work undertaken on behalf of VA, including approving educational institutions and programs for which veterans and other entitled participants receive VA-administered education benefits. On April 11, 2002, the Under Secretary for Benefits testified before the House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Benefits in favor of H.R. 3731, a bill similar to this one. We, likewise, favor the increase to $18,000,000 contained in S. 1517. However, H.R. 3731 additionally would provide increases in SAA funding of 3 percent for FYs 2004 and 2005, with funding for 2006 and each succeeding fiscal year remaining fixed at the FY 2005 level.

Because of the cost-of-living pay increases mandated by State law, salaries for State employees have gone up since the last SAA funding increase in 1994. Additionally, over the last two years, the SAAs have been called upon to perform new and time-consuming duties as part of their mission. For example, Public Law 106-419, enacted on November 1, 2000, initiated the licensing and certification test payment program and allowed VA to delegate approval responsibility to SAAs even though it was not covered in their contracts.

We prefer the House version of this provision because it would increase SAA funding for the outyears.

Other Bills

Mr. Chairman, we do not yet have cleared positions on three other bills on today's agenda:

- S. 2205, involving compensation for service-connected mastectomies and making permanent VA's authority to provide counseling and treatment for sexual trauma;
- S. 2209, which would establish a new insurance program for service-disabled veterans; and,
- S. 2237, involving enhanced compensation for veterans with hearing loss.

We will be presenting our views and estimates on these in writing once the necessary executive-branch coordination is completed.

Mr. Chairman that concludes my prepared testimony. I will be pleased to respond to any questions you or the members of the committee may have.

THE SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20590

April 30, 2002

The Honorable Don Young
Chairman, Committee on Transportation
and Infrastructure
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear ~~Mr. Chairman~~ DON:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would provide the same Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided to commercial airlines immediately following September 11, 2001. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks. The Administration opposes enactment of this bill.

The Administration supported the direct compensation and loan guarantee authority in H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (Pub. L. No. 107-42 (Sept. 22, 2001)), for commercial air carriers for a number of reasons unique to that industry and time. Commercial airliners had been used as the instrument for the terrorist attacks, air travel had been totally disrupted and was newly feared by many travelers, and significant adverse effects on the U.S. economy were anticipated as a result. The President's call after September 11 for the Nation to counter terrorism in part by reengaging in daily economic activity was critical to the effort to avoid a significant economic downturn. The enactment of H.R. 2926 was a highly visible case of the Federal Government's decisiveness in meeting our common objective. Because the U.S.-flag air carriers are a symbol of the United States both at home and abroad--and subject to attack for that reason--the compensation payments for air carriers were also in the interests of our foreign policy objectives world-wide.

Overall, the Administration believes that the best, most even-handed approach to recovery from the attacks of September 11 for all industries is couched in the President's proposals for economic stimulus, recently acted on in part by Congress, and his Budget Request for fiscal year 2003. This combination of measures has, in our view, already had a beneficial effect on the economic outlook, and has gone far to revive the markets for the Nation's goods and services, including the non-commercial aviation sector. In an even-handed way, this approach seeks to lift the economic situation of industries across the Nation.

Our experience with implementation of H.R. 2926 also indicates that the provisions of H.R. 3347 contain a number of practical drawbacks. Most important, while the number of entities that might qualify in the commercial aviation industry for benefits may reach 600, the number of "general aviation entities and their employees" covered by H.R. 3347 may number in the many thousands. "[G]eneral aviation entities" is imprecise phraseology and could be argued to cover a wide range of businesses, everything from companies that make aviation charts to those that supply specialty items sold in aviation catalogs and shops featuring an aviation theme. Enactment of H.R. 3347 would place a very substantial additional burden on the Department.

Another substantial difference between the two bills and a concern in the case of H.R. 3347 is that the objectively grounded formula for allocating limited funding among recipients in H.R. 2926 (proportion of "available seat miles" or "revenue ton miles") is, of necessity, omitted from H.R. 3347. We are not aware of objective data that would provide a defensible basis for allocation of the limited funding in H.R. 3347 among qualified recipients. To take a simple example, what basis would exist to balance claims about lost sales among aircraft manufacturers, their own employees, and suppliers to that industry? It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. The commercial insurance industry has already objected to the continuation of the existing program on behalf of commercial air carriers. The Department believes that the general terrorism insurance legislation (H.R. 3210) now pending in Congress makes more sense for the Nation's industries.

Finally, although the bill would deem the $5.5 billion in spending under the bill (potentially offset in part by reduced spending under H.R. 2926) "emergency spending" under budget rules, it would nonetheless exacerbate the problem of budget deficits in the wake of September 11. We firmly believe that the President's proposals to reinvigorate the economy are the better means to address the finances of this and other industries.

For these reasons, we oppose passage of H.R. 3347. We do appreciate the opportunity to provide our views. The Office of Management and Budget advises that it has no objection to the submission of these views for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely yours,

Norman Y. Mineta

April 30, 2002

The Honorable William O. Lipinski
Ranking Member, Subcommittee On Aviation
Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Lipinski:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would provide the same Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided to commercial airlines immediately following September 11, 2001. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks. It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. The commercial insurance industry has already objected to the continuation of the existing program on behalf of commercial air carriers. The Department believes that the general terrorism insurance legislation (H.R. 3210) now pending in Congress makes more sense for the Nation's industries.

Finally, although the bill would deem the $5.5 billion in spending under the bill (potentially offset in part by reduced spending under H.R. 2926) "emergency spending" under budget rules, it would nonetheless exacerbate the problem of budget deficits in the wake of September 11. We firmly believe that the President's proposals to reinvigorate the economy are the better means to address the finances of this and other industries.

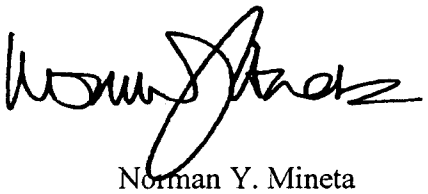
For these reasons, we oppose passage of H.R. 3347. We do appreciate the opportunity to provide our views. The Office of Management and Budget advises that it has no objection to the submission of these views for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely yours,



Norman Y. Mineta

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would provide the same Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided to commercial airlines immediately following September 11, 2001. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks. The Administration opposes enactment of this bill.

The Administration supported the direct compensation and loan guarantee authority in H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (Pub. L. No. 107-42 (Sept. 22, 2001)), for commercial air carriers for a number of reasons unique to that industry and time. Commercial airliners had been used as the instrument for the terrorist attacks, air travel had been totally disrupted and was newly feared by many travelers, and significant adverse effects on the U.S. economy were anticipated as a result. The President's call after September 11 for the Nation to counter terrorism in part by reengaging in daily economic activity was critical to the effort to avoid a significant economic downturn. The enactment of H.R. 2926 was a highly visible case of the Federal Government's decisiveness in meeting our common objective. Because the U.S.-flag air carriers are a symbol of the United States both at home and abroad--and subject to attack for that reason--the compensation payments for air carriers were also in the interests of our foreign policy objectives world-wide.

Overall, the Administration believes that the best, most even-handed approach to recovery from the attacks of September 11 for all industries is couched in the President's proposals for economic stimulus, recently acted on in part by Congress, and his Budget Request for fiscal year 2003. This combination of measures has, in our view, already had a beneficial effect on the economic outlook, and has gone far to revive the markets for the Nation's goods and services, including the non-commercial aviation sector. In an even-handed way, this approach seeks to lift the economic situation of industries across the Nation.

Our experience with implementation of H.R. 2926 also indicates that the provisions of H.R. 3347 contain a number of practical drawbacks. Most important, while the number of entities that might qualify in the commercial aviation industry for benefits may reach 600, the number of "general aviation entities and their employees" covered by H.R. 3347 may number in the many thousands. "[G]eneral aviation entities" is imprecise phraseology and could be argued to cover a wide range of businesses, everything from companies that make aviation charts to those that supply specialty items sold in aviation catalogs and shops featuring an aviation theme. Enactment of H.R. 3347 would place a very substantial additional burden on the Department.

Another substantial difference between the two bills and a concern in the case of H.R. 3347 is that the objectively grounded formula for allocating limited funding among recipients in H.R. 2926 (proportion of "available seat miles" or "revenue ton miles") is, of necessity, omitted from H.R. 3347. We are not aware of objective data that would provide a defensible basis for allocation of the limited funding in H.R. 3347 among qualified recipients. To take a simple example, what basis would exist to balance claims about lost sales among aircraft manufacturers, their own employees, and suppliers to that industry? It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. THE SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION

April 30, 2002

The Honorable Don Young
Chairman, Committee on Transportation
and Infrastructure
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear ~~Mr. Chairman~~ DON:

I would like to take the opportunity to provide the views of the U.S. Department of Transportation on H.R. 3347, as reported from the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the General Aviation Industry Reparations Act of 2002.

H.R. 3347 would provide the same Federal Government direct compensation payments and loan guarantees to the non-commercial aviation industry as were provided to commercial airlines immediately following September 11, 2001. While the Administration is aware of and deeply concerned about losses sustained by the general aviation industry and its employees in the aftermath of September 11, we do not believe that H.R. 3347 represents the best course of action to address the consequences of the attacks. The Administration opposes enactment of this bill.

The Administration supported the direct compensation and loan guarantee authority in H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act (Pub. L. No. 107-42 (Sept. 22, 2001)), for commercial air carriers for a number of reasons unique to that industry and time. Commercial airliners had been used as the instrument for the terrorist attacks, air travel had been totally disrupted and was newly feared by many travelers, and significant adverse effects on the U.S. economy were anticipated as a result. The President's call after September 11 for the Nation to counter terrorism in part by reengaging in daily economic activity was critical to the effort to avoid a significant economic downturn. The enactment of H.R. 2926 was a highly visible case of the Federal Government's decisiveness in meeting our common objective. Because the U.S.-flag air carriers are a symbol of the United States both at home and abroad--and subject to attack for that reason--the compensation payments for air carriers were also in the interests of our foreign policy objectives world-wide.

Overall, the Administration believes that the best, most even-handed approach to recovery from the attacks of September 11 for all industries is couched in the President's proposals for economic stimulus, recently acted on in part by Congress, and his Budget Request for fiscal year 2003. This combination of measures has, in our view, already had a beneficial effect on the economic outlook, and has gone far to revive the markets for the Nation's goods and services, including the non-commercial aviation sector. In an even-handed way, this approach seeks to lift the economic situation of industries across the Nation.

Our experience with implementation of H.R. 2926 also indicates that the provisions of H.R. 3347 contain a number of practical drawbacks. Most important, while the number of entities that might qualify in the commercial aviation industry for benefits may reach 600, the number of "general aviation entities and their employees" covered by H.R. 3347 may number in the many thousands. "[G]eneral aviation entities" is imprecise phraseology and could be argued to cover a wide range of businesses, everything from companies that make aviation charts to those that supply specialty items sold in aviation catalogs and shops featuring an aviation theme. Enactment of H.R. 3347 would place a very substantial additional burden on the Department.

Another substantial difference between the two bills and a concern in the case of H.R. 3347 is that the objectively grounded formula for allocating limited funding among recipients in H.R. 2926 (proportion of "available seat miles" or "revenue ton miles") is, of necessity, omitted from H.R. 3347. We are not aware of objective data that would provide a defensible basis for allocation of the limited funding in H.R. 3347 among qualified recipients. To take a simple example, what basis would exist to balance claims about lost sales among aircraft manufacturers, their own employees, and suppliers to that industry? It is virtually certain that any rationale created by the Department, however carefully balanced and defended, to carry out the mandate to allocate funding would be subject to litigation.

The bill also contains provisions that range far from the goal of compensating September 11 losses. For example, the existing "war risk insurance" program (chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code), which has always applied only to commercial air carriers engaged in carrying out the foreign policy and other national interests of the United States, would be opened to all general aviation entities, whether or not their activities contribute to national interests. The commercial insurance industry has already objected to the continuation of the existing program on behalf of commercial air carriers. The Department believes that the general terrorism insurance legislation (H.R. 3210) now pending in Congress makes more sense for the Nation's industries.

Finally, although the bill would deem the $5.5 billion in spending under the bill (potentially offset in part by reduced spending under H.R. 2926) "emergency spending" under budget rules, it would nonetheless exacerbate the problem of budget deficits in the wake of September 11. We firmly believe that the President's proposals to reinvigorate the economy are the better means to address the finances of this and other industries.

REV_00144793

For these reasons, we oppose passage of H.R. 3347. We do appreciate the opportunity to provide our views. The Office of Management and Budget advises that it has no objection to the submission of these views for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely yours,

Norman Y. Mineta

So long as you are sure it is in electronic form (and it is in paper form as well), it is duplicate and thus discardable.

Tony--Please use all means to start printing now; you will be able to deliver the new boxes to Brett immediately since we have confirmed that this is the search he will use.

Brett--If you're certain that you will not need the printout for the first run, it would be great if you let Tony know so he can discard. Of course we will still have the data in electronic form if it is needed for any reason.

Testimony of
R. Glenn Hubbard
Chairman, Council of Economic Advisers

before the
Subcommittee on Oversight
Committee on Ways and Means
U.S. House of Representatives

Tuesday, May 7, 2002
2:00 P.M.

Chairman Houghton and members of the Subcommittee, it is a pleasure to appear before you today to discuss the important issue of budget scoring for tax proposals. Under current practice, the Joint Committee on Taxation (JCT) – the provider of revenue estimates to the U.S. Congress for tax legislation either enacted or under consideration – and the Department of the Treasury – which has a comparable role for the Administration – takes in to consideration a wide variety of behavioral microeconomic responses to the incentives resulting from tax policies. That is, for example, the JCT examines the impact on realizations of a change in capital gains tax rates, or the shift in consumption of gasoline in response to gasoline excise taxes.

The purpose of my remarks today is to discuss the notion of expanding the scope of revenue estimate to include in some way macroeconomic effects, sometimes called "dynamic scoring." Under a dynamic scoring approach, revenue estimates would explicitly incorporate not just individual or firm-level responses to tax-based incentives, but also changes in the overall scale of economic activity as a result of the tax policy. That is, revenue estimates for tax changes might incorporate current and future changes in the level of Gross Domestic Product and tax bases such as aggregate earned income, aggregate corporate profits, dividends, and so forth.

Five observations frame the debate over dynamic scoring. First, the idea of dynamic scoring is conceptually correct. The basic notion in revenue estimation is to calculate the yearly revenue – from all relevant sources – over the appropriate budget window under current law. To do so requires evaluating the economic activity that would prevail using current tax rules, redoing the calculation using the tax code as modified by the proposal (which clearly requires knowing the economic activity – including all relevant tax bases – under the alternative tax rules), and comparing – on a year-by-year or other basis – the revenue in the latter to the revenue in the former. In doing so, changes in revenues from all sources would enter the revenue estimate without constraints such as a fixed macroeconomic baseline. So, for example, if one were to switch to a broad-based consumption tax, some estimates are that the capital stock would rise by 14 percent over the first eight years, with GDP rising by 4 percent. The increase in wage, dividend, interest, and other sources of income embodied in these macroeconomic changes would be one source of additional revenue. Of course, in practice these steps are fraught with difficulty. Still, these operational challenges, to which I will return below, should not disguise the basic objectives.

The second observation is that dynamic scoring does not make sense every tax proposal. For certain tax policy changes – substantial reductions in marginal tax rates, broad-based investment incentives, etc. – there are likely to be shifts in aggregate labor supply, saving, entrepreneurial ventures, composition of compensation, investment, and so forth substantial enough to alter both the path of the economy, and the level and time path of receipts. As an economist, I think of this in a benefit-cost framework. Dynamic scoring is harder, and thus more "costly" in some general sense. For this reason it should be restricted to those circumstances in which it informs our outlook for the macroeconomy. We should turn to dynamic scoring in those circumstances in which conventional scoring rules can reasonably be expected to give a misleading picture of both the overall revenue effects over the relevant budget window, and the growth or transition of revenues on a year-by-year basis.

The third observation is that dynamic scoring represents additional information into the tax policy process. As is well known to this audience, a cost of the tax system is that taxes distort incentives to undertake a wide range of economic activities – work, saving, investment, and so forth. One manifestation of these costs is that GDP is lower than it would be in the absence of the tax system, or at least lower than it would be in the presence of a more efficient tax system. Accordingly, a dynamic scoring process will reflect the reduction in deadweight loss (the economic activity foregone due to tax distortions) and increase in GDP as one part of the revenue consequences of the tax policy. For this reason, adding this information aids policymakers in making the right choices for the economy, and economic effects are more important than revenue effects.

More mechanically, it is straightforward to conduct a revenue estimate using existing methods and supplement these estimates with an "impact statement" that shows the additional revenue effects of the macroeconomic consequences.

The fourth observation builds on the previous two: because not every proposal merits a full-blown dynamic scoring, and because the macroeconomic consequences can be viewed as a supplement to (as opposed to a substitute for) current procedures, there is no need to embed dynamic scoring in the existing budget process. Instead, for those proposals that meet the two criteria discussed earlier, the conventional scoring can be supplemented with an impact statement. This will be useful in two ways: policies that merit an impact statement will stand out from other tax changes, and the impact statement will be useful in guiding priorities and decision-making.

The final observation is that dynamic scoring of tax proposals is difficult. The empirical tax and economic modeling capability necessary is quite demanding. To get a flavor of the challenge, consider dynamic scoring of a proposal to eliminate the double-taxation of dividend income. Specifically, suppose that the policy were to be enacted this year, but not effective for two years. And, suppose further that full implementation of the proposal was phased in over a period of several years.

A model suitable for dynamic scoring would necessarily need to permit the announcement of the policy to affect corporate financial policy and investment, household saving and portfolio decisions, and the resulting macroeconomic consequences for interest rates, equity prices, saving, investment, and GDP. Further, the model necessary would distinguish between the ultimate impact when the policy had been fully-phased-in, and the transition path as the policy is incrementally implemented. Economic projections informing the revenue consequences on a year-by-year basis should reflect households' and businesses' judgments regarding the timing of their activities in response to not only the tax incentives, but also the economic environment – which of course is in part influenced by their decisions. Obviously, this is a difficult task.

Given the inherent difficulties, one can anticipate that different modeling strategies will yield alternative estimates. Some view this as an insurmountable impediment to the entire notion. In contrast, I see no reason why multiple impact statements might not be produced using a variety of modeling techniques for any single tax proposal.

Revisiting the conventions used for evaluating tax proposals is a valuable exercise. I thank the committee for holding this hearing. More generally, I think it is important to recognize the history of efforts in this area by this committee, the Committee on Ways and Means, the Joint Committee on Taxation through its 1997 Symposium on Tax Modeling, and many others. The Administration looks forward to working with Congress on this issue.

Thank you, Ms. Chairman, and I look forward to discussing with you this important topic.

oops, I originally had 4 options listed and did not change the number of my preferred option at the end of the e-mail. To be clear, I prefer OPTION 2 -- meeting with Judge and Lieberman. I definitely do NOT prefer option 3.

We are meeting with the Judge and Tim at 10:45 on Monday. Do you guys want to try to get together this weekend to talk this through? I could do it early this afternoon, Sunday morning, or Sunday night after 8:00 p.m. (We could even get together at my house if this would be more convenient for everyone.)

Alternatively, we could try to get to the office a half-hour early on Monday and meet from 7:30 to 8:00. I know that's early but it might be preferable to weekend time. Trying to do it during business hours Monday prior to our meeting with the Judge and Tim will be difficult. I'm crashing these days on a number of things.

I think this is a very important decision and there are serious arguments to make in favor of each option. On balance, I think I favor option 2, sending a letter to Lieberman asking for a meeting, principals only, to discuss his concerns, but I think we really need to talk a while.

Let me know.

Judge wants us to put together a game plan over the weekend.
Seems to me we have 3 options (with lots of sub-options): (i) respond with a letter that goes through the history, defends our approach, explains that their complaints are premature, and explains that some of their complaints -- e.g., e-mail etc. -- could be easily resolved if they provided us some specificity; (ii) schedule a meeting between Judge and Lieberman where they try to hash some things out; and (iii) back down. I vote for option 3 as most likely to produce a good result and lower the temperature.

The Washington Post has a very short piece today on Lieberman's letter of yesterday. It states incorrectly that Lieberman is seeking information from the White House with Thompson's consent.

The Joint Economic Committee released a study last week entitled "The Economic Costs of Terrorism". In general, the study notes that there are significant short-term and long-term costs associated with a terrorist attack. The Committee's report recommends that the federal government put in place a temporary and limited insurance backstop as a way to minimize the economic disruption related to a terrorist attack.

Enron – California Documents

- These documents have been released as part of an ongoing investigation and it would not be appropriate for us to comment.

- As a more general matter, the Administration supports tough enforcement of laws that protect consumers. Indeed, we have called on Congress to enact tougher penalties to prevent market manipulation and we are pleased that this is in the Senate bill. It is one more reason why the Congress needs to act quickly to enact comprehensive energy legislation.

- It is also important to prevent the opportunity for market manipulation by modernizing and expanding our electricity grid and encouraging investment in new, clean generation.

Didn't you downplay the possibility that Enron and others might be manipulating the market during the California energy crisis?

A. There were many factors that contributed to California's energy crisis, including a lack of generation, an inadequate transmission grid, and a flawed electricity restructuring model. The Administration sought to help California by expediting permitting for new energy facilities, freeing up the Path 15 Bottleneck, and improving conservation at federal facilities.

If market manipulation exacerbated the problems, this is a matter for FERC to investigate, determine and punish.

Interesting provision in the Senate energy bill:

Section 2701 (last section of enormous bill):

"Sec. 2701. Fair Treatment of Presidential Judicial Nominees.
It is the sense of the Senate that, in the interests of the administration of justice, the Senate Judiciary Committee should along with its other legislative and oversight responsibilities, continue to hold regular hearings on judicial nominees and should, in accordance with the precedents and practices of the Committee, schedule hearings on the nominees submitted by the President on May
9, 2001, expeditiously."

Section-by-Section Analysis

COMPREHENSIVE PLANNING UNDER THE INDIAN HOUSING BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM

Section 101(h) of the Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act of 1996 (NAHASDA) authorizes Indian Housing Block Grant (IHBG) recipients to use a percentage of the grant amounts they receive for any reasonable administrative and planning expenses related to carrying out activities under NAHASDA, including costs for salaries of individuals engaged in administering and managing affordable housing activities assisted with NAHASDA grants, and expenses of preparing an Indian housing plan. Through administrative means, HUD has currently set this percentage at 20 percent.

Section ____ would amend section 101(h) to allow IHBG recipients to use a portion of their grant funds, within the 20 percent cap, to engage in comprehensive housing and community development planning activities. Rational, comprehensive land-use planning, when used in conjunction with proper zoning, master plans and associated tools, results in decent, livable Native American communities. Tribes must ensure that the appropriate location of housing, commercial, industrial and tribal governmental projects and activities occurs carefully and thoughtfully. They often do not have funding sources to obtain services to accomplish these objectives. This amendment would authorize these activities as an eligible administrative expense under NAHASDA.

REAAUTHORIZATION OF CERTAIN INDIAN HOUSING PROGRAMS

The authorization of appropriations for the Indian Housing Block Grant program and the title VI housing loan gurarntee program under NAHSDA expired at the end of fiscal year 2001. Section ___ would amend sections 108 and 605 of NAHASDA to reauthorize both programs through 2007. The reauthorization of these programs would support HUD's FY 2003 Budget request to fund these successful programs.

AUTHORITY FOR HUD TO CONDUCT FORECLOSURES UNDER THE SECTION 184 INDIAN LOAN GUARANTEE PROGRAM

Section ___ would give HUD the authority to bring foreclosure actions under the Section 184 Indian Loan Guarantee program.

The Department of Justice (DOJ) is the Federal agency responsible for representing the Federal Government when foreclosures are necessary in this guaranteed loan program. To bring actions on tribal lands, attorneys must comply with any specific tribal bar admission requirements. It can be very difficult to find an available DOJ attorney who is well versed in HUD law and foreclosure procedures and is a member of a specific State or tribal bar. Bar admission requirements vary from tribe to tribe and State to State, from submitting a form to passing an exam, and even those that require just a form can take months to process. DOJ does not have many attorneys with the specialized background and training to do foreclosures in tribal courts, and HUD does not have the authority to carry out the foreclosures using its attorneys or the authority to contract with outside counsel.

Formatted

Given this situation, it is appropriate to give the proposed foreclosure authority to HUD under the Section 184 program, which is similar to the foreclosure authority that USDA has under its section 502 rural housing program (see section 510(d) of the Housing Act of 1949). By allowing HUD to handle a foreclosure in-house or to contract with outside counsel, generally a local private attorney, this proposal will ensure the most timely protection of the Federal Government's financial interests.

HUD REPORTS TO CONGRESS

Section ___ would make the following changes (mostly technical) to certain HUD reporting requirements to Congress.

Subsection (a) would separate the FHA annual report on single family mortgagor and loan characteristics (section 203(w)) of the National Housing Act (NHA)), the annual actuarial study (section 205(g) of the NHA), and the early default report (section 540(c) of the NHA) that were combined by section 1103(f) of the American Homeownership and Economic Opportunity Act of 2000. These reports are very different products that are more appropriate to handle separately.

Subsection (b) would amend the due date of HUD's annual report on activities of FNMA and FHLMC (section 1328 of the Federal Housing Enterprises Financial Safety and Soundness Act of 1992) from June 30th to September 30th because the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act data that the Department relies on to prepare the report is not available to the Department until after June 30th.

Subsection (c) would repeal section 10001 of the 1997 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, which requires HUD to submit a semiannual report to the appropriations committees that lists all new HUD contracts and task orders in excess of $250,000. This reporting requirement is not necessary since the information in the report is included in the Federal Procurement Data System and the information in such System is available to members of Congress upon request.

I'm sorry, but I don't like this approach. It seems weak; it seems defensive; and it doesn't seem like we're straightforwardly responding. I would do a letter that says something like the following:

Dear Senator Lieberman:

I received your letter of May 7 and look forward to our meeting. As I expressed in my previous letter, I believe a discussion between the two of us is the most productive way of clarifying the points raised in your letter of May 3 and of agreeing upon an approach that will satisfy the Committee's needs. Such a meeting will allow us to have a dialogue rather a continuing formal exchange of correspondence and will allow me to better explain the reasons for the approach we are taking and answer whatever questions you may have.

I have no objections, however, to responding to the questions at the end of your May 3 letter. Those answers are as follows:

1. A search of the White House Automated Records Management system; a search of the White House Visitors Entry System (WAVES); a search for potentially relevant hard files in the possession of the Office of Records Management; and preparation for additional information-gathering efforts following survey responses.

2. We expect the searches themselves to take place within the next several days; planning has been ongoing.

3. We distributed the survey as indicated on the cover memo accompanying the survey form itself, a copy of which we previously provided to you. Absent guidance from your staff on an appropriate and reasonable distribution of the survey, we identified the commissioned officers as the staff members most likely to have useful and responsive information, given their seniority and levels of responsibility. We also have identified those most likely to have useful and responsive information in the other EOP offices indicated on the cover memo accompanying the survey form. The President and Vice President are both already on record describing the relevant contacts each of them had. For your convenience, I am attaching copies and transcripts of their previous statements.

4. We are not seeking information from former employees, as they are no longer employed by the White House.

5. Yes, the survey and follow up steps may elicit information on this subject. I wish to discuss with you the Committee's interest in those matters for the reasons stated in my letter of April 19.

6. Yes, the survey and follow up steps may elicit information on this subject. I wish to discuss with you the Committee's interest in those matters for the reasons stated in my letter of April 19.

I look forward to discussing these and other matters in greater depth when we meet.

Sincerely,

Brett M. Kavanaugh

May __, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

Thank you for your letter of May 7, 2002. I look forward to meeting with you this week, which should assist the Committee and the White House in settling on a mutually agreeable approach.

You asked that I inform you before the meeting about White House efforts to gather relevant information. As you know, we have distributed an initial survey to a large group of White House and other EOP officials who are likely to possess relevant information. The survey is designed to help us determine who had communications relevant to the Committee's inquiry. Then, we intend to gather more information from the individuals who had relevant communications. This seemed to us an entirely sensible approach that would allow us to efficiently gather relevant information and expeditiously and appropriately respond to the Committee's inquiry.

In light of your most recent letter, however, we have initiated a process for searching relevant e-mail and visitor entry records for all EOP employees. As you know, this procedure will require the page-by-page review of a tremendous amount of irrelevant information that necessarily will be gathered in an electronic search using general search terms. That said, we have undertaken this effort in order to cooperate with the Committee.

You also have asked specifically about former employees. We did not send the survey to former employees because they are no longer employed by the White House. You also ask about appointments and the NEPDG. The survey necessarily will elicit certain information that may be relevant to those subjects. That said, I wish to discuss with you the Committee's interest in those matters for reasons stated in my letter of April 19.

I look forward to meeting with you this week.

Sincerely,

DRAFT

7:00 P.M.

May __, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

Thank you for your letter of May 7, 2002, and for agreeing to meet with me this week to discuss the Committee's request. Our meeting should allow us to have an efficient dialogue, rather than a continuing exchange of correspondence, and thereby assist the Committee and the White House in settling on a mutually acceptable approach.

You asked that I inform you before the meeting about White House efforts to gather relevant information. As you know, we have distributed a survey to more than 200 White House and other EOP officials who are most likely to possess relevant information, including all Assistants to the President, Deputy Assistants to the President, and Special Assistants to the President. The survey will identify individuals who had communications relevant to the Committee's inquiry. At that point, we intend to gather relevant information from the identified individuals. This is an entirely sensible approach that will allow us to efficiently gather relevant information and expeditiously and appropriately respond to the Committee's inquiry.

You also asked certain specific questions. The answers are as follows:

1. We have now initiated additional steps that will include a search of the White House Automated Records Management system, a search of the White House Visitors Entry System (WAVES), and a search for potentially relevant documents in the possession of the Office of Records Management.

2. We expect the searches themselves to begin within the next several days.

3. We distributed the survey as indicated on the cover memo accompanying the survey form itself. We identified the commissioned officers as the staff members most likely to have relevant information, given their levels of responsibility. We also identified those most likely to have relevant information in the other EOP offices indicated on the cover memo accompanying the survey form. The President and Vice President have publicly described relevant communications they had.

4. We are not seeking information from former employees, as they are no longer employed by the White House.

5. The survey and follow-up steps may elicit information on this subject. That said, I wish to discuss with you the Committee's interest in this subject for the reasons stated in my letter of April 19.

6. The survey and follow-up steps may elicit information on this subject. That said, I wish to discuss with you the Committee's interest in this subject for the reasons stated in my letter of April 19.

I look forward to meeting with you this week.

Sincerely,

Sincerely,

A few weeks ago, the Seventh Circuit ruled on the question whether the government attorney-client privilege applies in federal criminal proceedings.
In a 3-0 opinion by Judge Diane Wood and joined by Judges Posner and Flaum, the court expressly agreed with Eighth Circuit and D.C. Circuit decisions that there is no such privilege in federal criminal proceedings. The Seventh Circuit case involved a state lawyer for then-Secretary of State Ryan in Illinois; the federal grand jury subpoenaed the lawyer regarding his discussions with Ryan.
Ryan objected, but the Seventh Circuit ruled that the attorney must testify.

The court's decision includes the same kind of very strong rhetoric found in the Eighth and D.C. Circuit decisions about the distinction between government lawyers and corporate and private lawyers:

"While we recognize the need for full and frank communication between government officials, we are more persuaded by the serious arguments against extending the attorney-client privilege to protect communications between government lawyers and the public officials they serve when criminal proceedings are at issue. First, government lawyers have responsibilities and obligations different from those facing members of the private bar. While the latter are appropriately concerned first and foremost with protecting their clients--even those engaged in wrongdoing-- from criminal charges and public exposure, government lawyers have a higher, competing duty to act in the public interest. Lindsey, 158 F.3d at 1273; Comment to ABA Model Rule 1.13 (noting that government lawyers may have higher duty to rectify wrongful official acts despite general rule of confidentiality). They take an oath, separate from their bar oath, to uphold the United States Constitution and the laws of this nation (and usually the laws of the state they serve when, as was the case with Bickel, they are state employees). Their compensation comes not from a client whose interests they are sworn to protect from the power of the state, but from the state itself and the public fisc. It would be both unseemly and a misuse of public assets to permit a public official to use a taxpayer-provided attorney to conceal from the taxpayers themselves otherwise admissible evidence of financial wrongdoing, official misconduct, or abuse of power. Compare Nixon, 418 U.S. at 713 (qualified executive privilege applies in the face of a criminal investigation). Therefore, when another government lawyer requires information as part of a criminal investigation, the public lawyer is obligated not to protect his governmental client but to ensure its compliance with the law."

Senate Argues Over Who Caused Delay In Floor Action on Terrorism Insurance

A struggle is under way in the Senate over who bears responsibility for a delay in bringing terrorism reinsurance legislation to the floor, congressional and industry sources told BNA May 8.
The legislation has been delayed since December, when a bipartisan compromise measure did not reach the Senate floor.
In recent weeks, Democrats have offered unanimous consent agreements to bring the legislation to the floor, but Republicans have rejected them, on the basis that base legislation did not contain strong enough provisions on tort reform
```

and against punitive damages.
Democrats first offered seven hours of debate on the legislation with two amendments on each side, and then offered four amendments and no time limit.
Pressure has increased on Senate Republicans as time has passed, and they are trying to shift the "blame" for the delay back to Democrats, an industry source said.
Karl Rove, a top aide to President Bush, conveyed the message at a May 7 Republican policy luncheon that Bush would not thwart the Senate Republican position that terrorism insurance legislation should contain provisions prohibiting punitive damages in claims arising from terrorist acts, an industry source said.
"Rove went up there to say the president is not going to undercut them on punitive damages and to express the president's concern that terrorism insurance get done," the industry source said.
With debate on judicial nominations and trade not expected to go well in the coming days, there could be an opening on the floor for terrorism insurance.
However, the punitive damages issue appears to be gridlocked, with negotiator Sen. Phil Gramm (R-Texas) supporting a cap on punitive damages associated with terrorist acts during the duration of a federal terrorism insurance program, and Democrats only stipulating that government funds could not be used to pay punitive damages.
Gramm also has expressed interest in raising the threshold for when a federal backstop would kick in for terrorism insurance.
The House passed its version of a terrorism insurance bill (H.R. 3210) Nov. 29.
In general, the legislation would guarantee federal funds for catastrophic property and casualty losses caused by terrorist attacks on U.S. soil.
The compromise measure reached last year would consolidate lawsuits stemming from terrorist acts in federal court, establish loss limits on a per-company basis--depending upon company size and ability to absorb damages--and prohibit government funds from being used to pay punitive damages.

Meeting with Chairman Lieberman

- To begin with, I think you have somewhat underestimated our approach, which will sensibly gather information and allow us to focus our efforts on the people who actually possess relevant information. We also think your concerns are premature. We are gathering information. And we would like you to give us a chance to complete the process.

- As I read your May 3 letter, there are nine substantive issues you raise.

Issue 1. Survey sent only to officials of certain rank and to certain offices.

Response: We chose the people who were most likely to have relevant information. There are several thousand people who work in the EOP, most of whom could not conceivably have relevant information. It is far more sensible to focus on those with any likelihood of possessing relevant information. If you think people were erroneously left out, we can add them. We also can provide you with the list of individuals covered by the survey. The survey went to more than 200 EOP employees.

Issue 2. Information from President/Vice President.

Response: Both of them have made public statements about their communications. We see no basis to seek more information from them without a compelling predicate or reason to do so.

Issue 3. Former EOP staff.

Response: Our records searches will gather information related to former employees. As to the survey, however, we have no authority or role with respect to former employees. We do not represent or control them.

Issue 4. E-mail and WAVES.

Response: We have begun a search consistent with your request.

Issue 5. Complaint that our survey does not seek any details.

Response: As the survey indicates on its face, we intend to follow up with those who have relevant information. (Note: The manner of follow-up has yet to be determined depending on volume and the like.)

Issue 6. Survey does not ask about communications with Enron about policy issues when the communications do not mention the listed agencies.

Response: Your original request never asked simply for communications from Enron about specified subject matters, so we are surprised that this is now an issue. Indeed, the survey essentially quoted from your second letter on April 24; your letter stated that "[t]he request seeks communications EOP staff had with or about a single company relating to eight federal agencies . . ." It also bears mention that our survey is in fact broader than your request in asking specifically whether Enron ever sought help with respect to its financial condition.

Issue 7. What about communications with other federal agencies related to the listed agencies?

Response: To be honest, we have never understood this aspect of the request. What exactly do you seek here?

Issue 8. Appointments.

Response: Our problem here is straightforward. First, Presidential appointments are at the core of his constitutional power. The confirmation process is, in effect, the Senate's oversight on that process. I think it is highly unusual for Congress to delve into this. Second, and more practically, the inquiry will not capture information in a way that is accurate. Suppose Enron weighed in on one appointment as did 50 other entities and individuals. Well, you only seek the Enron input. And then that person and the President get tarred because Enron had undue influence. That makes no sense to me. Ken Lay wrote me about Judge Lee Rosenthal in support of her elevation to the Fifth Circuit. Why do you want that? What does that prove?

All of that said, if there are certain individual appointments in which you are interested, we are willing to gather information and assess it.

Issue 9. NEPDG.

Response: We have the same kind of problem here. Without knowing all inputs into the NEPDG, it would be misleading to assess only the Enron inputs. And given that problem, and given that the NEPDG had nothing to do with Enron's collapse or financial problems, we have some problems with this request as well. What is more, the development of policy again goes to the core of the President's constitutional authority, as distinct from the exercise of regulatory authority by particular agencies. That said, our survey and searches will gather some information about the NEPDG, and we would propose that we wait and see what we gather.

Draft May 7, 2002

A. Hugh Scott, Esquire
Choate, Hall & Stewart
53 State Street
Boston, Mass. 02109-2804

Dear Mr. Scott:

This responds to your letter, dated May 3, 2002, on behalf of your client, Jeremiah T. O'Sullivan, in connection with the House Committee on Government Reform hearing in Boston on Saturday, May 11. We understand that Mr. O'Sullivan was initially invited to testify at the hearing, entitled "Investigation of Allegations of Law Enforcement Misconduct in New England" but that his testimony has now been postponed. Since his testimony may occur at a later time, however, and would pertain to Mr. O'Sullivan's performance of his official duties as an Assistant United States Attorney (AUSA), I want to provide you with the guidance that we routinely provide to former AUSAs who are invited to testify before Congress. The decision on whether to testify at a later Committee hearing belongs entirely to Mr. O'Sullivan.

If he testifies, he should, of course, fully and candidly answer all questions involving facts within his personal knowledge. Since the subject of his testimony likely will involve information that came to him as a result of his past official position with the Justice Department, he should familiarize yourself with all applicable law and rules on disclosure of such information. There are, for instance, special rules concerning grand jury matters, tax information, Title III information, classified information or other matters the disclosure of which may be governed by statute, regulation, or court rule. An extended, but not exhaustive, list of such matters may be found in U.S.A.M. 1-6.340, DOJ Organizations and Functions Manual at 25[1] and in 28 C.F.R. 16.26. He should also consider any

[1] The applicable part of this section is:

A. Disclosure would violate a statute, such as the income tax laws, 26 U.S.C. 6103 and 7213, or a rule of procedure, such as Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 6(e), pertaining to grand jury secrecy;
B. Disclosure would violate a specific regulation;
C. Disclosure would reveal classified information, unless appropriately declassified by the originating agency;
D. Disclosure would reveal a confidential source or informant, unless the investigative agency and the source or informant have no objection;
E. Disclosure would reveal investigatory records compiled for law enforcement purposes, professional or ethical issues that may arise under his applicable bar regulations and duties of professional responsibility.

We have been advised that the Committee would like to question Mr. O'Sullivan about a memorandum he authored, dated January 29, 1979, recommending the prosecution of twenty-one individuals in a horse race fixing scheme. The memorandum was subject to the President's assertion of executive privilege last December in response to the Committee's subpoena for internal prosecution memoranda regarding several matters. In accordance with agreements subsequently negotiated, the memorandum has been made available for review by Committee staff on a confidential basis. In response to the Committee's request, the Department has agreed that this memorandum may be provided to Mr. O'Sullivan to review in advance of a later hearing and he may be questioned about it, although the memorandum will not be placed in the public record or otherwise publicly disclosed and it will be returned to the Department at the close of the hearing. During such a hearing, Mr. O'Sullivan will be authorized to respond to questions from the Committee about the memorandum in accordance with this agreement. The Department will determine whether to send a representative to any future hearing at a later time.

Requests to Mr. O'Sullivan for written or electronic Department records should be referred to the Office of Legislative Affairs. If you or Mr. O'Sullivan have questions about the rules of disclosure on any particular matter or the Department's agreement with the Committee regarding the use of the 1979 memorandum, please do not hesitate to contact me at 202/514-1023.

Sincerely,

EOUSA

April 2002

Senior Loan Officer Opinion Survey on Bank Lending Practices

The April 2002 Senior Loan Officer Opinion Survey on Bank Lending Practices focused on changes in the supply of and demand for bank loans to businesses and households over the past three months. The survey also contained two sets of supplementary questions. The first set addressed changes in banks' lending policies with regard to commercial paper backup lines of credit over the past twelve months, and the second focused on the effect of problems in the market for terrorism insurance on commercial real estate lending. Loan officers representing fiftyõsix large domestic banks and twentyõone U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks participated in the

April survey.

Results of the survey indicate some further tightening of standards and terms for loans to both businesses and households. However, the number of domestic and foreign banking institutions that reported having tightened standards and terms on commercial and industrial (C&I) loans over the past three months moved down considerably from the January survey. The net fraction of domestic institutions that indicated that they had tightened standards for commercial real estate loans in the April survey also declined, though it remained relatively high. Banks continued to report a weakening of demand for C&I and commercial real estate loans, albeit at a lesser rate than in January. According to the domestic respondents, standards for residential mortgage loans were largely unchanged over the past three months, and demand for these loans was moderately stronger on net. As in January, a relatively small portion of domestic banks, on net, reported tightening standards for consumer loans. For the second consecutive survey, banks reported tightening terms on nonðcreditõcard loans to a greater extent than they have terms on credit card loans. Demand for consumer loans was roughly unchanged over the past three months.

Lending to Businesses
(Table 1, questions 1-17; Table 2, questions 1-17)

Commercial and industrial loans. Compared with the January survey, significantly smaller fractions of domestic banks and U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks reported that they had tightened standards on C&I loans. The percentage of domestic banks that reported having tightened their standards on C&I loans to large and middleõmarket firms over the past three months moved down to 25 percent from 45 percent in the previous survey; the percentage tightening standards on business loans to small firms declined even more, from more than 40 percent in January to about 15 percent in April. Similarly, the fraction of U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks that had tightened standards for customers seeking C&I loans or credit lines fell from 70 percent in January to about 40 percent in the current survey.

In April, smaller fractions of domestic banks reported tightening most of the lending terms listed in the survey for large and middleõmarket firms than in January. The largest change was in the net fraction of banks that had increased spreads of loan rates over their cost of funds, which fell from 40 percent in January to about 25 percent in the current survey. In addition, somewhat smaller net percentages of banks reported that they had tightened loan covenants and increased the cost of credit lines for these customers over the past three months. However, about 45 percent of domestic banks increased premiums charged on riskier loans to large and middleð market firms, about the same as in the January survey.

Changes in terms on C&I loans to small firms followed a similar though more pronounced pattern.

The net fraction of domestic banks that tightened covenants on loans to small firms fell from 40 percent in January to only 12 percent in the current survey; the net percentage of banks that increased spreads of loan rates over their cost of funds moved down from 37 percent to 13 percent over the same period. The net fraction of banks that reported increasing premiums charged on riskier loans to small firms over the past three months edged down from 40 percent in January to 34 percent in the current survey.

The fraction of U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks that tightened terms on C&I loans generally declined but remained elevated. The percentage of foreign institutions that raised premiums on riskier loans decreased from 75 percent in January to 52 percent in the current survey, and the fraction of foreign banks that strengthened loan covenants declined from 52 percent to 43 percent over the same period. The one exception was the percentage of foreign institutions that increased the costs of credit lines, which moved up noticeably from 35 percent in the previous survey to 57 percent in April.

A significant percentage of banks that tightened standards or terms on C&I loans over the past three months pointed to a reduced tolerance for risk as a reason for doing so and continued to voice concerns about the economic outlook. In the current survey, threeð quarters of domestic and foreign respondents cited reduced tolerance for risk as a reason for tightening their lending policies, about the same fraction as in January. About 70 percent of domestic banks also indicated that a less favorable or more uncertain economic outlook was a reason for changing their standards and terms over the past three months. While still high, this fraction represents a marked decline from the January survey in which all but one domestic bank indicated that this was at least a somewhat important reason for tightening their lending policies. Furthermore, only 10 percent of domestic respondents in the current survey noted that a less favorable or more uncertain economic outlook was a &very important8 reason, down from 40 percent in the January survey.

About oneðthird of domestic banks, on net, reported weaker demand for C&I loans from both large and small firms over the past three months, down from roughly oneð half in the January survey. Every domestic bank that experienced weaker demand reported that a decline in customers needs for bank loans to finance capital expenditures was at least a somewhat important reason for the weakness in demand, and more than oneðthird of respondents indicated that this reason was &very important.8 As in the January survey, banks also reported weaker demand for loans to finance mergers and acquisitions, inventories, and accounts receivable. Out of eight banks that reported an increase in demand for C&I loans, six of them indicated that the increase was due to a shift in borrowing from other bank or nonbank credit sources that became less attractive, likely, at least in part, a reflection of the recent pressures in the market for commercial paper. The same number of banks identified a decline in customers internally generated funds as a reason for higher C&I loan demand. The net percentage of foreign branches and agencies reporting weaker demand for C&I loans fell from nearly 50 percent in January to 14 percent in the current survey. The most frequently cited reason for weaker demand at foreign institutions was a decline in requests for merger and acquisition financing.

Commercial paper backup lines of credit. A series of special questions was aimed at changes in banks' policies with regard to commercial paper backup lines of credit over the past twelve months. Fortyõsix of the largest domestic banks and nineteen foreign institutions indicated that they provide these facilities on a regular basis.1 Domestic banks accounting for more than oneõthird of respondents' total lending facilities*defined as the sum of C&I loans and unused commitments*tightened standards on commercial paper backup lines of credit for nonfinancial firms with A1/P1 commercial paper ratings over the past year; domestic institutions accounting for about 60 percent of total lending facilities indicated doing so for firms with A2/P2 ratings. The (unweighted) fraction of foreign institutions that had tightened standards on commercial paper backup lines of credit for nonfinancial firms with an A1/P1 commercial paper rating over the past twelve months stood at 60 percent, while almost 90 percent reported doing so for lowerõrated borrowers.

Domestic banks accounting for more than 90 percent of total lending facilities indicated that they had increased fees and raised spreads associated with commercial paper backup lines of credit for commercial paper issuers with both A1/P1 and A2/P2 ratings. Virtually all of the banks pointed to heightened concerns about possible deterioration in issuers credit quality and a higher probability of lines being drawn because of less certain conditions in the commercial paper market as reasons for tightening standards and terms. Over the past twelve months, about 10 percent of domestic banks (weighted) and 10 percent of foreign institutions (unweighted), on net, reported stronger demand for commercial paper backup lines of credit from nonfinancial issuers with both A1/P1 and A2/P2 ratings.

Commercial real estate lending. The net fraction of domestic banks that reported tighter standards on commercial real estate loans over the past three months declined from 46 percent in January to 30 percent in the current survey. At branches and agencies of foreign banks, the net percentage reporting tighter standards on commercial real estate loans remained stable at about 20 percent. In the current survey, more than 30 percent of domestic respondents, on net, noted that demand for commercial real estate loans had weakened, down from 43 percent in January; among foreign institutions, 25 percent, on net, reported weaker demand for this type of loan over the past three months.

A set of special questions addressed how the lack of insurance against terrorism has affected commercial real estate lending. About 70 percent of domestic respondents indicated that less than 5 percent of the dollar volume of their commercial real estate loans outstanding*either held on their books or securitized*is backed by &high profile8 or &heavy traffic8 commercial real estate properties.2 For about oneðfifth of banks, loans financing such properties make up between 5 percent and 10 percent of their commercial real estate loan portfolio, while for the remainder, these loans account for between 10 percent and 20 percent of commercial real estate loans outstanding. At foreign institutions, loans backed by high profile properties account for somewhat larger shares of the respondents commercial real estate portfolios.

Almost three-quarters of domestic banks indicated that they require terrorism insurance on less than 10 percent of loans financing high profile or heavy traffic commercial real estate properties. Indeed, in their comments, a number of banks noted that their standard commercial real estate loan contracts*especially for smaller loans (less than $10 million)*generally do not require terrorism insurance. However, six domestic and six foreign respondents that answered these special questions reported that they require insurance against terrorism on more than 90 percent of loans financing such properties. As of the end of 2002:Q1, these six domestic banks accounted for about 8 percent of all commercial real estate loans in the United States, while the six foreign institutions accounted for less than 2 percent of all commercial real estate loans.

Domestic respondents indicated that if coverage was required and an existing borrower was unable to secure adequate insurance against terrorism for a high profile or heavy traffic commercial real estate property, their most likely response would be to ask for additional collateral and to modify the existing loan covenants to allow for partial coverage. The foreign institutions, by contrast, noted that their most likely course of action would be to increase fees or interest rates associated with the loan, and four foreign respondents indicated that they would be very likely to call the loan or refuse to roll it over when it comes due.

Among domestic banks that received applications for loans to finance high profile commercial real estate properties since the events of September 11, 90 percent indicated that their rejection rate on these loan applications has stayed about the same. Sixty percent of U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks that received applications for loans to finance these types of properties reported their rejection rate as essentially unchanged. Almost 80 percent of domestic banks and more than 70 percent of foreign institutions indicated that they experienced little or no change in demand for loans to finance high profile and heavy traffic properties because potential borrowers were unable to secure affordable insurance against acts of terrorism. Seven domestic banks reported moderately weaker demand and four domestic and three foreign institutions experienced substantially weaker demand for loans to finance such properties because of issues related to terrorism insurance.

Lending to Households
(Table 1, questions 18-25)

Domestic banks credit standards for approving residential mortgage loans were largely unchanged over the past three months, with only one bank reporting that it had tightened lending standards somewhat, the same as in the January survey. On net, about 6 percent of domestic respondents reported increased demand for residential mortgages, down from 30 percent in January.

In the current survey, less than 10 percent of banks indicated that they had tightened standards on credit card loans over the past three months, a somewhat smaller percentage than in January; terms and conditions on existing credit card accounts were largely unchanged.
For other types of consumer loans, oneõfifth of banks reported that they had tightened standards over the past three months, about the same percentage as in the January survey. Almost oneõ quarter of domestic banks raised the minimum required credit score on consumer loans other than credit card loans, and 15 percent reduced the number of exceptions granted to customers not meeting creditõscoring thresholds. On net, banks reported demand for consumer loans as about unchanged over the past three months.

1. To account for the concentration of commercial paper backup lines of credit among the largestinstitutions, responses to this set of questions for domestic banks were weighted by the sum of C&I loans and unused commitments obtained from the 2001:Q4 Call Report. These weights are intended to proxy for banks participation in this line of business. Data on unused loan commitments are unavailable for U.S. branches and agencies of foreign banks.

2. For the purposes of the survey, high profile or heavy traffic commercial real estate properties were defined as landmark buildings and commercial properties in their vicinity, stadiums and other sports/entertainment venues, and large shopping malls.

Draft –5/8/02 3:30 PM

Thank you Mr. Chairman, for the opportunity to provide this Subcommittee with general background on the requirements for tax exemption, particularly as they relate to the prohibition on political activities. I will also discuss how these rules apply to churches, the Internal Revenue Service's experience with these issues, and the numerous challenges we confront in administering this law.

General Requirements for Tax Exemption

Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code provides for the exemption from federal income taxation of organizations organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, educational, and certain other purposes. Section 501(c)(3) imposes a number of conditions to exempt status:

> No part of the organization's net earnings may inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.
>
> No substantial part of the organization's activities may be attempts to influence legislation (lobbying restriction).
> The organization may not intervene in any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office (political campaign prohibition).

Section 501(c)(3) does not specifically mention churches. They qualify as entities organized and operated for religious purposes. Thus, the above-referenced conditions apply to churches as well as all other section 501(c)(3) entities. In addition, there are special rules applicable to churches that I will outline in my testimony.

Restriction on lobbying

One condition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) is that no substantial part of an organization's activities can be carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting to influence legislation (commonly known as lobbying). Lobbying includes direct communications to members of a legislature, indirect communications through the electorate or general public ("grass roots" lobbying), and advocating adoption or rejection of legislation on an issue, even if specific legislation is not pending. Whether a communication on an issue constitutes lobbying depends on the facts and circumstances of the communication.

Section 501(c)(3) restricts lobbying; it does not prohibit it. Churches are subject to the restriction, but unlike other section 501(c)(3) organizations, are not eligible to file the election provided under section 501(h) of the Code to have lobbying measured by expenditures. Although the "no substantial part" test is less precise – courts have generally rejected using a percentage test as the sole test of whether the activity is a substantial part of an organization's activities –it is fair to say that the IRS has not identified situations in which we received information showing, or even suggesting, that a church was engaged in lobbying as a substantial part of its activities.

Prohibition on Political Campaign Intervention

~~u~~Section 501(c)(3) does not prohibit all activity that might be described as "political" within the common meaning of that term. Rather, it prohibits an organization from directly or indirectly participating in, or intervening in, any political campaign on behalf of (or in opposition to) any candidate for elective public office. Contributions to political campaign funds or public statements of position (verbal or written) made by or on behalf of the organization in favor of or in opposition to any candidate for public office violate the prohibition against political campaign intervention.

Formatted

The section 501(c)(3) limit on political campaign intervention is absolute. Violation of this prohibition may result in denial or revocation of tax-exempt status and the imposition of certain excise taxes.

REV_00145244

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(c)(3)(iii) of the Income Tax Regulations refines the prohibition on campaign intervention by defining "candidate for public office" as an "individual who offers himself or herself, or is proposed by others, as a contestant for elective public office". The regulation also provides that prohibited campaign intervention includes, but is not limited to, publishing or distributing written or printed statements or making oral statements on behalf of or in opposition to such a candidate. Since a candidate must be a contestant for elective public office, section 501(c)(3) only prohibits organizations from participating or intervening in election campaigns only.

It has been argued that the prohibition on campaign intervention does not apply to churches. Courts have considered and rejected this argument. In Branch Ministries, Inc. v. Rossotti, 211 F.3d 137 (D.C. Cir. 2000), aff'g 40 F. Supp. 15 (D.D.C. 1999), the Court of Appeals upheld the IRS's revocation of the section 501(c)(3) exempt status of the Church at Pierce Creek. The District Court had granted summary judgment to the IRS on its claim the organization violated the statutory prohibition on political campaign intervention when it placed full-page advertisements in two newspapers. The content of the advertisement was in opposition to a candidate. The Court of Appeals rejected the church's claims that the revocation violated the church's right to free exercise of religion under the Constitution and the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, and that it was the victim of selective prosecution.

Rules Relating to Specific Issues in the Area of Political Intervention in Campaigns

~~Whether a particular~~ Certain activities~~y~~, ~~action,~~ or expenditures may or may not constitute campaign intervention ~~is considered~~.s For example, certain voter education activities (including the presentation of public forums and the publication of voter education guides) conducted in a non-partisan manner ~~may~~ do not constitute prohibited political campaign activity. ~~-~~On the other hand, voter education activities that show a bias for one candidate over another, which oppose a candidate in some manner, or have the effect of favoring a candidate or slate of candidates, will constitute prohibited participation or intervention. Two examples are described below in order to better explain the rules in this area and our administration.

REV_00145245

Voter guides

Like other 501(c)(3) organizations, some churches undertake voter education activities by publishing voter guides. Voter guides, in general, provide information on how candidates stand on various issues. These guides may be distributed with the stated purpose of educating voters. A careful review of the following may help determine whether or not a church's publication or distribution of voter guides constitutes prohibited political campaign activity: ~~Publication of Legislators' Voter Records~~

~~Like any other 501(c)(3) organization, a number of churches and religious organizations publish or distribute voting records of incumbent legislators.~~

Whether the guide provides information with respect to all candidates for an office;

Whether the guide contains editorial opinion or remarks, or otherwise indicates approval or disapproval of candidate or their records;

Whether the guide is disseminated in close proximity to an election;

Whether the guide covers a wide variety of issues; and

For a candidate questionnaire, whether the organization asks the same neutral questions of all candidates, or indicates a bias toward the organization's preferred responses.

"Get out the vote" activities
